$19,000,000 "CO-OP" SEIZED

PARKER FIRMS TAKEN BY U. S. COURT ORDER

Seek $2,000,000 Bonds in Chest.

Obeying a federal order, receivers yesterday seized all books, records, and available assets of Harrison Parker's $19,000,000 coöperative enterprises. The order was signed by Judge Evans in the United States Circuit court.

All the subsidiaries, finance companies, grocery stores, and allied concerns of every sort were ordered taken over. The seizure followed testimony that Mr. Parker had taken a steel chest containing more than $2,000,000 in Liberty bonds from the company's office in Ogden avenue without giving a receipt. This was stoutly denied by Parker.

In a trial balance statement of the date of Aug. 31, 1921, given by Parker, trustee of the society, to postoffice inspectors who have been investigating charges of fraud against the society, the assets and liabilities were listed in excess of $19,000,000.

Claim $7,000,000 Assets.

In hearings before Judge Evans, counsel for the society have declared that the assets of the society are in excess of $7,000,000 and the liabilities but little over $2,000,000. This, however, does not take into account the $13,000,000 worth of "beneficial interest certificates" sold by the society, the holders of which, according to Judge Evans' ruling, are on a par with other creditors of the organization.

The hearing yesterday was before Master in Chancery C. B. Morrison. After the taking of testimony relating to the alleged removal of funds the sweeping receivership order was signed by Judge Evans.

Other Seizures Expected.

The offices of the society were entered by F. E. Hummell of the Central Trust company shortly after noon. Two hours later the receiver walked into the offices of the Great Western Securities company, the selling agent of the coöperative's securities, on the third floor of the People's Life building, and announced that he had taken over that concern as well.

Seizure of the Rochdale Wholesale company, the Allied Food company, and the 181 grocery stores which the society claims to be operating is to follow.

The court, in its order, found that it was "absolutely necessary for the preservation of the estate of the alleged bankrupts" to appoint a receiver. The receiver was "directed immediately to take possession" of all the "assets, rights, and property of every kind, character, and disposition" of the society "and their subsidiary and affiliated companies"; to "employ or discharge such of its officers, attorneys, managers, superintendents, agents, or employés" as in the opinion of the receiver was deemed proper.

To Handle All Legal Affairs.

The receiver was further authorized to handle all further legal affairs of the society. "All persons, firms, and corporations having in their possession" any of the "property and assets" of the society were "required and commanded" to turn that property over to the receiver. This, the order said, included all books of record, all documents, correspondence, accounts, and securities.

Harrison Parker, N. A. Hawkenson, John Coe, Edith S. Parker, Bohr Bros., L. E. Wedertz, J. T. Merry, Emil Knapp, Gustave Kopp, C. C. Higgins, C. A. Honecker, D. W. Millan, Richard H. Loper, the Central Development company, and numerous others interested in the society and its subsidiaries were expressly enjoined from interfering in any way with the activities of the receiver.

Assets Ordered Turned Over.

The receiver was specifically ordered to take possession of, and the officers of and any other members interested in the society were specifically ordered to deliver to the receiver, the following things:

All cash in banks to the credit of the society, the Coöperators of America, or any of its affiliated or allied companies.

All property of any description contained in safe deposit vaults.

All shares of stock held by the society in the Rochdale Wholesale company (the entire capital stock issue), the Great Western Securities company, the Troy Milk Products company, the Amboy Products company, the Randolph Building corporation, the Rochdale Insurance company, the Muskegon Trust company, the Allied Food Products company, the City State Bank of Chicago, the Midwest Advertising company and any others, including the

1871 REPORTER WRITES STORY OF GREAT FIRE

He "Covered" Blaze as Part of His Job.

This is the fiftieth anniversary of the great Chicago fire, which started Oct. 8, 1871, and raged furiously for nearly twenty-four hours. Michael Ahern, the only living newspaper man who "covered the story," celebrated by writing the following reminiscences for The Tribune:

BY MICHAEL AHERN.

Being one of the three night police reporters who helped "cover" the great Chicago fire, these reminiscences on the fiftieth anniversary may interest the older as well as the new residents of the city.

MICHAEL AHERN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Johnny English was THE TRIBUNE police and fire reporter, and Jim Haynie performed the same duties for the Times. I was out for the Republican. Both of my confreres are dead. I believe I am the only survivor of the Chicago daily press who took part in reporting the greatest fire story in modern history.

I will preface my narrative with a brief reference to the Saturday night fire, Oct. 7, which, it might be said, was a prelude to the greater conflagration.

The fire of Saturday night started at 10:30 o'clock in the planing mill of Lull & Holmes on Canal street near Adams. It wiped out everything from Clinton street to the river and from Adams street to Van Buren street.

Firemen Worn Out.

The loss was about $500,000. Every piece of fire fighting apparatus in the department was pressed into service, and all that kept the entire west side from burning up was the strenuous work of the fire brigade. Some companies did not return to their engine houses until late Sunday afternoon. The department was exhausted from its long, hard battle and some engines were disabled.

This was the condition of things when the alarm was given for the fire of Sunday night, Oct. 8. I had written, or rather, assisted in the writing of the Saturday night fire and was worn out when I got home about noon. In the evening I went to call on friends at 12th and Waller streets, after I had looked in at the old 12th street station to see if there was anything on the blotter.

Between 9:30 and 10 o'clock my attention was called to a red glow in the sky east of Halsted street and north of 12th. I went there and found several cottages and sheds burning in the vicinity of De Koven and Jefferson streets. The first fireman I saw was [illegible] Musham, who afterward became chief of the department. At that time he was foreman of No. 6, whose engine was the "Little Giant."

First Company at Blaze.

Musham's company was the first to arrive at the fire and the first to throw a stream. Jack Campion, who became chief in later years, was pipeman on No. 6. He and Musham were holding the nozzle and directing the stream on the fire when I arrived. Thinking it would be only a small fire compared with the previous night's fire, I didn't think it worth while taking any notes. Musham had told me the fire started in the cow barn of Patrick O'Leary, who resided at [illegible] De Koven street. Big Jim O'Leary of the stockyards is a son of the family.

It will be necessary for me to digress that I may relate what occurred before the "Little Giant" reached the fire. In those days there were towers on the engine houses, and the firemen took turns at watching for a blaze. There also was a watchman in the cupola of the courthouse. From this tower he scanned the city for fires. Matt Schaeffer was on duty in the courthouse tower. Bill Brown was night operator in the fire alarm. Several minutes before Brown got the word from Schaeffer that there was a fire, Brown himself discerned a glow in the southwest part of the city, but thought it was from the ruins of Saturday night.

Mistakes Location of Fire.

The fire had been burning 20 minutes or half an hour before Schaeffer noticed it. There was a haze in the sky from the fire of the previous night, and Schaeffer's vision was obscured. He judged the blaze was

ROYALTY SENDS RICH GIFTS TO LEEDS' BRIDE

"Tinplate" Heir Weds Princess Xenia.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—William B. Leeds Jr., son of Princess Anastasia of Greece and the late William B. Leeds, the "tinplate king," of Richmond, Ind., and Princess Xenia, niece of King Constantine of Greece, were married by civil ceremony here at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

While the ceremony was attended only by immediate relatives, all the royalty of Europe was interested. This was evidenced by the rich presents sent to the bride. In fact, it was announced tonight all the gifts were from royalty except two, which came from Americans.

English King Heads List.

King George and Queen Mary of England head the list with a diamond and ruby pendant with a crown on which are the initials "G. M." Queen Mother Alexandra of England gave an amethyst and diamond bracelet and Princess Mary of England gave a fan. Others who gave presents and their gifts follow:

The crown prince and Princess of Roumania, a sapphire ring; Prince and Princess Christopher, a diamond and ruby tiara; Prince and Princess George of Greece, a gold pendant watch set in sapphires; Queen Mother Olga of Greece, a diamond leaf brooch with a large ruby; Grand Duchess Anastasia of Russia, a blue enameled cross with pearls; Warner Leeds and Mrs. Leeds of New York, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom, a diamond and sapphire bracelet; Henderson Green of New York, a gold bag studded with sapphires and diamonds.

Daughter of Russian Duke.

The Princess Xenia is the second daughter of Grand Duke Mikhailovitch of Russia, who married the Princess Marie Georgievna of Greece, a sister of King Constantine. Both Leeds and the princess are 19 years of age.

The wedding today was the French civil ceremony. Tomorrow two more ceremonies will occur, the first at the American Church of the Holy Trinity here and the third at the Russian church, the last being conducted with the picturesque pomp of the historic Russian church.

The couple will have no attendants at the religious ceremonies. They will leave for London immediately and will spend part of their honeymoon on a houseboat which is now in England. They plan to tour the canals of England and France and then to travel for two or three years. Princess Anastasia's secretary said Mr. Leeds had been granted an allowance by his mother upon which to live pending his coming of age. She refused to divulge the amount, but explained that it was "sufficient for a gentleman to live on."

Prince Witness for Leeds.

Today's ceremony was conducted with the utmost simplicity, only the close relatives of the young couple attending. The mayor of the first district performed the ceremony in his office in less than five minutes. The ceremony was interrupted several times by the loud clicking of cameras, photographers having succeeded in reaching the platform on which the mayor was seated.

The princess was attended by her cousin, Grand Duke Dimitri Pavlovitch of Russia, who also acted as a witness for her. Prince Christopher of Greece was a witness for Leeds.

Xenia was accompanied by her mother and sister, the Princess Nina and Princess Marie of Greece. She wore a yellow crepe dress with a cape of the same material, a brown toque with a large feather of a similar shade, and shoes and stockings of the same color.

Pose for the Movies.

Mr. Leeds came with his mother, who was dressed entirely in gray. After the ceremony the party walked into the courtyard, where it posed for motion picture men. Mr. Leeds and his bride were temporarily "lost" in the crowd of several thousand men and women who had gathered.

MAN IN MOON IS A TRUCK GARDENER

Vegetables Grow There, Prof. Pickering Says.

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The unwarranted assumption that the moon is dead and that nothing can live on it has caused astronomers to fail to study it, according to Prof. William H. Pickering of Harvard, one of the greatest astronomers, who, in a report on two years' observation of the moon, asserts that the existence of life is more easily traceable on the moon than on Mars.

Crops grow on the moon at the rate of two a day, the day there being as long as two of our weeks. They are believed to grow only in the craters, with which the face of the moon is extensively pitted and which are believed to contain water and possibly a supply of heat.

Believes He Sees Steam.

Prof. Pickering has discovered steam issuing from some of the supposedly dead craters. The assumption has been that, because the moon had no atmosphere and because its temperature was presumably hundreds of degrees below zero, no life could exist there.

In his report Prof. Pickering emphasized the fact that Mars is 200 times as far from the earth as the moon, so that, other things being equal, 200 times as much detail can be seen on the moon as on Mars. He also believes life exists on Mars.

The Mushroom Growth.

When the moon emerges from its two weeks of darkness the sun's light quickly warms up the fields in the craters, some of which are many miles across, and starts a mushroomlike growth of life there, according to the Pickering theory. This flourishes only during the long moon days.

Dr. Pickering is now in Europe. His colleague, Prof. S. I. Bailey of Harvard, said tonight over the telephone:

"Prof. Pickering has not as yet been able to convince many astronomers that he is right. He has made a prolonged study of the subject with a telescope at Jamaica. No scientific man has advanced the theory that there is intelligent life on the moon. If there is life, it is believed to be a low form."

LENIN'S BANK TO HAVE CAPITAL OF THREE TRILLION

MOSCOW, Oct. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Russian soviet council of commissars, of which Premier Lenin is president, has decided to create a state bank which will be authorized to make loans, to afford credit facilities to develop industries, agriculture and trade and also to control circulation and exchange.

The bank will be capitalized at three trillion rubles, or 70,000,000 gold rubles.

A decree soon will be published giving the full details and explaining that fear no longer exists that the bank will be controlled by the bourgeoisie, since there are no big industrialists and since the government is running all the big plants.

Chief of Police Fitzmorris last night wired Capt. Naughton to take extraordinary precautions that Stepina may not escape on the way back to the penitentiary.

31 RUM RAIDS IN SHADOW OF U. S. CAPITOL

Giant Ring Runs in Exclusive Section.

[By a Staff Correspondent.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—One of the most successful and efficiently managed bootleg gangs in the country, which has been operating almost under the eaves of the nation's capitol, was run to earth today when an army of internal revenue officers and Washington police executed thirty-one raids in the city and its environs, making nearly two score arrests, confiscating many gallons of liquor, and obtaining possession of valuable papers disclosing the intricate workings of a systematic bootlegging organization with its tentacles extending to Philadelphia, Atlantic City, New York, and other eastern cities.

Result of Long Inquiry.

The raids culminated an investigation which has lasted for weeks, and, according to revenue officers, will extend in its ramifications to the other eastern cities to which the local leaders were connected by a well regulated transportation system running day and night.

The headquarters of the ring, according to the police, was located in the fashionable section of the city, where the raiders found one of the most complete offices for directing the operations of the gang. The office was completely furnished with desks, typewriters, adding machines, and a bookkeeping system for keeping track of the transactions.

Nutt, Haynes with Raiders.

Revenue officers from all parts of the country were assembled here yesterday, and when an agent who held the confidences of the gang reported by long distance telephone this morning the raiders were sent out. Prohibition Commissioner Haynes and Acting Chief General Prohibition Agent L. G. Nutt, in charge of the operatives, took general charge of the work.

Police and revenue officers explained that the leaders kept a transportation system of automobiles constantly moving into and out of the district, bringing in large quantities of alcohol daily. This was taken to the headquarters, where it was made into "liquor" with the necessary coloring and flavoring. It was then turned over to the local delivery system, by which it was distributed to "customers" daily. The raids this morning covered only one route of the local gang.

Hope to Dry Up New York.

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—By the appointment of a nonresident, E. C. Yellowley, as permanent federal prohibition director for New York state, Prohibition Commissioner Haynes today began plans to make New York city the driest spot in the country. Expert sleuths will be put to work here to head off the bootleggers. The hotels will be given special consideration.

H. P. Davison to Rest for Year on Georgia Estate

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Henry P. Davison, called by some economists the "greatest banking genius" in the country, will be definitely out of all financial and social activity for a year, it was announced today at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Davison will go with his family to his plantation at Thomasville, Ga., as soon as his health permits. He was forced to give up active direction in Morgan & Co. recently to have an operation for tumor of the brain.

The temporary retirement of Mr. and Mrs. Davison from New York society leaves a niche to be filled, from all present indications, by Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field of Chicago.

The Davison box at the Metropolitan opera will be occupied this season by the Marshall Fields, who also will occupy the Davison mansion at 690 Park avenue.

Anthrax in New Shaving Brush Kills

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Michael F. Farley, former member of of congress from the Fourteenth New York district, died in Bellevue hospital today of anthrax, believed to have been caused by infection from a shaving brush. Mr. Farley died exactly six hours and thirty-five minutes after he had walked into the hospital to find out what was the matter with him. Physicians said he had the malady in a singularly malignant form.

According to physicians, Mr. Farley must have contracted the disease from an infected brush while shaving himself last Tuesday or Wednesday. He said it was a new brush.

Appearance of a pimple on his chin Thursday was the first symptom. Saturday he could hardly walk from the pain and his face was badly swollen.

Soon Loses Consciousness.

At Bellevue hospital Dr. Munday's diagnosis of anthrax was verified by Drs. Pears and Russell, who attended the patient. When Mr. Farley arrived he walked from his taxi to the contagious ward after undergoing diagnosis and was able to talk about his case for a while. So malignant was the disease, however, that he soon lost consciousness and was too weak to respond to the usual anti-anthrax treatment. This consists of injections of a serum discovered by Dr. Douglas Symers, chief of the Bellevue pathological service and an expert on anthrax.

Two Years in Congress.

Mr. Farley was 56 years old. After receiving a common school education he went into the liquor business. He was at one time president of the Wine and Liquor Dealers' Association of New York County.

In his term as a congressman, from 1914 to 1916, he opposed the ship purchase bill and preparedness legislation and voted for the McLemore resolution warning Americans off belligerent merchant ships. In other respects he supported the administration. He was defeated for reëlection.

Besides his widow, he is survived by a brother, John Farley, and a sister, Mrs. Raby of Mamaroneck.

LINDSEY FREES 'POOR WHILE RICH VIOLATE LAWS'

Denver, Colo., Oct. 8.—On the ground that "it would be unjust to punish a lesser offender against the bootleg laws while wealthy social leaders of Capitol hill were allowed to have their wine cellars without fear of molestation," Judge Ben B. Lindsey of the Juvenile court today freed Chester Lasater and Clete Hinton, accused of giving young girls liquor to drink. In a statement read in open court, Judge Lindsey charged that "a conspiracy exists among the rich to have the laws enforced only against the poor."

Irish Lord, Captive of Sinn Fein, Gets $308,000

DUBLIN, Oct. 8.—Seventy year old Lord Bandon was awarded £77,000 [roughly $300,000] damages at the Bandon quarter sessions today for the destruction of Bernard Castle and personal sufferings and injuries during the three weeks that he was held a captive by Irish republicans after the destruction of his castle. It was stated that Lord Bandon has been under medical treatment ever since his captivity by the Sinn Fein and he is now a broken down man.

All notes receivable of the society.

All Liberty bonds in the possession of the society, or the officials of the society, or affiliated companies.

All rents due the society from its property.

All the property and assets of every kind, character, and description owned by the society or in the possession of the society, or companies affiliated with it or subsidiary to it, at the People's Life building, Randolph and Wells street, and other plants and stores.

Order Officers to Testify.

In addition, all the officers and employés of the society and its affiliated companies were ordered to appear before Referee in Bankruptcy Frank L. Weam to give testimony concerning the affairs of the society and its affiliated concerns.

The order was given by Judge Evans to his clerk on the eve of his departure for Baraboo, Wis., where he will remain until next Wednesday. Counsel for Harrison Parker, one of the trustees of the society, are expected to file a motion for dismissal of the receivership on the resumption of the hearings before Judge Evans on his return to the bench Wednesday.

Meanwhile hearings in the bankruptcy suit are being continued before Master in Chancery Morrison. Yesterday Gustave Kopp, president of the Great Western Securities company, the selling agent of the coöperative "certificates," occupied the stand for the greater part of the session.

Mr. Kopp, who owns one share of the Great Western stock—the balance being held by Parker's wife and C. C. Higgins, supposed retired capitalist of New York City—testified that all the Liberty bonds which were taken in by the society in payment for their certificates had been placed in a "big steel chest" in the offices of the society, which then were on Ogden avenue.

Says Parker Took Bonds.

He said that prior to Jan. 1 the receipt of these bonds had averaged more than $200,000 a month. On Jan. 1 it was estimated more than $1,000,000 worth of the bonds were in the box. Since Jan. 1 the books of the company, according to the testimony, showed that more than $1,282,000 worth of bonds had been received and stored in the chest.

Some months ago, according to Kopp, Harrison Parker, one of the trustees of the society, came to him and asked for the bonds.

"I turned the chest over to him and he took it from the offices," Kopp said.

"Do you know exactly how many bonds were in the chest?" he was asked by Attorney Lewis E. Pennish of the firm of Pennish & Rashbaum, conducting the questioning.

"No—but the box was full," was the answer.

"Did you get a receipt?"

"No—Mr. Parker told me he'd take care of them."

"You let Parker have more than $2,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds without a receipt?"

"Mr. Parker was my employer—of course."

Told Bonds Were Safe.

About a month ago, after the bankruptcy proceedings had started, Kopp said, he went to Parker and asked about the bonds.

"They're going to put me on the witness stand and make me tell what became of them—what shall I say?" he told the master.

"Parker told me I needn't worry, that he had the bonds and that they were in a safe place."

In previous testimony from Mr. Parker and other officers of the society before the master in chancery it was declared that the officials did not at this time know the location of the Liberty bonds referred to. Investigation of the company's books and records by the master so far has failed to reveal their location. The Central Trust company, as receiver for the society, was specifically ordered by Judge Evans in yesterday's order to find and seize the bonds.

It is expected that Parker will be recalled to the witness stand in tomorrow's hearing and questioned as to the disposition of the securities.

With the seizure of the society's offices and the offices of the Great Western company Parker's control of the destinies of the $19,000,000 organization is at least temporarily ended, according to Attorney Pennish. A new audit of the books and records of the organization is to be begun immediately.

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—Two movements to restore monarchial governments in parts of the central empire are gaining such headway that the German government officially has taken cognizance of one and precautionary measures against the other.

Acting in unison with the Bavarian government, steps have been taken to prevent violence or revolutionary disorders in atempts of the Bavarian monarchists and Austrian Tyrol leaders to spring a coup d'état for the purpose of proclaiming Tyrol under Wittlesbach rule.

In the meanwhile the movement against Austria in West Hungary is growing. Approximately 40,000 troops are now reported to have concentrated and a proclamation from former Emperor Karl is awaited. Furthermore, it is believed in Berlin that these movements, if successful, will unite with the Bavarian monarchists in another attempt to establish a kindom embracing Bavaria, Austria, and a part or all of Hungary.

Monarchists Deal with Tyrol.

The Bavarian-Tyrolean plans are developing under a cloak of a democratic movement to unite this part of Austria to the German republic by plebiscite or other sanction of the league of nations. Former Premier von Kahr and Police President Poehner of Bavaria, both of whom lost posts following the monarchist agents' assassination of Mathias Erzberger in a plot hatched in Munich, are reported to be dealing with the Tyrolean monarchists, while numerous officers and leaders of the Kapp revolution, including the Ehrhardt brigadiers, are preparing for a new adventure.

The nervousness concerning the West Hungarian situation is now felt in Germany. Kapp officers have joined the Hungarian insurrectos, and the troops under German royalist and Hungarian officers exceed 40,000. These troops are pledged to restore the Hapsburg dynasty.

Meanwhile Bavaria Drinks.

The Austrian government, which is powerless to regain the territory assigned to it by the league of nations, has evidence that German monarchists are supporting this army.

While the Bavarian monarchists continue intriguing, the Bavarian democratic people are devoting their energies to setting a new world's record in beer drinking in the world famed October festival, when the new winter brew of 13 per cent beer appears.

NEW YORK HAS FIRST SNOW OF "WINTER OF 1921"

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The first snow of the season in New York City—a mere trace, fell at 1 o'clock this afternoon. But it brought some shivers to those who have not their winter's supply of coal.

Frosts Are Widespread.

Reports from Omaha today told of a killing frost in Nebraska Friday night. At Ironwood, Mich., the second snow of the season fell yesterday morning, and Wausau, Wis., also had snow. St. Louis had the earliest frost in more than twenty years.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 8.

For congress to pass the Borah bill exempting American coastwise ships from payment of Panama canal tolls would constitute an act of bad faith comparable to Germany's ruthless violation of Belgian neutrality in 1914, Senator McCumber told the senate today. The senate will vote on the bill Monday.

John H. Kirby, president of the National Lumber Manufacturers' association and a member of President Harding's unemployment conference, declared today that any attempt of the federal government to regulate labor and employment conditions would be a violation of the constitution and a menace to the liberty of the citizen.

Revenue agents and capital police today in a series of raids uncovered headquarters of a gigantic bootlegging ring operating in eastern cities, making thirty-one arrests and capturing records and papers which it is expected will lead to further arrests in Philadelphia, Atlantic City, New York, and other cities.

Senator Kenyon today introduced two bills hitting at the coal industry, one to impose heavy penalties on coal profiteering and another revising the original Calder bill which would give the President power to sell coal and fix prices during emergencies.

Railroad executives continued their conference here today on the railroad situation, discussing it with the President and Senator Cummins, chairman of the interstate commerce commission. They have been given to understand here that rate reduction is imperative.

CARPENTERS PAT ON STAND FOR PRESENT WAGES

Members of the Carpenters' District council last night ratified their recent decision to stand pat for $1.25 an hour, their present wage. At the same time they determined not to enter into any negotiations with other unions until the present labor situation has been clarified.

One attempt to effect a uniform wage scale was made last week, according to Dan Galvin, secretary and treasurer of the carpenters. That was on Thursday, when William Hutchinson, their international president, met representatives of the roofers, sheet metal workers, plumbers, lathers, plasterers, and gas fitters—all organizations which have refused to abide by the Landis decision.

At this conference it was suggested that committees from these unions bring in recommendations for a uniform wage scale to the Friday night meeting of the Building Trades council. They failed to act, however.

Miss Margaret Jeffers of the House of Providence convent, 1121 Orleans street, is seeking a woman who used her name and references to obtain a position as maid and then disappeared with $12,000 in loot. And when she finds her—well, her fists double when she talks.

Two weeks ago the woman appeared at the home of Mrs. Adolf Schmidt, 6333 Sheridan road, and applied for a position. She gave Miss Jeffers' name and referred Mrs. Schmidt to a former employer of Miss Jeffers. She was employed and almost immediately left with all the jewelry, silver, and clothing she could carry.

SINN FEIN PEACE ENVOYS GET WILD LONDON WELCOME

Crowd Waves Flags of the "Irish Republic."

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The London Irish gave the Dail Eireann delegates an enthusiastic reception when they arrived at Euston station this evening. Long before the Irish mail train was due they had crowded the platforms up to the barriers and all approaches to the station.

Awaiting the train were a delegation from the Irish Self-Determination league, the Gaelic league, and other Irish societies headed by Art O'Brien. Members of the London branch of the Irish republican army assisted the police in keeping the spectators admitted to the arrival platform in order.

Large banners of Sinn Fein colors were displayed, and a bagpipe band played merrily as the train came in.

Griffith Heads Delegates.

The Sinn Fein party consisted of Arthur Griffith, minister of foreign affairs; R. C. Barton, minister of economies; Gavan Duffy, Sinn Fein representative at Rome, and Commandant B. J. Duggan, with their secretaries, press representatives, and typists, fifteen in all. Michael Collins, commander of the Irish republican army and one of the delegates, was detained by private affairs and will arrive on Monday. Four or five natives of India also traveled with them.

As soon as the train drew in there was a wild burst of cheering, and the crowd surged toward the door of the delegates' carriage. O'Brien and other leaders of the Irish welcomed them, and then, after a short delay, allowed the other passengers to depart.

The Sinn Fein delegates went to their automobiles. As the motors passed slowly through a crowd of about 10,000 people there was wild enthusiasm.

More Bands Welcome Envoys.

A man waving a large Sinn Fein flag climbed to the top of the leading car and swarms of Irishmen clambered on the running boards of the motors and rode along with them. Bands stationed at intervals played Irish tunes and men and women cheered themselves hoarse.

For about half a mile beyond the station gates people were standing on the sidewalk to see the little procession pass, but after that it ran through the ordinary throng of London's streets without exciting a remark.

The crowd at the station formed a procession in the delegates' wake and marched off, headed by many bands, but it could not keep up with the automobiles and did not attempt to follow far. The delegates went straight to a furnished house hired for them at 22 Hans place in the heart of Belgravia, which will be their headquarters.

BEER, NOT MILK, CAUSED CHICAGO FIRE, NEW STORY

Alibi for O'Leary Cow Out at Last.

Instead of the immortal hoof of Mrs. O'Leary's cow, a Sunday afternoon bacchanale was to blame for the Chicago fire of 1871, according to interesting new evidence reported last night by Miss Caroline M. McIlvaine, secretary of the Chicago Historical society. J. M. Pyott of 217 North Waller avenue, of Holmes, Pyott & company, informed Miss McIlvaine that his mother-in-law, Mrs. Anton Axsmith, who was an eyewitness of the conflagration's beginning, refuted the traditional legend about the lantern-kicking cow.

Alibis for the Cow.

"No, it wasn't the cow's fault," said Mrs. Axsmith at her home at 1902 South Ashland avenue last night. "Why, the fire broke through the barn roof at 9:30 that terrible Sunday night, and Mrs. O'Leary had milked the cows at 8 o'clock.

"My husband and I—we were newlyweds—were visiting with some friends, Mr. and Mrs. John Kokes, at 140 West Taylor street, that Sunday. The Kokes' home was almost opposite Mrs. O'Leary's place, 137 North De Koven street. We sat under the trees in the back yard.

"Across the alley we saw six men who were sitting in the shade behind the O'Leary house. They were drinking beer, smoking, and laughing. A pretty jolly bunch, I guess.

"'O dear,' whispered Mrs. Kokes to me, 'isn't that party noisy. If something doesn't happen before night I don't know what!'

Then Came the Fire.

"And something did! That evening, just as my husband and I were setting out for home near by, we saw the flames. They were gushing and fuming from the hayloft of the O'Leary shed. We ran back. A south wind swept the fire across the alley to a barn storing paint on the Kokes property. Later the wind shifted to the west and the flames went rioting across the city.

"We remembered that some of the men in that drinking party had gone into the barn, clambered into the hayloft, and dropped asleep. They had been smoking pipes and probably one of these, slipping into the hay, was the real cause of the start of the disaster."

Next morning, while the fire roared and Chicago was a bedlam of terror stricken refugees, five dead cows, but no human bodies, were found in the embers of what had been Mrs. O'Leary's barn, according to Mrs. Axsmith.

Tribune Comes Out Anyway.

George Herbert Jones, who lives at the Ambassador hotel, has given to Miss McIlvaine what is said to be the only surviving copy of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE printed on the night the fire broke out. It was saved by his father-in-law, the late Prof. Elias Colbert.

"While the flames raged all around, Joseph Medill, the editor, insisted that the paper must come out," said Miss McIlvaine. "Prof. Colbert, on the roof with a twelve-foot telescope, was reporting the progress of the fire. At last it became too hot. Everybody was forced to flee. As Prof. Colbert rushed through the press room he found it deserted except for the chapel cat. He grabbed the cat and a TRIBUNE of Oct. 9, 1871, and ran for his life."

FIRE INSURANCE COMPANIES LOSE MISSISSIPPI SUIT

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 8.—The state of Mississippi won a complete victory over the 139 fire insurance companies, defendants in an anti-trust suit, in a decision today by Chancellor Stricker, who ruled that the state inspection and advisory rating bureau was merely the old Southeastern Tariff association in disguise, as claimed by the state authorities.

The association was barred from doing business in the state fifteen years ago.

Although penalties aggregating nearly $13,000,000 were assessed against the defendant companies, the chancellor imposed only the minimum penalty of $200 a day provided by the statute.

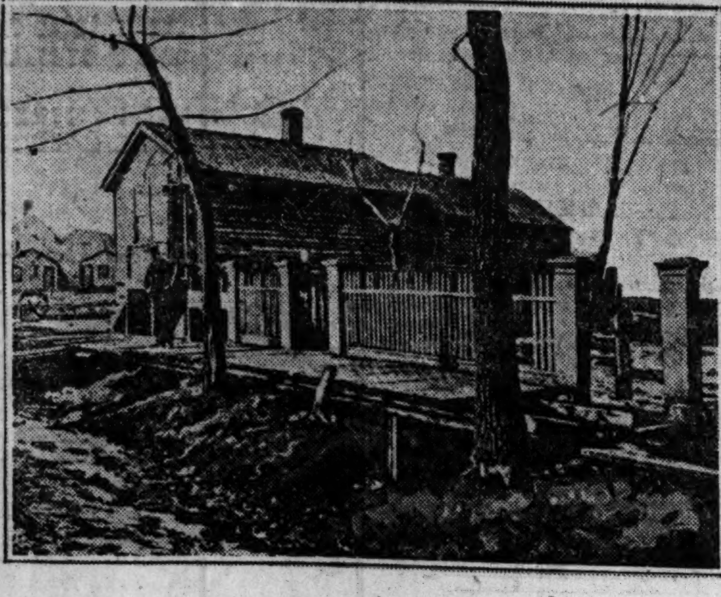
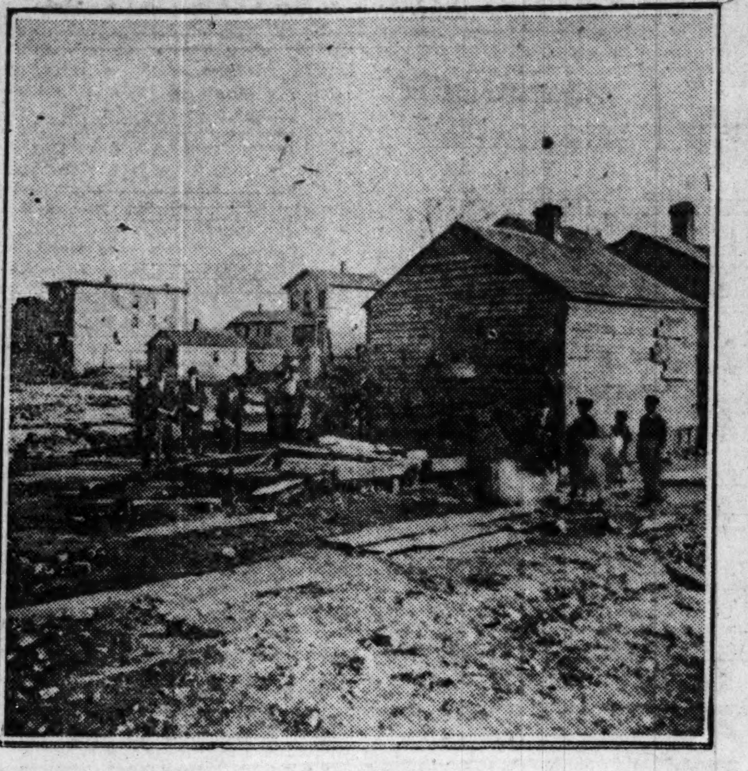
"KICKED THE BUCKET"—NOT THE LAMP



The O'Leary cottage at 137 De Koven street, as it appeared before the fire. The conflagration originated in a barn in the rear of the cottage. The tradition was that a cow kicked over a lamp, setting fire to the barn, but research by the Chicago Historical society has fairly well established that a party of men who had been "rushing the can" in the rear of the barn set fire to it accidentally with sparks from their pipes.



This old picture shows Mrs. O'Leary's barn, which housed the famous cow. It was here the great fire started.

Here lies the corpse of Mrs. O'Leary's cow. For years the dead beast has been blamed for causing the Chicago fire.

1871 REPORTER WRITES STORY OF GREAT FIRE

He "Covered" Blaze as Part of His Job.

in the vicinity of Canalport avenue and Halsted street, actually a mile beyond it. He notified Brown of the location and box 342 was sounded.

Bruno Goll, a druggist at 12th and Canal streets, made two attempts to turn in an alarm from the box at that corner, but neither of them registered at fire headquarters. The previous night's fire had put some of the lines out of commission, otherwise the fire department would have been notified from a quarter to half an hour earlier. It must be remembered that we had no telephones in those days. This invention did not come in until about 1877.

The man in the tower of No. 6 house on Maxwell street, near Canal, sighted the fire about the same time Schaeffer did. He ran down from his perch and shouted to Foreman Musham to hitch up. Being within a few blocks of Jefferson and De Koven streets, he was able to judge the right location. The "Little Giant" company, only half manned, sped away while the bell in the house was tolling off 3-4-2.

A Terrific Error.

This accounts for No. 6 being first in. Other companies were as near, or nearer, the fire, but they went out of their way to reach Canalport avenue and Halsted street. On arrival there they found no fire.

If the right location had been given by Schaeffer there would have been no huge conflagration, and consequently no fiftieth anniversary story to write.

Two of the best steamers in the department, the R. A. Williams and the J. B. Rice, would have responded on the first alarm if the proper location had been sounded. As it was, Canalport avenue and Halsted street was outside their district to go on a first, and they did not get under way to the fire until a second alarm, giving the right location, called them out.

In fire fighting the matter of a few seconds often means enormous loss. This was true of the great fire of '71.

Engine company No. 5, with the steamer "Chicago," whose house was at Jefferson and Van Buren streets, was the second company in. Chris Schimmels, who is still alive, was foreman of No. 5. He and his men had worked fifteen or sixteen hours on the Saturday night blaze and when they returned to quarters Sunday afternoon they were all in.

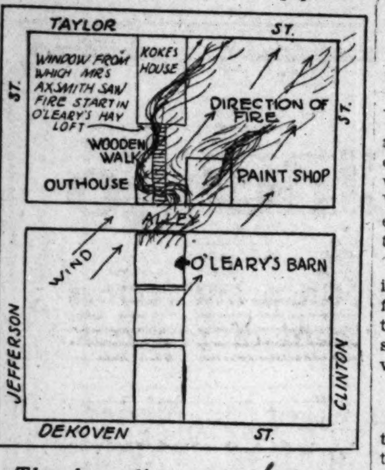
Engine Breaks Down.

Instead of going south in Jefferson street, directly to the fire, as it would if it had been given the right location, No. 5 went west in Van Buren street to Halsted. At Taylor and Halsted streets the driver of the engine saw the flames east of him and drove to a plug at Forquer and Jefferson. Hose was quickly laid, but after working a few minutes the engine broke down and was out of service for nearly an hour.

In addition to these handicaps not more than half of the fire fighting force was in physical condition, as a result of the terrible battle waged the previous night.

"Bob" Williams, chief of the fire department, was early on the ground. Within a short time after his arrival he called out every company in the service. The department consisted of seventeen steamers, fifty-four hose carts, and three or four hook and ladder trucks.

The Bateham shingle mill and box factory, the Frank Mayer Furniture company, and the Roelle Furniture company provided highly combustible material for the flames to feed on, and in an incredibly short time the fire had reached the west bank of the river.



The above diagram is drawn from information given by Mrs. A. Axsmith, who saw the fire start in the O'Leary barn and who saw the drinking party making merry there. She says the flames leaped across the alley to a paint shop and then to an outhouse and along a wooden sidewalk to the Koke home, whence it spread rapidly.

Steamer Fred Gund Sunk.

The steamer Fred Gund, an Amoskeag and one of the best in the department, was battling valiantly at the west approach of the Van Buren street bridge. The fire was raging on all sides of it except to the east, and it was hemmed in by the maelstrom. Its gallant crew remained with it until their clothing caught fire and they were forced to flee for their lives. The Gund went down in a sea of flame with steam up and fighting the foe.

Two and a half hours after the fire started the south division was hot with the fierce breath of the conflagration. A terrific southwest wind carried brands for blocks, and these torches ignited the roofs of buildings on which they fell. Coal and lumber yards lined both sides of the river, and the wind carried burning boards across the stream which fell among the inflammable fuel.

Shortly before midnight the fire crossed the river between Adams and Van Buren streets. The first building attacked on the south side was a tar works adjacent to the gas company's huge reservoir and nearly opposite the old armory police station at Franklin and Adams streets. Frank Parmelee's stables were next to fall a prey to the flames. At this time every piece of apparatus was on the west side. Chief Williams ordered several companies to the south side in an attempt to stay the spread of the fire.

Flames Spread Rapidly.

The progress of the fire was terrific. Everything in its course was swept away. Blazing bits of timber were carried to the court house from the west side, more than a mile distant. Watchman Schaeffer extinguished several incipient blazes in the court house tower.

The flames swept east toward Michigan avenue, and there were a dozen fires burning at the same time. Soon the fire extended to Taylor and Wells streets, destroying the old bridewell, which stood there.

Harrison Hotel Saved.

One of the few buildings saved in this vicinity was the Harrison hotel at the southwest corner of Harrison and Clark streets. The younger Carter Harrison, who, like his father, was several times mayor, was born here ten years before the fire. The building still stands and is an object of interest to old timers. As the fire swept on relentlessly towards the business section of the city buildings were blown up with dynamite in an effort to save the trade center, but the fire traveled on.

Several companies made an heroic stand at Michigan avenue and Harrison streets and halted the flames in their march of devastation. The last building to burn on Michigan avenue was Terrace row, a palatial block of private residences extending northward from Harrison street.

All night long the work of devastation went on ceaselessly, ruthlessly. Business blocks, public buildings, theaters, churches, hotels, banks, newspaper offices, retail and wholesale emporiums of trade, railroad depots, grain elevators, marble mansions, and breweries—all went down in the blazing mass.

Lake Street Laid Bare.

Lake street was then the principal thoroughfare of the city. Not a building was left standing on it. In its intense heat the fire destroyed everything combustible, leaving nothing whatever to survive it. Millions of dollars' worth of merchandise were destroyed in this street, and when the smoke of the ruins cleared away there was nothing to be seen from the river to the lake but brick, stone, and twisted iron beams. Every particle of wood used in the construction of those magnificent palaces of trade was obliterated. There wasn't one dollar of salvage on the street.

Only two buildings escaped destruction in the downtown district. One of them was the Lind block, at Randolph street and the river, and the other was a three story structure at the northwest corner of La Salle and Monroe streets, which was in course of erection and nearly finished.

Shortly before 2 o'clock in the morning the court house caught fire. It occupied the square bounded by Clark, La Salle, Washington, and Randolph streets. In the basement of this building were the cells of the county jail. One hundred and fifty prisoners were locked up awaiting trial. All of them except a few who were held for serious crimes were turned loose. As a result there was much looting and pillaging.

When morning dawned it was apparent that the city was doomed. To add to the horror of the catastrophe the waterworks on the north side took fire about 6 o'clock in the morning. With no water to fight the raging barrier of flame all the fire departments in the world could not have stayed the progress of the "devouring angel."

One of the last structures in the business section to go down was THE TRIBUNE building at Madison and Dearborn streets. This was a new building and supposed to be fireproof. Structures all around it were destroyed early in the morning, but THE TRIBUNE building stood like a sentinel until the middle of the forenoon.

About 5:30 in the morning the fire crossed from the south side to the north division of the city. The first building to fall was the Galena elevator on the north side of the main branch of the river, between State and Rush streets.

In a few hours it laid waste nearly all that territory from the river to Fullerton avenue, and fro mthe lake to the north branch. With the exception of a few blocks north of North avenue and west of Orchard street the fire swept onward in an unbroken sheet of flame until it was stopped at Fullerton avenue, or rather it burned itself out.

2,200 Acres "Burned Over."

The area burned over, including streets, was about 2,200 acres. Among the buildings destroyed were twenty-nine churches, nineteen hotels, nine theaters and halls, five public schools, twenty-seven banking institutions, more than 100 business blocks, six railroad depots, seven daily newspaper offices, about seventy-five other publications, seventeen breweries, the postoffice, the courthouse, the chamber of commerce, one police station and every big store in the city.

The north side was the greatest sufferer. An area covering nearly 1,500 acres was destroyed on this side of the city. Five hundred acres of buildings went down in the flames on the south side, and about 200 acres on the west side.

There were 10,000 buildings destroyed on the north side. Thirty-six hundred buildings, including 1,600 stores, were destroyed on the south side, and about 500 buildings, mostly frame shacks, on the west side. One hundred thousand persons, or about one-third of the city's population, were made homeless and the total loss was about $150,000,000. About 300 lives were lost.

Only sixteen members of the fire department of '71 are living.

Tribune First on Street.

None of the morning papers was able to put out an issue on Monday. Their forms were partly made up, but the printers and editors were compelled to flee from their offices.

THE TRIBUNE was the first of the morning papers to resume publication. On Wednesday it printed a small sheet (the best its limited facilities would permit), containing a detailed account of the fire, from its temporary office at Canal, near Randolph street. The Republican did not get out a paper until the following Sunday, and the Times issued its first paper Oct. 18.

In conclusion I wish to state that the fire was not started by Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicking over a lamp. Nothing of the kind occurred. That version of the origin of the fire was a concoction which the writer of these reminiscences confesses to a guilty part. In justice to the maligned animal and to Mrs. O'Leary, who died many years ago, I make this belated reparation

SEIZE AUTOS OF LAWBREAKERS, ENGINEERS URGE

Program to Stop Accidents Is Recommended.

The Chicago chapter of the American Association of Engineers has made its contribution to safety week in outlining a program to prevent automobile accidents. The scheme was originally prepared by the Safety Valve club and later ratified by the parent organization.

For certain offenses the engineers would deprive the owner of an auto of the use of his car for a period depending upon the gravity of the offense. The recommendations are as follows:

That the situation demands drastic enforcement of existing laws, regulations, and ordinances, toward which end the widest publicity is desirable to give full effect to such enforcement.

That licensing of drivers of automobiles should be so conducted that every person driving shall have passed an examination showing satisfactory knowledge of all traffic laws pertaining to the subject.

That licenses to drive automobiles shall not be issued to persons under 18 years of age.

Urges Impounding Autos.

That automobile offenders shall be deprived of the use of their cars upon conviction of offenses for periods graduated to conform to the gravity and number of offenses, the automobiles being impounded during such penalty periods.

That a wide extension of the principle of right hand turns be applied.

That where police traffic regulations at crossings exist a "pause" system of signalling be tried, to wit: A signal stopping further flow of traffic in the directions having right of way, followed by a brief time interval permitting the tail end traffic to clear prior to a signal for starting traffic in the right angle direction.

The establishment of "fire lanes" and means for both daylight and night time warning.

That all muffler cutouts be removed from cars.

That railway and highway grades on main traveled roads be separated wherever possible.

That the present tendency to increase the permissible driving speeds under the state laws be resisted to the utmost, and that if speed limits are changed that they shall be reduced rather than increased.

That "one way" traffic regulations in the downtown district be widely extended.

Mayor Issues Proclamation.

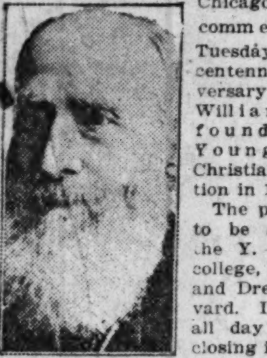
Mayor Thompson issued a proclamation proclaiming the week of Oct. 8 to "No Accident, No Fire Week."

"I urge citizens," the proclamation says, "to improve the week by making careful inspection of their premises and particularly of heating plants, to discover the existence of defective flues or chimneys and to eliminate preventable fires on their own property; and generally to employ the week in considering ways and means to reduce to the lowest possible point preventable fires and accidents in their own homes and neighborhoods."

The proclamation says that Chicago fire losses in recent years have been reduced, but there is still room for improvement.

ANNIVERSARY OF Y. M. C. A. FOUNDER TO BE HONORED

From all corners of the civilized world representatives are speeding to Chicago for the commemoration Tuesday of the centennial anniversary of George Williams, who founded the Young Men's Christian association in 1844.



GEORGE WILLIAMS

The program is to be staged at the Y. M. C. A. college, 53d street and Drexel boulevard. It will last all day Tuesday, closing in the evening with a dinner at which toasts will be responded to by Dr. Karl Fries of Geneva, Switzerland; John R. Mott of New York, Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston of Chicago, and others prominent nationally and internationally.

One of the features of the celebration will be the dedication of the George Williams room at the college. This room is an exact reproduction of the room in London, England, in which the Y. M. C. A. had its birth.

G. O. P. SLOW TO SAY FINAL WORD ON MAXIMUM TAX

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Opposition to the proposed compromise agreement involving surtax rates prevented quick action by Republican members of the senate finance committee today when they took up the amendments to the pending tax bill as tentatively approved in conferences between the party leaders and the progressive group headed by Senators McCormick of Illinois, Lenroot of Wisconsin, and Capper of Kansas.

The eastern senators who object to the 50 per cent maximum surtax rate and insist that the proposed 32 per cent rate should be adhered to, advanced arguments against the compromise agreement. The discussion did not advance to the point which would indicate what the final action would be.

Senator Penrose, chairman of the committee, expresses the belief that an amicable agreement among the Republicans will be reached. The finance committee will meet again on Monday.

Sales Tax Plan Lives On.

Advocates of the Smoot 3 per cent production or manfacturer's sales tax continue their activity, although sentiment in both branches of congress seems overhelmingly against it. John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, headed a committee which called upon President Harding today to urge support of the Smoot plan.

"The tax measure passed by the house and as amended by the senate finance committee," said Mr. Edgerton, "is substantially a perpetuation of the principles and administrative policy of the war revenue act condemned by both parties and repudiated by the American people. With a few trifling exceptions the inexcusable war excises are continued, reproductive enterprise finds the tax on its net income increased 50 per cent and the excess profits tax, which has done more than any single economic factor to pyramid prices, is repeated. Our widely condemned tax system remains substantially unchanged in policy and unimproved in administration.

"Congressional leaders admit that the present measure is intended to be only temporary in operation. Economic recovery demands stability in public policy. The situation can be met, in the opinion of a great percentage of manufacturers, by the acceptance of the 'Smoot plan.'"

Amendments Approved.

Among amendments approved by Republicans of the finance committee today was one establishing the policy of taxing insurance companies other than life insurance companies on the basis of their investments and underwritings as reported to state authorities.

An amendment to the section providing exemption from taxation for building and loan associations was approved, which limits the exemption to those associations which make loans to members only on the basis of their stockholdings.

Head of Family Gets Help.

Another amendment provides a manner in which the head of a family whose net income is slightly more than $5,000 can obtain a reduction in his tax proportionate to the greater exemption to which he would be entitled if his net income were less than $5,000. It is provided that the tax of the head of the family shall not be greater than the amount he would pay if his net income were $5,000 plus the excess of his net income over $5,000.

Amendments were approved which will provide tax exemption in the case of individuals and corporations who are paying more on borrowed money to carry Liberty bonds than they obtained in interest on the bonds.

Friend of King Edward Left $20,000,000 Estate

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—[London Telegraph.]—The will of Sir Ernest Cassel, the deceased financier who was a friend of the late King Edward VII., indicates Sir Ernest left between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000. The late financier's granddaughter, Edwina Ashley, a pretty 19 year old girl, will get more than half of the estate. Sir Ernest bequeathed objects of art to his old friends, including Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schiff, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Schiff, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Warburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Felix Warburg.

MARSH SCORES REVENUE BILL AS A VICIOUS THING

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary, People's Reconstruction league, in a statement today charges that the revenue bill reported out by the senate finance committee, even with improvements suggested by Republican senators, "who are not owned by Wall street, is a most vicious measure, sired by Wall street and damned by war profiteers."

"In the last two months," he continued, "I have talked with hundreds of people in twenty-two states from the Pacific to the Atlantic. I have addressed audiences of tens of thousands. The American people are fully aware of the vicious, un-American, and inhuman plans of the administration to refund our national debt for from forty to sixty years, so as to unload the war costs and current costs of government upon farm and city workers, in order that the war profiteers and concentrated wealth shall go untouched and get profitable foreign investments."

The Spirit of Chicago

Vision and faith have been the prime factors in Chicago's wonderful record of progress.

Inspired by the vicissitudes of its pioneer days and imbued with the spirit of "I Will," Chicago—arisen from the ashes of 1871—has attained the distinction of being regarded as the "wonder-city of the world."

Interwoven in the history of Chicago's remarkable development is the equally inspiring record of the old established House of Greenebaum.

Since 1855—sixteen years before the Great Fire—this institution has fostered the spirit that has led to Chicago's phenomenal growth.

More than 50,000 individual real estate loans in 66 years—this has been the contribution of the Oldest Banking House in Chicago to the upbuilding of this great city.

COLLUSION OF EDISON CO. AND UNION CHARGED

Business Agent on Pay Roll, Witness Says.

WM. H. McCLAIN.

Charges that the Commonwealth Edison company is in collusion with the electrical workers' union were made by William H. McClain, electric sign manufacturer, before the Dailey commission yesterday and stirred that body to issue a forthwith subpœna for John F. Gilchrist, vice president of the Edison company.

McClain, who appeared before the commission with a badly bruised face, the result, he said, of an attack by sluggers in his plant at 1445 South State street Friday, charged that Patrick Sullivan, assistant business agent of the electrical workers' union and brother-in-law of Michael J. Boyle, is kept on the pay roll of the Edison company.

He testified that Sullivan also is kept on the pay roll of the Haller Consolidated, a sign manufacturing concern at 2911 Carroll avenue, of which Mr. Gilchrist is president and Samuel Insull, president of the Edison company, is chairman of the board of directors.

"Not to Be Fired."

Sullivan, the witness said, does no work at the Haller factory, but orders are that he is "not to be fired."

McClain further charged that the sign hangers' union has practically doubled its prices for installing signs, but that certain sign manufacturers are given rebates because they carry business agents on their pay rolls. He charged that Sullivan has practically ruined his (McClain's) business by refusing to permit union electrical workers to work for him.

The witness attributed the attack on him to union sluggers. A tall man came into his plant, he said, and asked to see samples of signs. While he was showing them a shorter man entered and struck him.

"They both kicked and pounded me," declared McClain. "One threw a pint bottle of ink, which narrowly missed me. I hung on to the larger man until we got to the door. When I got that opened and began hollering for help, they rushed away.

Calls for Help Unheeded.

"No one responded to my calls for help. I haven't seen a policeman on that part of State street for the last two months.

"The last trouble I had with the hangers' union was on a job at the St. Regis hotel, where the sign was changed from a bar sign to a candy sign. The hangers got $25 for taking down the old sign, and I protested against paying $1.50 a square foot for having the new sign hung. But Frank Seeley, the hanger contractor, insisted that the union price of $45 be paid."

McClain said his trouble with Sullivan started in 1917. In that year, the witness said, he was employed as manager of the Haller shop.

"Mr. Gilchrist told me I could hire and fire anybody I wanted to except Sullivan, but that Sullivan was not to be disturbed," he testified.

Later, he said, the foreman was discharged, and Sullivan made so much trouble he also had to get out. Then, McClain continued, Sullivan got the job of first assistant to Boyle and the Haller shop had to close because it couldn't get union men.

When he opened his own shop, the witness stated, he had matters all arranged with Boyle to get union men, but Sullivan caused Boyle to break the agreement and since then the McClain company has been able to contract for only such signs as McClain himself can handle.

"It's common talk that Boyle has an interest in the Chicago Electric Sign company," McClain said, "and that Dempsey, business agent for the sign hangers' union, has an interest in the A. K. S. Sign company."

Evidence to Grand Jury.

The subpœna for Mr. Gilchrist was issued so he could be asked why the Edison company keeps Sullivan on its pay roll. Other sign makers also were subpœnaed. They are Don Wiley of the Flexlume company, Fred Parker of the Flashtric company, J. M. Heidelmeier, 4613 North Clark street, and Frank Atkins of the Mid-City Electric Service company. They will be questioned regarding the alleged placing of business agents on the pay rolls of sign companies.

GOMPERS CALLS ALL TO UPHOLD LIMIT ON ARMS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The advisory committee on armament limitation formed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and including about 100 of the leading men and women of the country, will hold its initial meeting here next Tuesday morning.

Mr. Gompers' viewpoint, it was announced at his offices, is the same in relation to this advisory committee as in relation to the great program of armistice day demonstrations to be held throughout the country. It is that labor takes the initiative, inviting all elements of American citizenship to participate, the responsibility thereafter resting jointly upon all who join in the effort.

"The coming international conference on limitation of armaments and Pacific problems will succeed if it has adequate support from the public opinion of America and other countries and in the absence of such support will almost inevitably fail," Mr. Gompers said.

IN WHICH OLAF PROVES FRIDAY TO BE UNLUCKY

And, Also, That Barnum Was Right.

It was Friday afternoon, and it looked like rain.

Olaf Santhar, 5494 University avenue, strolling in State street near Adams, decided he would better go home.

It was even so. But a vagary of circumstances intervened.

A man grabbed his arm and accused him of attempting to pick his pocket. "Call a detective," the man shouted; "call a detective!"

Two husky lads stepped promptly up. "At your service, sir," said they. "Sergts. Murphy and Burns of the detail."

"Ah, fine!" said the fellow who held Santhar's arm. "Arrest this man, he tried to pick my pocket."

Olaf Becomes a Prisoner!

"Sergts." Burns and Murphy took Santhar into "custody."

"We'll have to take you in," they said, "but if you want to put up a bond we can release you without taking you to the station."

"A bond? How much?" inquired Santhar.

"Well, $500 is the usual thing in a case like this—"

"Fine," said Santhar. "My brother will schedule ten times that much real estate—"

"No, no," interposed "Sergt." Murphy. "No real estate. We must have cash."

Two Hundred, Cash, Plenty.

Santhar told them he had only $200. Well, if that was all he had they would accept $200 cash.

They stepped into a taxicab and drove to Santhar's home. He gave them the money and they each signed a receipt. Then they told him to appear in the South Clark street court in the morning.

Attachés of the court found Olaf patiently waiting for his case to be "called" yesterday. He told them his story and they smiled and sent him to the detective bureau.

PERSHING SENDS TROOP ESCORT BACK TO RHINE

PARIS, Oct. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—The American picked battalion from the army of occupation, which has been held in Paris a week awaiting arrangements by the British government for placing the American congressional medal of honor upon the tomb of the British "unknown soldier," in Westminster abbey by Gen. Pershing, is returning to Coblenz tomorrow.

The decision not to hold the troops here any longer was due to failure of the British government to fix a date for the ceremony, it was said. Gen. Pershing has been holding himself in readiness all week to go to London and the troops were expected to leave for London last Tuesday.

PETROGRAD IN FLOOD'S GRIP AS NEVA OVERFLOWS

MOSCOW, Oct. 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—A dispatch received today says Petrograd is suffering from a flood, caused by winds which have driven the water up the Neva river into canals, washing out bridges, flooding cellars and docks and hindering shipping.

While Red army workmen were busy trying to save property threatened by the flood, the dispatch said, fire destroyed the central tepehone stations, stopping all telephone service in the city. An investigation gave rise to the suspicion that the fire was of incendiary origin, the dispatch added.

The American relief administration headquarters wired to the Moscow headquarters asking for more autos.

HERE ARE POINTS CITY EXPECTS TO BRING 5c FARES

More Traffic and Lower Expenses Among Them.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Chester E. Cleveland Sr., special attorney for the city administration, has announced to the Illinois commerce commission that he is "practically through" presenting his evidence. Therefore it is possible to relate to the 2,000,000 car riders—who daily pay an 8 cent cash fare—upon what principal points in the record evidence the city relies to regain the 5 cent fare.

These are three. Increased traffic is one. Reduction in expense 20 per cent from the 1921 basis, by the introduction of economies in operation, is No. 2. The third is a reduction of the $160,500,000 capital account of the companies by a sum between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

In making these claims or advocating these theories the city's chief witnesses have been Mayor Thompson, George W. Jackson, engineer for the mayor's traction plan; W. H. Crumb, consulting engineer of the city previously employed on telephone matters, and H. G. Westphaln, expert accountant of the city controller's office.

Pins Faith on Small.

Outside of the record, the city relies upon the expected lower price level. Also the city pins faith perhaps on Gov. Small's public statement that he will reduce car fares to 5 cents "if it is humanly possible." The big contention in the testimony of the mayor and other witness is that it is not only "humanly possible" but is physically and financially practicable, morally just, and equitably fair—and the mayor and the governor are closer than first cousins in political relations.

The governor's statement that he will reduce the fare to 5 cents "if it is humanly possible" was made in relation to his indictment on a charge of embezzlement of public funds while connected with the state treasurer's office.

Some of the Evidence.

In the fare hearing several bits of testimony have been presented by Mr. Cleveland which probably will interest the governor, especially in view of his charge that the public utility interests—naming the traction interests of Chicago in particular—"gave what support they were able to Mr. Brundage's effort to besmirch my name and my record."

One of these bits relates to the salaries of surface line officials. The testinmony shows that Henry A. Blair as head of the surface lines and of the Chicago Railways company receives $60,000 a year, W. W. Gurley, general counsel of lines, receives $30,000 annually; L. A. Busby, president of the Chicago City railway, $30,000; and M. B. Orde, treasurer of the Chicago Railways, $12,000.

Another point in the testimony had to do with a contribution of the Chicago City Railway of $9,258.58 to a citizens' committee which campaigned in 1918 for the traction ordinances submitted to the voters for approval. John V. Farwell headed this committee. Mayor Thompson and the city administration opposed the ratification of the ordinances and they were defeated.

Activity of C. Fred Mortimer.

A third short piece of evidence was the employment in 1919 of C. Fred Mortimer, lawyer, of Springfield, to aid the surface lines in their contest in the Sangamon county Circuit court to obtain a 7-cent fare. Mortimer was state's attorney then—is now—and presented the evidence to the grand jury in Springfield upon which Gov. Small, Lieut. Gov. Sterling and Verne Curtis were indicted on a charge of embezzling state funds. For his services to the surface lines Mortimer was paid $1,250 and allowed an expense of $164.90.

The case at issue was heard by Judge Smith of Springfield, to whom the grand jury returned the indictment against Gov. Small. Judge Smith in the fare case decided against the company, and consequently Mortimer was on the losing side. On the winning side was George B. Gillispie, one of Gov. Small's attorneys in the embezzlement case. Gillispie's traction fees, paid by the city administration, aggregate many times those paid by the surface lines to Mortimer.

Sees Nothing Wrong in It.

Sidney S. Breese, another Springfield attorney for the surface lines, commented on the Mortimer "exposé" as follows: "Well, what of it? There was nothing improper or unethical in Mr. Mortimer's conduct. When he was elected state's attorney he by no means forfeited his right to private practice. He was retained by the surface lines because he is a good lawyer."

It is reported that Mortimer has been summoned to appear before the Illinois commerce commission Tuesday and testify.

Mr. Mortimer in Springfield last night pointed out that he cannot come to Chicago Tuesday because arguments on Gov. Small's petition for a change of venue are set for that day in Springfield.

"I noticed in a press report that I will probably be subpœnaed before the commission," Mr. Mortimer said. "If that is the case I will make my statement to the commission. If I am not subpœnaed I will probably have something to say later."

All these bits of testimony did not disclose anything new to the city administration, state administration, or the public, except perhaps the public had not been previously informed regarding the exact amount paid Mortimer for his services to the surface lines.

Mortimer's employment by the surface lines has also been published heretofore. It is a matter of record in the Circuit court at Springfield.

$250,000 worth of Oriental and Chinese Rugs on Sale at 50 cents on the dollar!

—These rich and luxuriant specimens were thrown back on the hands of our wholesale department by dealers over the country, who were unable to dispose of them because of the general business depression.

Sale starts tomorrow, Monday, October 10, at 8:30 sharp.

IN all of our years of experience in the Rug business we can not recall a parallel for this unprecedented buying opportunity. It is a condition created solely by untoward circumstances.

OUR wholesale does business only with the best and most reliable dealers. These dealers selected for their anticipated needs in their respective localities the choicest of our stocks—rich and luxuriant specimens imported by us from the great rug centers of the Far East—but were unable to sell them because of the wave of depression sweeping the country.

RESULT, they threw them back on our hands, creating a vast surplus which must be disposed of at once, regardless of cost, profit or former selling prices. If you've been thinking of buying a beautiful Oriental or Chinese Rug six months hence, buy it now at exactly half price. You can make no investment that will pay you so handsome a return.

Rugs purchased now may be held for future delivery

We are sacrificing this colossal collection of Oriental and Chinese Rugs at exactly one-half regular price

KING WHO WILL NOT GO HOME IS SPICE FOR PARIS

Serbian Monarch Stirs Up Lots of Gossip.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The prize subject of gossip in the French capital for some time has been King Alexander of Serbia, who, monarch for two months, has never worn his crown for the good reason that the crown has remained in its native habitat at Belgrade, while Alexander has remained in Paris.

When King Peter died, his second son, Prince Alexander, inherited the throne, the first son, Prince George, having signed away his claim to the crown. The day after King Peter's death, it was learned that Alexander was sick in the Hotel Continental, opposite Tuileries Gardens. It was reported he had come to Paris incognito, but had assumed his royal rôle when his illness gave him need of the offices of the Serbian embassy.

Peter's funeral took place and Alexander was proclaimed king. But he remained at the Hotel Continental. It was announced officially that he had a bad case of appendicitis.

Takes Versailles Villa.

Several court physicians came here from Belgrade, but the appendicitis operation was not performed because it was understood Alexander was not suffering from that malady, but from another of entirely distinct category. Subsequently he was removed to a villa at Versailles, and, after some days, bulletins of the royal physicians ceased. From time to time brief notes appeared in Paris papers to the effect that Alexander was recovering and was able to take walks and then automobile rides and his departure to don his crown was expected. But Alexander remained at Paris.

There were ugly reports that, after all Prince George was not sure he didn't wish the crown, but these reports were promptly denied by Belgrade, which, however, gave no reason which satisfied the curious for the king's prolonged stay in Paris.

Received by French President.

In the last week it has been noted that King Alexander has been received by the president and has been about doing things which often very sick men do not do. His country has become involved in some ticklish international situations, including relations of the little entente with Hungary and doings along the Serbian-Albanian frontier. But, if Alexander has taken a hand, it has been from Versailles, and not from the Belgrade palace.

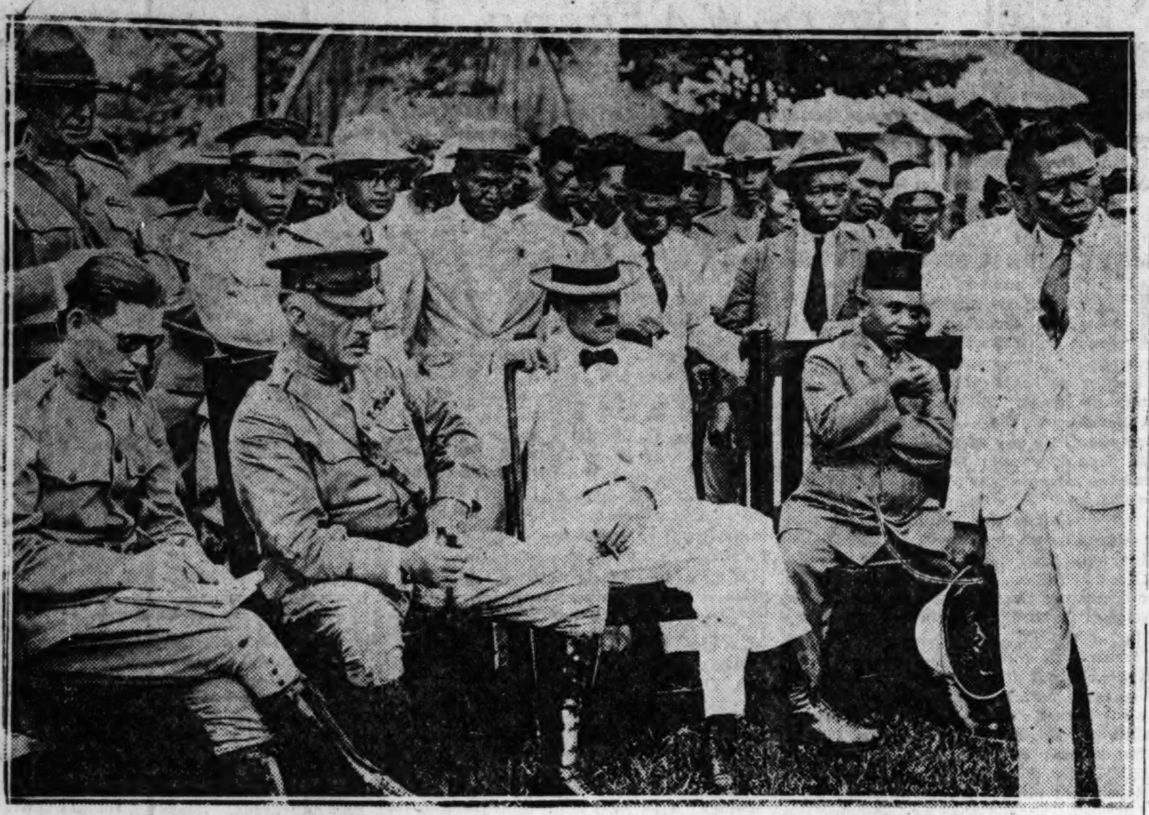
And so there has naturally been much gossip and a certain amount of scandal talk about this king who won't go home. Not that Paris is inhospitable. Not at all. Paris is known for its hospitality, even to those who can not repay it in royal manner. But, nevertheless, Paris has talked.

Now Premier Is in Paris.

And today M. Pachitch, Serbian premier, arrived in Paris. Numerous reasons are given for his presence, one being that he is coming for his health, and another, rather contradictory, that he has business with Premier Briand.

But gossips are speculating as to whether or not there may be a connection between the visit of the Serbian premier and the long continued absence of the country's new king. Maybe, some folks say, he has come to see if the crown will really fit.

Gen. Wood in the Philippines Among the Moros



Governor General Wood is seated in the foreground, second from the extreme left. Next to the right is Carl M. Moorn, governor of Moro province, and sultan of Sulu, both seated.
[Gerald Thompson Photo.]

Moros Attack Governor

Gov. Carl M. Mooree of the Moro province was recently attacked by a band of Moros. His life was saved by Filipino constabulary, who killed nine of the fanatics. Gov. Moore is from Missouri and is shown in the above picture with Gen. Wood and the sultan of Sulu during the recent visit of the Wood-Forbes mission.

The outbreak complicates the Moro situation and probably will result in strong measures being taken by Gen. Wood when he returns to the islands in a few days. Gov. Moore is the only white official in the country of the southern wild tribes. Filipinos are ruling in all minor offices and as subgovernors.

This is the root of the trouble there as the Moros object to the Filipino domination. Gov. Moore is forced to back up his Filipino subordinates and thus came in for dislike. The Moros have been disarmed and the only result of such conflict is death for many of them. Last spring the Filipino soldiers killed ninety-three in one affair.

Stewart-Warner Company Loses Big Patent Suit

Judge Carpenter in the United States District court yesterday found for the plaintiffs in the suit of Seager, Payton & Thomas against the Stewart-Warner Speedometer corporation, alleging infringement of automobile engine vacuum gasoline feed patents obtained by James B. Seager and Norman T. Harrington. The Stewart-Warner corporation has sold approximately 5,000,000 vacuum systems at $10 each.

U. S. AND JAPAN WILL REMAIN FRIENDS—WOOD

Deprecates Loose Talk of War Danger.

TOKIO, Oct. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Talk of trouble between the United States and Japan was deprecated by Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, in an address before the America-Japan society here Thursday night. He insisted there was no reason why Japan and America should be unable to arrive at an understanding on all points upon which there is the slightest disagreement and declared that there was no misunderstandings between the two countries.

"There has been a great deal of loose and foolish talk about trouble between America and Japan," said Gov. Gen. Wood. "But all this is nonsense. I think I know the American people well, and I am certain that on their part there is no desire and no intention to dwell in any but the friendliest relations with their neighbors of Japan.

"The flags of Japan and the United States stood side by side in the great war in the battle for fair dealing between nations and respect for the rights of smaller peoples. They are going to stand together always on the side of right.

Relations Not Strained.

"Loose and idle reports by irresponsible persons have been largely responsible for this talk of strained relations, but our relations are not strained, and are going always to be good. Americans want to build up trade and commerce, but welcome open and fair competition. Americans are sure the Japanese ask only the same. There is room enough for all in honorable competition.

"It would be a terrible reflection upon modern civilization if two great peoples like those of Japan and the United States could not get together around the conference board and settle all, or nearly all, of their difficulties. We cannot hide the fact, of course, that great issues may arise that will challenge all our will and diplomacy to reach a solution, but there seems to be nothing in the present situation between Japan and America justifying even a suspicion of such an issue.

"No one can visit Japan and go away unfriendly to her. I and my colleagues came here as friends from a friendly country and will leave with even warmer feelings."

Filipinos Need U. S. Protection.

W. Cameron Forbes, former governor general of the Philippines, who came to Japan several days ago with Mr. Wood, said in a short address that he found among the Filipinos a natural desire for independence, or rather a desire that they be allowed to run their own government in their own way.

"This desire is tempered by a realizing sense, however," he continued, "that they have within themselves no adequate means of defense, and must rely upon the United States for protection, for which they frankly ask. I believe the Philippines will become a great source of wealth to all the neighboring countries with which they have business relations."

'JUDGE, HE PUT A MOUSE IN MY BED, THE BRUTE'

A mouse and a branding iron left dissimilar, but destructive, trails yesterday across two matrimonial paths.

"My husband often was extremely cruel to me, but the climax came when he placed a live mouse in my bed," Mrs. Gladys Mae Marsh, 1521 East Marquette boulevard, told Judge Sabath in the Superior court, in support of her plea for a divorce from Clyde Marsh, a real estate dealer.

"I was tired from my day's work as a stenographer in a loop office and wanted to rest after dinner," Mrs. Marsh continued. "My husband wanted to go to the movies. I finally went to bed. A few minutes later I felt something moving under the bed clothes. He had put a mouse there.

"I was so frightened I couldn't move. My husband just stood in the middle of the room and laughed until his sides hurt. It was brutal."

Judge Sabath intimated that he would grant the decree, and also that he would grant one to Mrs. Anna Koetke, 1665 Bissell street, who left her husband, Grover Koetke, after two months of married life because he branded her.

"He came home in a quarrelsome humor," Mrs. Koetke told the court. "I buried my head under the pillow, so I couldn't hear him.

"He pulled the covers from the bed and branded me with a redhot poker on the right thigh.

"I left him the next day and haven't been back since," the young bride concluded.

A NEWSPAPER'S OPINION.

Not a little of the criticism of newspapers arises from a lack of knowledge or consideration of the newspaper's organization. A reading of the Voice of the People department, one of the most interesting and significant of THE TRIBUNE's features, will present frequent examples. One of the commonest errors is the assumption that anything published is adopted or approved. THE TRIBUNE, and in fact all newspapers, are often blamed for the utterances even of public men whose views they disagree with and emphatically oppose. Critics who make this mistake do not stop to realize that it is the foremost duty and function of the newspaper to publish news, and next in importance to the report of events is the publication of opinion.

It is a familiar irony that very high minded readers not infrequently find fault with newspapers because they try to fulfill this duty; and because they give publicity to opinions held erroneous or mischievous by the critics are roundly scored in indignant communications to the editor.

Editors are not much concerned to defend themselves from this injustice from their own viewpoint. It is a part of their task to criticize and they ought therefore to be able to bear criticism with philosophy. But it is important from the viewpoint of the reader that he should not so misconceive what he reads. It is to his interest that he should not confuse the functions of the newspaper upon which he relies for information and in some measure for guidance in the maze of public affairs.

This confusion is common enough to justify explaining occasionally and without apology the organization of a responsible newspaper. Some readers need to have it pointed out that the opinions of THE TRIBUNE and other responsible newspapers are to be found in the editorials and only there.

Editorials are the result of conferences daily held by the editors in chief with the men charged with expressing the opinions of THE TRIBUNE on public affairs. A spirited contributor to the Line o' Type recently expressed the view that "the editorial we is bunk," and he demanded that editorials be signed by the writer. He thus exposed his want of knowledge of the editorial. It is not the opinion of the writer solely. It is a collective expression. It is we and not I. If all its authors were to sign, it would carry several signatures and in many cases there would be needed the signature of men now long in their graves.

In other words, the editorials in a newspaper like THE TRIBUNE are the expression of an institution which, for three generations in THE TRIBUNE's case, has held to and sought to interpret and establish certain continuing lines of principle and policy in public affairs. Those who today carry on this task are sincere believers and if they were not would be replaced by other writers who are. They understand and share the convictions for which this newspaper has stood since before the civil war and are in no sense privileged to arrogate to themselves alone, by a personal signature or the use of the singular pronoun, the opinion of a historic institution.

Even in lighter and incidental comment, the editorial is not a personal expression, for all subjects are discussed in conference and must have the countersign of an editor-in-chief.

Cartoons occupy a middle ground in practice. They are signed by the artist and when they treat public topics usually express the opinion of the newspaper. But where the cartoonist, as in the case of Mr. McCutcheon, is of public note, a considerable degree of independence is conceded. This anomaly sometimes calls for editorial explanation and THE TRIBUNE has on occasion expressed a difference of opinion with the cartoonist on matters of public concern.

But when the line of news is reached an entirely different principle applies. It is the principle of objective report. The objective of the news department, in writings, headlines and pictorial representation, is to supply the reader with information. So far as is humanly possible the news is presented without bias. Of course, since no newspaper is large enough to print all the news, there must be selection, but this selection is governed not by an ulterior purpose but by the editor's judgment of what his readers would like to know about. This introduces, in some measure, a partisan appearance, varying in different newspapers. A Republican newspaper gives more space and more emphasis to news of Republican men and events than a Democratic, and vice versa. American newspapers must tell more of events in America or of events in which Americans are interested than a foreign newspaper. But the test is primarily not what the editor wishes to print but what the majority of his readers wishes to read.

As circulations have broadened this distinction has tended to disappear and a newspaper like THE TRIBUNE, having almost as many readers of one persuasion as another, maintains a pretty even balance. Violent critics and opponents are given ample publicity in THE TRIBUNE's pages.

The editorials, then, express the opinions of THE TRIBUNE as a public institution. They are not expected to win circulation or to bring in money. They seek to meet the traditional duty required of the press by the public from the beginning of the newspaper press in the seventeenth century—namely: to study, consider and comment upon public affairs. Mr. Arthur Balfour has said that "democracy has come to mean government by public opinion," and it is equally true that the newspaper of today is the chief agency for the formulation and expression of public opinion.

The editorial has this advantage over the public man as an effective agent of wise policy: A public man must lead a faction or command a majority in order to survive and he is therefore compelled to compromise his utterance in a measure not necessary to a newspaper. The editorial may argue the unpopular side of a controversy for years and combat tendencies which the public man cannot oppose and survive, until finally the tide turns and the sound policy prevails. This is the most important service of the editorial, made possible not by superior intelligence in the editorial rooms but by a continuing observation and analysis of events, a persistent study of tendencies and deliberation upon forces and consequences.

Thus THE TRIBUNE fought for abolition—before Lincoln came to the issue and dared to declare the slave free. Thus THE TRIBUNE preached preparedness for war and pointed to the gathering clouds and laid the foundation of a public opinion upon which our government could rely when compelled by events to demand action and sacrifice.

By tradition and political conviction THE TRIBUNE is Republican editorially, believing in the principles of Washington and Hamilton, Lincoln and Roosevelt. But it has never supported what it has believed to be a wrong, though perpetrated in the name of the party, or hesitated to attack legislation it believed faulty whatever its source. This course has earned THE TRIBUNE the reproach of partisans and the misinterpretation of opponents, but it also has won, we believe, the confidence of those readers who have read TRIBUNE editorials attentively through years. Criticism and dissent are expected and a conscientious editorship will often profit by them, but only when they are directed by a sincere desire to see the right, which is and has been always the controlling motive of THE TRIBUNE's editorial utterances.

CITY CRAFT AND JAY WALKERS.

An experienced city dweller, considerate of his own and other people's comfort, learns a city craft which has the same value to him as woodcraft has to a forester. It comes from observance and with habit, and it serves him, as woodcraft serves a woodsman, to get him over ground with the greatest ease possible and with as little danger and distress as possible.

Its tricks and habits of observation may not be as acute as the woods habits of observation. The latter proceed in surroundings providing secrecy of movement and amid things seeking it. The former proceeds in surroundings in which movement frequently is reckless and numbers are dismaying.

A city dweller whose routine of movement is much one day as another learns the lines of least resistance as a forester learns trails through a forest. He learns traffic currents. That has greater need in Chicago, probably, than in many large cities, because of the Chicago looping of traffic. One path across the city may entirely avoid a main line or two of three main lines. Another, towards the same objective, without gaining any value in directness, may cross each at least twice.

One street intersection is found easy of passage; another difficult. One side of a street may lead into a current twice the volume of that breasted on the other side. Walking on the north side of Randolph street, west from Michigan boulevard to Dearborn street, is traveling a trail by the side of a marsh as compared with walking west on the south side, which is as forcing a way through beech saplings and small firs.

Wood perceptions will take in a partridge in the bracken, a fox track along the trail, a deer or a wolf in the brush; city perceptions take in the twist of a truck driver's wrist which indicates he is about to turn the corner, the first movement of a traffic policeman's hands which indicates that he is about to change the traffic, the movements of the people ahead of him which indicate that he is approaching a gusty alley or windy corner.

The person who said that only a foolish man lost his hat in the wind had at least a half truth. There nearly always is warning of a wind area. The observing are giving signs of it by holding their hats, the unobserving by losing them. In the crowd movements there is an infinity of complications, almost eccentric, caused by the unavoidable intermingling of currents of travel and also by the selfish, gauche, and inconsiderate behavior of the jay walker. The experienced pedestrian has a craft which guides him through the eccentricities inherent in the movement of great masses with each individual steering a separate course and the disturbances caused by jay walkers.

The chief offenses of the latter, whose numbers seem to increase in Chicago, are walking on the left side of the sidewalk, stopping for conversation on the curb of a street intersection, and getting jammed in the traffic by disregarding the traffic whistle.

An experienced pedestrian instinctively judges distances and adjusts his speed to them. He can tell whether the groups ahead of him are opening up lanes or closing them. With an almost subconscious precision, he anticipates the abruptness with which a self-centered person will right about on the heel in front of him. He judges the breaks in the traffic as to whether they will permit or prevent him from crossing against the double current of vehicles and street cars. In adjusting himself to street car transportation he also has learned many of the tricks of the bareback rider.

In Chicago particularly he has been compelled to learn a protective craft. Many cities have a normal gait to which all citizens are adjusted. A pedestrian gets into the current and flows along with it. Chicago has nearly every gait known to pedestrianism, from the loafing step to the bustling stride. In many cities the main currents are not frequently intercepted by cross currents. In Chicago it is difficult to tell which is main current and which is cross current. The impact is at every street intersection.

The general rule of Chicago streets is amiable, but it could not be called disciplined. The jay walker is lawless in his disregard of forms which are the more needed as congestion increases. The friction increases as inconsiderate conduct increases, but even that develops the craft of the city dweller who seeks to make his way about with as little discomfort and danger to himself as possible and without giving more discomfort than necessary to the others who with him make up the crowds.

GADDERS differ as to sunsets. We have seen few more beautiful than those off San Francisco's Golden Gate. One of the few—an unforgettable one—was in the Rocky Mountains. We saw it by proxy. That is to say, it was contained in a letter. We know of no other sunset that has been mailed under a two cent stamp. Do you recall the young lady, who said of Turner's picture, "Sir, I have never seen a sunset like that?" "Madam," replied he, "don't you wish you could?" There is a point in Lincoln park, Chicago, where, if one is a-top a motor bus, one may see silhouetted about a mile away, the spire of a church "whose silent finger points to heaven."

SOUL SEARCHING PROBLEM OF CONDUCT.
[From the British Weekly.]

Mr. Hume holds a public post, and consequently is subject to much criticism—not all of it fair. His wife, Iris, is of a sensitive and independent nature, and shrinks from the publicity which her husband's position brings. One day Iris Hume hears two men in a car discussing one of her husband's schemes. One of the men says: "I believe Hume is financially interested in the firm of Webb & Co., otherwise why is he pressing for their contract to be accepted to the disadvantage of the local firm?" What should Mrs. Hume do?

WE don't know whether you're interested to learn that Mr. Stubblefield conducts a barber shop at Aurora, Mo.; or, further, that he warbles in the Aurora Daily News:

INFORMATION for the public, or How Straphangers Should Stand, issued by the Interborough Rapid Transit company:

What is more unpleasant than a crowded street car? . . . But if every one would stand properly there would not be any trouble. . . . When standing diagonally like this, you can withstand the jerks of starting and stopping, and can also resist the swaying motion caused by the car rocking from side to side.

Also, most persons place their feet too near together. In the same way that a vase with a large base is less liable to topple over than one with a small base, you are less liable to topple over if your feet are well apart. About eighteen inches is the best distance for the average built person, and—unless your feet are remarkably large—they won't be in anybody's way when they are only this distance apart.

Simple. All one has to do is to place one's feet eighteen inches apart. We'd suggest that one select soft corns whenever possible, as they make ideal shock absorbers in rounding curves and in stopping and starting.

DREAMS.
Quicksands.

The old clay-hole was full of water,
Very deep, muddy water.
My boat seemed frozen to its surface
And would not yield to the force of my oars.
Suddenly the water fell out of the bottom of the hole
And the quicksands seized me with their tentacles.
Down! Down! I struggled and fought,
But still they sucked, sucked, sucked.
I tried to climb up the slippery bank
But the bank fell over me—
And then my father grasped my hand
And pulled me back into bed!

MORE SERUM TREATMENTS.

IN a recent number of the Journal of the American Medical Association there are accounts of vaccine and serum control of two old-time enemies of man.

Yellow fever is about ready for the coup de grace. Being still under the influence of the Dempsey-Carpentier argument, we say of yellow fever that it has been dazed by a series of body blows and the stage is now set for a "sock him to the jaw."

By screening the water barrels and using minnows to catch the wiggle tails, Guayaquil was cleared of yellow fever in a year. When it came under control in Ecuador, the disease made a feeble attempt to break out in two or three other countries.

One of the reports alluded to, that by Noguchi, told of success in treating yellow fever with a serum made by inoculating horses. When patients are treated with this serum, before the third day of the disease, only one-seventh of them die. Under the old methods of treatment 56 per cent died.

It seems proved that we now have a cure for yellow fever.

Another set of experiments related to vaccination to protect against yellow fever. In a group of more than 3,000 persons given two injections of yellow fever vaccine not one case of the disease occurred. In groups of nonvaccinated susceptible persons 23.8 per 1,000 contracted the disease.

Immunity caused by vaccination lasts at least four months. Whether it lasts longer has not been proved.

The next disease covered in these articles was measles. Dr. Richardson told of inoculating seventy-five children with blood serum from children convalescent from measles. All of the seventy-five were necessarily exposed to measles repeatedly. None of the vaccinated developed measles. Dr. Helmholz told of many similar cases in this country and in Bavaria. About seventy-five minims of blood serum taken from persons just getting well of measles was injected into each child. None developed the disease. Dr. Helmholz thinks this method of vaccination should be used to protect children between 1 and 4 years of age.

Dr. Herman said he had been inoculating children against measles for eight years and was satisfied he had protected them. He used the secretions from the noses of measles patients as the vaccinating material.

A third report was abstracted from a German medical journal. Dr. Bode treated cases of scarlet fever by injecting them with blood serum obtained from persons convalescent from scarlet fever. He injected about two ounces of this blood serum deep into the muscles. The thirty patients treated in this way got well as quickly and about after the same fashion as diphtheria patients treated early with full doses of diphtheria antitoxin.

FOR DESERT DWELLERS.

Mrs. E. A. D. writes: "1. What is adrenalin? 2. How large a dose should one take hypodermically when suffering with spasmodic asthma? 3. Is there any danger in using it? 4. What is good for hay fever? 5. What is the best thing for the eyes in an attack? 6. What is the quickest relief when the white part of the eye swells out beyond the ball of the eye? 7. What causes the lining of the lids to roll up and come out in a ropelike piece of membrane? Although we live in the heart of the desert the pollen from greasewood and sagebrush gives me the hay fever every year. This started with my eyes when I was about 8 years old, and I am now 36. Our nearest physician is ninety miles away, and the nearest oculist 350."

REPLY.

1. It is an extract of the adrenal gland. This is a ductless gland, located near the kidney.

2. It is obtainable as a 1 to 1,000 solution. Of this five minims may be given. It is applied locally as a 1 to 5,000 solution.

3. You may use it with safety locally. Do not use it hypodermically, situated as you are.

4. Get four ounces of calcium crystals. Dissolve in a pint of distilled water. Take one teaspoonful well diluted after each meal from now to frost. Next year start in the spring. Have skin tests made to discover which pollens cause your trouble; then be desensitized. This requires time.

5. Apply cold cloths to the nose and eyes.

6. Try 1 to 2,000 to 1 to 5,000 adrenalin chloride in nose and eyes.

7. Hay fever sometimes causes excessive oedema of the eyes.

RICKETS PROBABLE CAUSE.

"Anxious" writes: "I have a conspicuous bone in my chest. It is quite noticeable, especially from a side view. I have had it for some time, perhaps since birth, but noticed it only a few years ago. Can you tell me the cause? Is it because I am thin and some of my bones stand out?"

REPLY.

Probably this is "chicken breast," due to rickets in early childhood.

HAVE CHILD EXAMINED.

Worried Mother writes: "In a few weeks my boy will be 4 years old. He has never been robust like other children. He is forty inches in height and weighs forty pounds. His diet consists of—breakfast, orange juice, cereal, milk, bread, and butter; dinner, one green vegetable with potato or macaroni, twice a week egg and twice a week beef or other meat juice, stewed fruit every other day; supper, bread and butter, fresh milk, baked apple or apple sauce, or other stewed fruit. No matter how careful I am, he has spells of loose bowels, he becomes pale, and gets tired very quickly, especially if he walks a short distance. He takes an afternoon nap and is out in the open air all the rest of the day the year round, as I live in the country. He has had scarlet fever, whooping cough, and pleurisy, with pneumonia. He does not talk plainly. Sometimes his voice is quite husky."

REPLY.

A 4 year old should be 36 to 39½ inches tall and weigh thirty-five to thirty-eight pounds. Although you do not give quantities, the probability is that his diet is not the cause of his trouble. He should be carefully examined. He may be backward or feeble minded, or he may have inherited what is sometimes known as "specific disease." At any rate find out what the trouble is.

WAKEFIELD, MICH., SHOWS THE WAY.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—In the interests of the unemployed and the talk of a campaign to furnish work for them, I would like to tell a little instance of a condition I recently saw up in the little town of Wakefield, Mich.

This is a mining town and the mines are practically all shut down, but there is no pessimistic crying of hard times up there. On the contrary, everybody is busy. This plucky little town is just starting the erection of a $200,000 community building as a memorial to the world's war heroes. I understand that it is to have all modern conveniences and furniture, even down to a fine swimming pool. Fine pavements have been constructed in the business sections of the town, and it is claimed that all the streets will soon have the same fine wide bitulithic pavements. Cement walks are being extended to every street in town, and the city is even furnishing work to men by having the high spots of earth which exist in a small lake there leveled off, so as not to interfere with pleasure boating in the summertime.

These are the few things they are doing up there that came to my immediate attention in the course of just a few hours' visit, and it occurred to me that if this little town can show such pluck, with their very limited resources, the real business centers of our country could well emulate this locality.

R. M. BARNETT.

FIRE THE INEFFICIENT; HIRE THE EFFICIENT.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—I have worked in an office most of my three years of married life. About six months ago a decree went through the plant and office where I was employed that all married women must be laid off—didn't make any difference if they were supported or not. My husband was in the hospital at the time and had not worked for ten months, but I was laid off with the rest. My present employer, who needs more help, showed me letters of application received from single girls. Out of about fifty, all but two were on scented social stationery, many contained misspelled words or were badly punctuated, and one said if there was any dirty work like mimeographing she would not care to be considered. This man had three girls lately. One quit because her mother did not want her to work. Another could not answer the telephone and take a message properly. The other could not be trusted to take care of any important matters.

How many single girls are working who have fathers and brothers making good salaries? Why should they not give up their positions to the unsupported married ones? No one has offered my husband a position because he has a wife to support.

My stand is: Let the employers hire help by the quality of work they do and not judge by their personal affairs and habits.

MARRIED WORKER.

A GOOD WORD FOR "POLITICIANS."

Berea, Ky., Oct. 3.—I have read with interest Senator Vaile's letter in today's TRIBUNE in criticism of Mr. McCutcheon's cartoon in Saturday's paper, "If the Taxpayers Met in Conference." It is admirable and I wish it might be read by all who saw Mr. McCutcheon's cartoon and took it seriously or who sympathize with the doctrine it professes to proclaim. But I have a strong suspicion that the artist himself is not of that number, and that his purpose in publishing the cartoon and the report of the "conference" was to show, not the wisdom but the folly of such a thing, for the benefit of those people who think the "common people" are more capable of handling the most difficult problems of government than the "politicians" who are selected by all the people for that purpose because of their education and experience. Does anybody really think that these "politicians," i. e., our President and his cabinet, our senators and representatives, our diplomats, etc., are below the "common people" in patriotic and unselfish motives, in wisdom and good common sense, or that their knowledge of history, political and economic science, and the many subjects that governments need to consider in administering the affairs of a nation, or their consciousness of the great responsibilities that rest upon them in consequence of their positions, have rendered them less fitted to grapple with the difficult and important problems that come before them? What would happen to this country if all the men of this class should step down and out or should "be carried out"? We have an object lesson on the other side of the Atlantic. We don't want it on this side.

GEORGE H. FELTON.

"JUSTICE."

Chicago, Oct. 2.—When the judge says men belonging to a trade which a boy can learn in a year or less shall be paid more than other men belonging to trades that it takes several years to learn, and many years' experience to become a first class worker—well, that is what you and your "public opinion" call justice.

It is just like one Abner T. Bowen in a letter to "Voice of the People" writes so fine and feelingly about calling out "U. S. army to help clean up the mess."

Who, by the way, has made this mess? And after telling the world what the great (?) Grover Cleveland did, he ends with a great final shout about this "free" country.

That is logical justice for you: First cry, Kill the workingmen! and then talk about this free country.

I do not think that is the kind of public opinion which exists now. There may be a few old cranks and labor baiters, but as for the real public opinion, the majority of the people is always behind the worker, and especially for the union labor man.

C. B.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF THE BALLOT.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—John Markway, in the "Voice" of Oct. 1, says he "believes it useless to vote while the mob votes without thought or reason," and he "has considered and studied President Harding's criticism from all angles," and finds that "while the average voter does not or refuses to study all sides to the issues to be voted on it is a hopeless case and a waste of time to cast a ballot."

I submit that he has overlooked a very important angle. He affords the best possible reason why all thinking, intelligent voters should get out to the polls and outvote the "mob." Instead of being discouraged, discourage the other fellow. Educate and enlighten him when possible. Raise the standard of the "average voter." Get busy; fight for the best candidate, and not only 1921, but 1922 and all subsequent years, will bring their reward to the fighters.

S. K. PARKER.

IT WOULD VIOLATE THE TREATY, BECAUSE THE TREATY SAYS SO.

Evanston, Oct. 3.—Inasmuch as foreign vessels are prohibited from engaging in our coastwise trade, it is difficult to understand why it would violate the treaty for American coastwise vessels to use the canal free, but—

Why should anybody be allowed to use, free, a canal that belongs to all of us? Why not allow me and just a few others to use the parcel post free? I could make a lot of money out of it, and not upset any treaty either.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

'TIS THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

By Thomas Moore.

'Tis the last rose of summer,
Left blooming alone;
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone;
No flower of her kindred,
No rosebud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes,
Or give sigh for sigh.

I'll not leave thee, thou lone one!
To pine on the stem;
Since the lovely are sleeping,
Go, sleep thou with them.
Thus kindly I scatter
Thy leaves o'er the bed,
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead.

So soon may I follow,
When friendships decay,
And from love's shining circle
The gems drop away!
When true hearts lie withered
And fond ones are flown,
O, who would inhabit
This bleak world alone?

MRS. M'CORMICK IN FULL ACCORD WITH OUR MARY

Denies Cable Report of Clash in Paris.

Refuting cable dispatches declaring that friction exists between Mary Garden, general director of the Chicago Opera company, and Edith Rockefeller McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller and wife of Harold F. McCormick, the following statement was issued yesterday by the opera company:

"Mrs. Harold F. McCormick has requested and authorized the following statement in her name:

"Mrs. McCormick, who, with her husband, is a principal guarantor of the Chicago Opera company, is amazed at the untruthful and obviously malicious statements appearing both in cable dispatches and in sections of the American press during the last week, reciting an alleged 'clash' between Mary Garden and Mrs. McCormick in Paris this summer.

Denies Any Discord.

"Mrs. McCormick denies emphatically any discord at any time with Miss Garden and reaffirms her unlimited faith in Miss Garden as an executive and an artist.

"Mrs. McCormick did not see Miss Garden in Paris this summer. Mrs. McCormick entertained Mary Garden in the McCormick home on Lake Zurich, Switzerland, and is very happy to relate that the two went over the Chicago opera plans for the coming season in detail. Mrs. McCormick was of some assistance in solving the problems presented, and the two were in entire accord at all times.

"Mrs. McCormick is truly grieved that Miss Garden's generosity in donating her services without pay as general director of the Chicago Opera company should subject this matchless woman to the malicious and untruthful attacks that are being made upon Miss Garden.

To Speak on Opera Plans.

"Mrs. McCormick reiterates her approval of the 500 guarantor project, in which the financial support of the Chicago Opera association becomes a semicivic undertaking. In confirmation of this, Mrs. McCormick has accepted an invitation to speak before the Chicago Association of Commerce ways and means committee at the Hotel La Salle, Wednesday, Oct. 19, at which time she will discuss the extension of opera and music to the public at large.

"Mrs. McCormick anticipates with pleasure the departure of Miss Garden from France for America on Oct. 15 and the early resumption thereafter of the Chicago reins by Miss Garden."

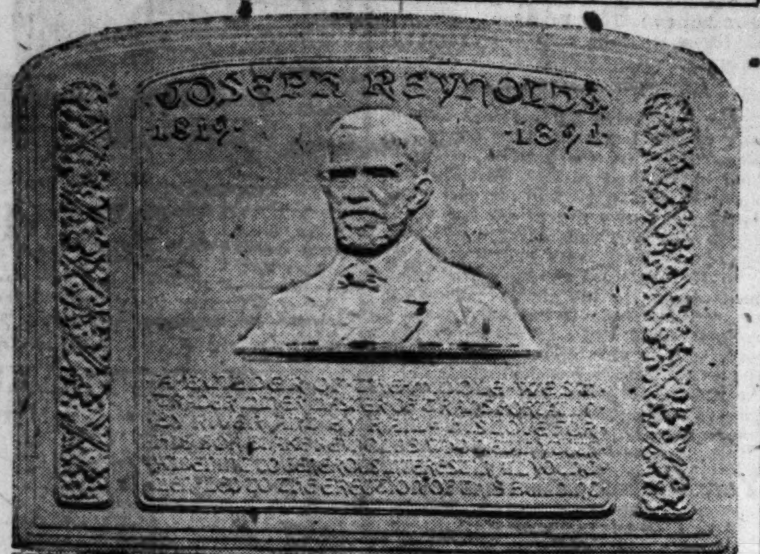
HONORING "DIAMOND JOE"



The portrait in low relief on the bronze tablet shown in this picture is that of Joseph Reynolds, the "Diamond Joe" of river steamboat fame, one of the builders of the middle west. The tablet recently was installed at the University of Chicago in the main hall of the Reynolds club, built at an expense of $80,000 from the $113,123 left to the university by Mr. Reynolds to provide a memorial for his son. The remainder provided the establishment of the Joseph Reynolds scholarships.

ROBBER'S DIARY SHOWS HOW HE SPENT $45,000

Kept Expense Account for U. S., He Says.

Carl Stieler, who spent his $45,000 share of the $234,000 Standard Oil company mail robbery at Whiting, Ind., in 1919 in a two year orgy of airplane and automobile buying and travel, will be taken to Indianapolis today for arraignment in the federal court there tomorrow.

The wife who was with him while he spent the money and who, when it was gone, took in washing and scrubbed floors to help him, will go to Indianapolis with him.

"If Carl is sent to prison I want to go there too," she said last night.

"If I hadn't given myself up the police would never have got me," Stieler, who is 23 years old, told interviewers at the door of his cell.

Easy to Elude Police.

"After we switched the mail sack full of paper for the one full of money we left Whiting in a flivver," he said. "Half way between Whiting and Chicago we had a blowout. It took the other fellows [Leo and Walter Filipkowski, 2136 Haddon avenue] too long to fix it, so I took my share in a bag and climbed on a car.

"I put the bag with the $45,000 in it on the back end of the car and went inside and sat down. Nobody disturbed it. I transferred at the first crossline and left the bag on the platform again.

"I called Bessie Jasiak (now his wife) and we went to Milwaukee. There I learned that the Filipkowski boys had been arrested and their share of the loot recovered. Bessie and I came back to Chicago and started to Los Angeles.

Different When Broke.

"The police knew that I was mixed up with the robbery, but they never saw me in Chicago. It was the same way when we got to Los Angeles. Even when Bessie and I were married under our own names they didn't get wise. Wherever we went it was always under our right names.

"Why, I was pinched for speeding once in Los Angeles, and in the courtroom where they fined me my picture, with a reward offer under it, was hanging on the wall. And they never recognized me.

"After the money gave out and we were broke in Louisville it was different, though. There the police seemed to be more observing. They worried me, and finally I decided to come home and give up. But if I had only had more money they never would have caught me. The coppers are blind."

Stieler declared that he was fleeced out of part of the stolen $45,000 by men who induced him to finance an aircraft company in Los Angeles. His interest in flying, he said, was the result of his service as an enlisted man with the 498th aero squadron overseas.

Record of Expenses.

His record of expenses, as kept, he said, against the "time when federal agents might get him," follows:

Stieler had just 10 cents yesterday. Here is where the rest of the money went, according to his expense account:

One aeroplane	$9,600
One aeroplane	4,500
One aeroplane	5,500
One aeroplane without motor	2,000
One aeroplane motor	6,250
Installing motor	600
One automobile	1,700
Organizing aeroplane company	1,250
Jewelry for wife	200
Living and traveling expenses	13,400

"Three of those planes were bought for the aviation company," he said. "The other, the glider with the fine engine, I used to carry my wife and myself around Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas until the money gave out.

"It was great sport, but I wish now that the cops had been smarter—that they had caught me at the start. Then I would have two years of my sentence behind me, instead of all of it before me."

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 8.—The Caronia left Liverpool this afternoon with the body of former United States Judge Peter Grosscup of Chicago, who died at sea on Oct. 1. The body has lain in a private mortuary in Liverpool since its arrival.

It is now known that the late Judge Grosscup had an attack of heart trouble of a serious character on the second day of his voyage. He asked the ship's doctor in the event of his death to have his body embalmed and sent home. This the surgeon did, attending to the matter personally.

The body will be met in New York by the judge's son-in-law, Leslie Moon.

THREE R'S LOSE PLACE TO MORALS IN SCHOOL STUDY

The old idea that teaching the three R's is the chief aim of school is all wrong. So said Theodore S. Soarez, professor of religious education at the University of Chicago, speaking before the second joint meeting of superintendents, assistants, and principals of the Chicago schools yesterday.

"Morals is the big subject of teaching today," Prof. Soarez said. "We do not need any other subjects than the teaching of the morals of right living. We need a realization that morality is simply social living, which can be learned like any other art by practice and by studying great examples."

THERE IS A CITY

Now is built the new city of Chicago on the ashes of 1871. This company made the rebuilding possible.

The public records of real estate ownership were destroyed in the Great Fire. Only the private records of the founders of this company were saved.

Yet so accurate and complete were these private records, that they were accepted by the courts in proof of property ownership. On this security, eastern capitalists loaned funds for the new city.

The care, the accuracy which entitled these records to such respect, obtains today. Fifty years have served to perfect and strengthen the organization. It is to this company that the real estate buyer or lender comes for the Abstract of Title or the Title Guarantee Policy that safeguards his interests in real estate matters.

Make sure you have such protection in your real estate purchase.

BIG RAIL RATE SESSION SET FOR CHICAGO OCT. 14

Heads of Lines Confer with Harding.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.— The nation-wide demand for reductions in freight rates was reflected in a seires of conferences, concluded today between the leading railway executives and President Harding, Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Charles C. McChord, chairman of the interstate commerce commission, and Senator Cummins of Iowa, chairman of the senate interstate commerce commission.

The railway executives present included T. De Witt Cuyler, representing security holders; Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania system; President Smith of the New York Central; President Hale Holden of the Burlington system, and Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southern Pacific board of directors.

Harding Asks Questions.

After the conference Mr. Cuyler said the president had inquired what progress was being made in the readjustment of rates. Mr. Cuyler declared rate reductions were dependent entirely on the ability of the railroads to cut operating expenses, indicating wage reductions must be made.

Senator Cummins said the railway executives would meet at Chicago Oct. 14 and had considered rate reductions which he believed they would approve at that meeting. To that meeting he said he expected the railroad men would invite "representatives of agricultural, shippers', commercial, and other organizations" to discuss rate and wage questions, probably seeking their support if the roads should agree on freight rate reductions, and appeal to the labor board for wage reductions and to the interstate commerce commission for rate adjustments.

Would Change Law.

The senator added that the railroad executives felt the wage fixing powers of the railroad labor board should be transferred by legislation to the interstate commerce commission which had authority over rates. This would require amendment to the Esch-Cummins transportation act.

Rate reductions also was the principal topic on the program at a meeting tonight of Democratic and Republican senators comprising the argicultural "bloc." Senators attending the meeting said there was a wide and vigorous demand for rate cuts, as imperative to the agricultural interests.

DEFER RAIL STRIKE ACTION

While railway strike ballot returns will be virtually complete tomorrow, brotherhood chiefs probably will take no definite action until late in the week —possibly not for ten days.

Warren S. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, speaking for his organization, made this announcement last night, and other rail union heads made similar statements.

The engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Order of Railway Conductors, and the Switchmen's Union of North America are the four important unions which have yet to announce the results of the strike vote.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the federated shop crafts have voted strongly in favor of a walkout. W. G. Lee, president of the former, announced he would not authorize a strike unless supported by one or more of the brotherhoods.

General chairmen of the conductors' organization will meet tomorrow night to consider the verdict of their men. The other brotherhoods will hold similar meetings tomorrow or Tuesday.

50 YEARS AFTER

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mack.

They were married during the early stages of the Chicago fire. Today they celebrate their golden wedding.

WHILE the great Chicago fire was getting under way in 1871 a young couple, in blissful ignorance of the conflagration, were being married at Pastor John's church, then called Hartman's church, on Ohio street, near Wells.

They were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mack, 120 North Karlov avenue, who will celebrate their golden wedding today.

"Many of the guests who attended our wedding went home and found their houses in ruins," said Mr. Mack yesterday.

A reception will be given today in the couple's honor by their niece, Mrs. Fred Heyden, 4729 West Washington boulevard.

Mr. Mack was born in Plymouth, Mass., on Oct. 26, 1849, and came to Chicago in 1857. His wife was born in Germany on Dec. 21, 1848. She came to Chicago sixty years ago. Their only surviving child is Charles L. Mack, 720 South Clinton street.

MINERS REFUSE 'NO STRIKE' PACT HARDING ASKED

Chiefs Say Union Forbade Such Pledge.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—Efforts to reach an agreement for a miners' wage scale to supplant the national agreement, which expires next March, failed today after a four hour consultation between President Harding, Secretaries Hoover and Davis, and officials of the United Mine Workers.

Answer Harding Call.

The conference was held when the central committee of the United Mine Workers of America, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the organization, came here at the request of President Harding to discuss with the administration the possibility of an undertaking to arbitrate any ultimate differences with the operators prior to the expiration of the national agreements in March, thus averting any chance of a strike.

The committee was received at the White House at noon, being the guests of the President at luncheon, and continuing the discussions until late in the day.

Hoover Tells Difficulties.

At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Hoover issued a statement which contained this assertion:

"Owing to the situation of the miners' leaders as the result of the decision of the Indianapolis convention to defer discussions of the new agreement until after their February meeting, it had been impossible to come to any immediate arrangement."

The officials of the United Mine Workers of America who were present at the conference were:

WOMAN KILLED BY FALL.

Mrs. Julia Drauger, 537 Maple avenue, Blue Island, fell from the rear steps of her home last night and was instantly killed. She was 84 years old.

LIGREGNI ASKS PARDON BOARD TO STAY NOOSE

Crime Foes Line Up to Fight His Appeal.

Frank Ligregni, condemned to die for the murder of his wife, Genevieve, a Cook county school teacher, yesterday appealed to the pardon board for a recommendation for executive clemency or commutation of sentence. The date for his execution has been set for Oct. 21.

First Assistant State's Attorney Edward S. Day announced that every effort will be made to block favorable action by the board. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the Chicago crime commission, will also go to Springfield Tuesday when the hearing is held.

"I suppose he will follow the usual schedule of the condemned murderer," said Mr. Day. "If he is turned down by the board he will probably file a petition asking for a jury to pass upon his sanity."

Indications that Ligregni would call for an examination by alienists before he goes to the gallows was seen when he began to feign insanity.

He refused to talk to Jailer Peter Lawrence or his guards. Smoking a big black cigar he marched up and down his cell, refusing to heed questions. He opened his mouth only to mutter incoherently.

Ligregni, who was separated from his wife, went to the place she was boarding last winter and shot her three times. She was teaching at Bartlett, Ill.

DRASTIC PENALTY ON PROFITEERING IN NEW COAL BILL

President Is Given Broad Powers by Kenyon.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Two far-reaching bills hitting at the coal industry were introduced in the senate today by Senator Kenyon, Iowa, chairman of the committee on education and labor, which has been investigating conditions in the West Virginia coal fields.

One of the Kenyon measures imposes heavy penalties for profiteering in coal. The other is a revision of the original Calder bill giving broad powers to the President, the federal trade commission, the geological survey, and the interstate commerce commission.

Wide Powers to President.

The Calder bill, as revised by Mr. Kenyon, provides that whenever the federal trade commission shall determine that an emergency exists "which seems likely to produce a shortage or bring about unusual or unwarranted or unreasonable coal prices and be detrimental to the public health," the President shall be empowered to fix maximum coal prices and dealers' commissions and margins.

The President also is authorized under such circumstances to deal in coal and to control its production and distribution. The President may go so far as to take over the operation of coal mines.

Some of the Penalties.

The companion bill provides a penalty of not less than $100 nor more than $10,000 for the first offense of a coal operator or dealer convicted of violation of the law and for each succeeding offense a fine of not less than $1,000 and imprisonment for not less than 90 days nor more than five years.

In defining what shall be considered profiteering the bill specified margins of profit for coal operators and dealers ranging from 10 to 40 cents per ton according to the amount of business done. Margins are provided not only for individual sales but also in the case of aggregate sales covering a year's period.

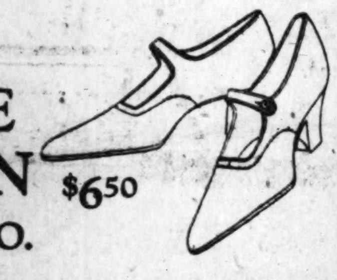
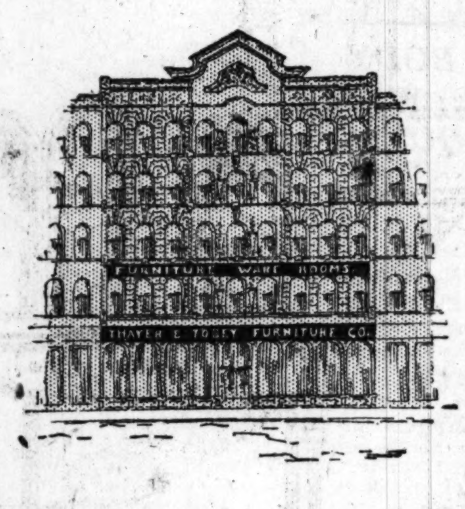
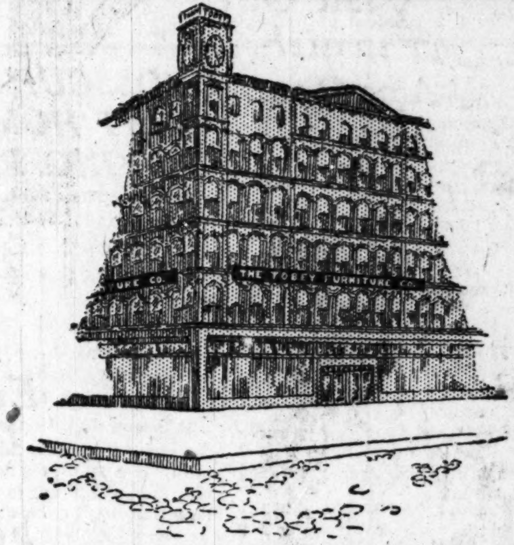
205 STATE STREET, SO.





THAYER & TOBEY FURNITURE CO.

77, 79, 81 State Street, adjoining the Garrett Block, afterwards the Central Music Hall, the site now occupied by Marshall Field & Co. Burned in the fire of 1871 and rebuilt immediately.



Wabash Avenue and Washington Street. This site was occupied by the residences of John B. Drake and Nathaniel P. Wilder until 1868. We have occupied this building since 1888.

The Fire: Before and Since

Fifty years ago today Tobey's burned to the ground.

The next day Tobey opened for business in the Tobey factory, then located at the southeast corner of Randolph and Jefferson Streets.

The day following, the owners of the burnt Sherman House rented the Gault House which Tobey completely furnished within a week.

Before the ashes had cooled, while many merchants were still figuring their losses, the Tobeys were working to rebuild Chicago.

They had to if they wished to continue in business, for, as Mr. Frank Tobey said, as he watched the store burn, "The entire city is going, our insurance won't be worth a continental."

Charles and Frank Tobey were of that group whose vision first saw the future of Chicago. Men of their type, living, dead, and yet to be born, make possible civic achievements like the World's Fair Exposition in 1893 that made Chicago the Wonder City of all times.

1856, 1871, 1893, 1921 have all found Tobey giving its best to Chicagoans. This store has weathered the Chicago Fire, the Civil, Spanish, and World wars, the country's financial panics, political changes, and has, above all, been a leader in the transition of the furniture business and its methods.

"Time will tell." A success of 65 years' duration must be the result of strong business principles based on integrity and honest merchandise.

Fifteen years ago at the time of our Golden Jubilee we ran the following advertisement in the Sunday Record-Herald of May 6, 1906:

"Of the men in business fifty years ago how many remain? What firms survived the fire of 1871?

"Among those already on the ground in 1856 when Charles Tobey began to sell furniture were the Farwells, the McCormicks, Wm. G. Hibbard, and Potter Palmer. Marshall Field came the same year, George M. Pullman two years later.

"The Merchants Loan and Trust Co., the only financial institution that has survived from those times to these, was organized in 1857.

"In its long years of service The Tobey Furniture Company has furnished many hotels. At the Palmer House there is Tobey furniture that has been in constant use for over 45 years.

"Presidents Lincoln, Grant, Hayes and Garfield, a list of distinguished cabinet officers, senators, chief justice, editors, governors, generals, mayors, and men like Potter Palmer, Joseph Medill, and E. H. Gary have bought Tobey furniture.

"Today Tobey furniture is being shipped to every state in the union and foreign countries.

"Integrity does count in this curious world, where truth is so often shamed and sham so often in evidence. This is perhaps the main lesson taught by the House of Tobey at its Golden Jubilee."

The account books of half a century ago, charred from the fire, are in our corner window during the celebration

HAS "U. S." EVER BEEN SIGNED TO A SCRAP OF PAPER?

McCumber Assails Bad Faith on Canal Tolls.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Passage of the Borah bill exempting American coastwise trading vessels from payment of Panama canal tolls would constitute an act of international bad faith paralleling Germany's ruthless violation of Belgian neutrality in 1914, Senator McCumber, North Dakota, charged in the senate today.

Senator McCumber's speech was one of several which enlivened the consideration of the Borah bill, scheduled to come to vote on Monday. The debate failed to reveal any change in the lineup of the opposing factions and unless there is some unexpected development over Sunday the measure will be passed by the senate by a majority of about a dozen votes.

Shall U. S. Wear German Brand?

"The world has branded Germany as a dishonorable nation because, with the exigency of a great war before her, in which military necessity was the controlling question, she declared that her treaty with Belgium was but 'a scrap of paper'," Senator McCumber said.

"Without any such exigency before us and without even an attempt being made to secure a modification of our solemn obligation, we are asked to declare that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty shall be treated as a mere scrap of paper. Our physical power to do this is just as unquestioned as the physical power of the German empire to break its treaty obligations with Belgium.

"What we would think of a proposition of taxing the American people to build a railroad from New York to San Francisco, taxing them to maintain that railroad, and then providing that trains of the Pennsylvania Railway company should operate freely without any expense or any tolls over that line of railway, and that no other railroad company should have the right to run its trains over this sacred track without the payment of tolls to meet the interest on the investment and the cost of upkeep.

"Case Is Exactly Parallel."

"Now that is exactly what we propose to do with reference to our coastwise vessels. The American people have paid for the canal. They are paying the interest upon the investment. They are paying for the upkeep. And we say to the owners of a certain line of vessels, the only monopoly in existence created by authority of congress: 'You shall have the use of this route without the payment of a cent.'"

Senator McCumber called attention to the arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, ratified by the senate on Sept. 25, 1914.

"I cannot doubt for a single moment," he said, "that the British government will claim that this law violates the treaty and will ask for arbitration, and the verdict will be against us, because all other countries of the world, being interested, take the same position as Great Britain does.

"Our Duty a Simple One."

"Our duty is a simple one: Keep our word. We have invited three other great nations of the earth to join us in a solemn compact to check the mad and exhausing race of the nations for naval supremacy. Let us not enter the council chamber with soiled hands."

Senator Ransdell of Louisiana insisted it was none of Great Britain's business what rates we charged our coastwise traffic."

"There is no moral question involved in free tolls," he said. "It is merely one of business judgment. In my opinion, the exemption is wise. There are no tolls on our improved harbors and lakes and rivers and great national highways; and the Panama canal should be treated the same."

WOMAN DIES OF GAS.

Mrs. Hulda Michaeli, 72 years old, 3713 Janssen street, a widow, was found yesterday in the bedroom of her home. Gas was escaping from open jets.

HE'LL SHARE IN $400,000

Hubert is one of the happy babies at the Salvation army's rescue home at 1332 North La Salle street, who was being weighed by Capt. Pearl Carey, in charge of the home, when Miss Agnes Foreman, chairman of the woman's division of the $400,000 drive for the army's home service work, to be put on Oct. 24-31, arrived to visit the home and see what was being done.

There are twenty-one girls in the home now and six babies, employment being found usually for the mother as soon as she is able to work, where she can have her baby with her. This accounts for the small number of babies in the home. The maternity home was given up on account of the limited quarters and the girls are sent either to Cook County hospital or Wesley, returning to the rescue home when they leave the hospital.

The rescue home is one of the sixteen major activities which the Salvation army maintains in Chicago and vicinity. Most of them are in need of the help they will receive if the $400,000 drive goes over the top. Lester Armour is chairman of the drive.

PICK GRAND JURY FOR VOTE FRAUD QUIZ TOMORROW

Judge Michael L. McKinley announced yesterday that he would impanel the special grand jury for the investigation of alleged violation of the election and civil service laws Monday morning at 10 o'clock in the county building. All sessions of the special body will be held there.

Lawyer Sticks to Plan to Cut Kin from His Will

The determination of Attorney Edward H. Sanford that his sister and brothers should not share in his estate was carried out in his will filed for probate yesterday. By its terms his $40,000 estate goes to his widow, Mrs. Emilie Farsky Sanford. One clause of the will reads: "It has been my fixed determination for more than ten years that no sister or brother of mine shall receive any part of my estate."

FEE GRABBERS IN "SPEED TRAPS" FACE INDICTMENT

County justices and village officials who derive their chief income from "speed traps" face indictment charging conspiracy when the grand jury meets this week. Assistant State's Attorney James W. Burke announced yesterday that he will ask at least twelve true bills against crooked village officials.

Numerous rural justices, their motorcycle policemen, and village trustees have been quizzed in the office of State's Attorney Crowe, and at least fifty more have been summoned for this week. Attorney Burke reported to Mr. Crowe that he has found conditions "deplorable" and intimated he has evidence to justify indictments against several magistrates and at least one whole village board.

Cops Get 50% of Fines.

Thus far he has discovered that in many instances motorcycle policemen get 50 per cent of the fines collected from alleged speeding motorists. In some instances village trustees and motorcycle cops go fifty-fifty on moneys collected. In others justices are kept in line by men higher up who refuse to send cases to them unless they take orders.

Frank Vosberg, justice of the peace at Melrose Park, was the first man called yesterday. He denounced the present system, declaring it smacked of the backwoods. He advocated salaries for justices. He said he believed this would lead high class lawyers to take office.

He was followed by W. A. Garry, a sergeant of police at Proviso. Garry admitted that he had made $400 last month. He said he had an arrangement with a township supervisor at Melrose Park by which he received 50 per cent of all moneys collected as fines. He said the arrangements had been made by a commissioner of highways. In addition to the percentage, he often received fees extra, he said.

Privileges Eagerly Sought.

Indications that the motorcycle "cop" privileges never go a begging is seen in the testimony of Fred W. Klingenhanger, president of the village of Bellwood. He said an attempt had been made at the last board meeting to put through an order giving the privileges to one man. The recipient offered to furnish his own car and take his pay out of fines.

The investigation was begun by officials of the Chicago Motor club. In a letter it asked all motorists who have grievances against Cook County "justices" to consult the Motor club's legal department

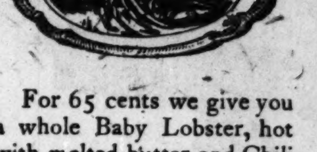
"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

You can't find a more convenient, comfortable, delightful place to dine. Here you have all the privacy you get in the best dining places. You dine at your own table. We could accommodate more people by the boarding-house style of big tables but we refuse to lessen your comfort and privacy.

Since Rector's (which was under the same ownership and management) the North American is Chicago's Greatest Sea-Food Restaurant



For 65 cents we give you a whole Baby Lobster, hot with melted butter and Chili sauce, or cold with Chili sauce.

An evening dinner specialty of ours is a great big baked Idaho potato, with plenty of butter, for only 15 cents. It will be a big mealy one, weighing about a pound and a half and baked just as it should be baked. Can you imagine a more appetizing dinner than fried oysters and a baked potato? With plain or sweet rolls or ryebread and butter or honey for 5 cents—and an individual 2-cup pot of coffee with real cream for 10 cents, that dinner will cost you only 65 cents.

Or that same dinner with a whole broiled lobster for only 95c.

While the North American Restaurant is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of Rector's it also makes a specialty of all the other good things which you love to eat. Juicy steaks, chicken, lamb chops, pork tenderloin—each of these is a specialty here.

For lunch or dinner or after the theatre, today, or any day, we suggest oysters—seven of them (not the conventional half dozen)—fried to order. They will be fried just for you—to order. And you get them smoking hot—big fine fat New York Counts—and with them you may have Tartar or Chili sauce or ketchup, whichever you prefer. They will cost only 35c.

Or for 35 cents we will cook a real Oyster Stew for you, in an individual dish, before your eyes. In each stew we use 6 big New York Counts, an entire bottle of Certified Milk and a big piece of butter. If you are fond of fish you can't buy anything finer than the Halibut and peas which you get here for 35 cents—a great big piece, and not dry and tasteless but sweet and juicy.

From 7 A. M., until midnight, every day, Sundays and holidays too, there is ready for you here just the food which will tickle your palate the most. Much of it is cooked before your eyes. It all reaches you fresh and steaming hot. Most of the portions are ample for two.

The North American Restaurant is the lowest priced dining place in Chicago considering the quality of the food, and the size of portions.

And whatever you do eat breakfast here. For 5 cents you may have a big sweet roll, or zwieback, or coffee cake, or fresh toast with butter or honey: For 10 cents an individual pot of coffee (2 cups) with real cream: For 25 cents a delicious honey waffle with 3 strips of bacon, butter and pure maple sap or honey: 4 strips of bacon with 2 fresh eggs fried in butter for 30 cents: Or for 45 cents a big piece of real ham with 2 fried eggs.

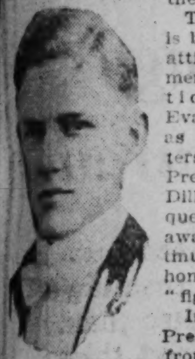
NORTHWESTERN VOTES TO STOP CLASS RUSHES

President Scott Decries "Recent Rumors."



C. WALTER YOUNG.
[L. L. Ray Photo.]

Class "rushing" at Northwestern university appears to be a thing of the past.

This indication is brought by the attitude of all men's organizations on the Evanston campus as shown in letters requested by President Walter Dill Scott on the question of doing away with or continuing the time honored class "fights."

In the words of President Scott from a long statement issued yesterday:

"All organizations of men students have been asked to vote and to present their attitude in writing. The vote very clearly indicates that the student body is determined that class rushes of every form shall be abolished, at least for the present."

Never the Same Old Rushes.

Should, however, the class rushes ever be restored, President Scott asserts, they would probably be held under the following restrictions:

"Held in the daytime.

"Limited to less than two hours.

"Confined to the athletic field.

"Be subject to the regulations of the student council or other representative organizations."

President Scott's statement decried at some length "widely circulated rumors" in connection with the recent rush between the freshmen and sophomores at Northwestern and also defended the class rushes of the past.

President Defends Custom.

"A class rush between the freshman and sophomore classes has been an annual event for many years," he said.

"The rush is supervised by the student council and, so far as I can learn, no one has ever been injured in any rush, neither has any participant ever regretted taking part. The recent rush was no exception, and, so far as we know, no one was injured therein."

"Arthur Persinger, a sophomore, was not tied head down on the pier; he did not become delirious; he was not released by the police; his life was not endangered, and, as he expressed it, 'the freshmen treated me nice.'

"In connection with the rush, four freshmen treated Arthur Persinger in a manner contrary to the regulations of the student council. The matter in their case, therefore, is one for disciplinary action.

Says Girls Took No Part.

"The girls of the college did not engage in hair pulling and took no part whatsoever in any form of class rush.

"Leighton Mount did not take part in the rush. After it was all over, he claimed to have been successful in throwing a sophomore into the lake.

"He stated very definitely the day before the rush that inasmuch as his mother objected to his association with a particular girl he would leave home and that she would never see him again. All evidence indicates that he has carried out the first part of his threat, but, like most boys of 18, he is expected to return home."

Says Persinger Was Bound.

Capt. Dennis McEnery, who was in charge of the Evanston police on the night of the recent class fight, differs with President Scott as to the case of young Persinger.

"The original statement issued by us and printed in THE TRIBUNE regarding the Persinger case is correct," he said last night. "Desk Sergeant Charles Paasch received a telephone call from G. C. Shepard, 938 Edgemere road, Evanston, telling us that a boy had been bound, head down, to the piling 300 feet off the Calvary beach.

"By the time two of our men reached the scene in the police auto Persinger had been rescued by two fishermen. The student verified Shepard's story in a statement made to Sergt. Paasch that night."

Meanwhile Mrs. J. L. Mount, mother of the vanished freshman, expressed her opinion of President Scott's declaration in one brief sentence:

"They're trying to shift the blame."

Classes Elect Presidents.

Results of the annual class election at Northwestern university showed the selection of the following:

Senior class, C. Walter Young, Canby, Minn., president.

Junior class, Miss Margaret Beegle, Oak Park, president.

Freshman class, Carlton Varney, former New Trier High school athlete, president.

Miss Margaret McGurn found that she was to be the guest of honor at a luncheon and would not have to take up her duties for the day when she came down to work at the Marshall Field store yesterday. She has been employed continuously by the firm for forty-five years.

The luncheon was given her by sixty fellow employés. Forty-five years ago Miss McGurn obtained a position with Field, Leiter & Co., as a sewing machine operator. Later she was placed in charge of the carpet sewing staff.

Why Buy a New Automobile?

A Way to Save

Unusual interest is being shown by the public just now in the many opportunities up and down Automobile Row to make big savings by buying slightly used cars, rather than new. And there is a good deal of logic in trying to save the depreciation, freight, and war-tax.

If one buys from a reputable dealer, a used car is usually a genuine bargain. For instance, there is a 1921 Marmon 34 on the market, a 2-passenger speedster, especially designed, and practically new, which is offered by the Marmon Chicago Company, 2230 Michigan Avenue. It is the greatest bargain in Chicago today, priced so low that if you are interested you should go at once to see it. It will not remain on the market long.

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Medical Authorities Agree

that complete rest is a cure for many diseases. And as William Brady, M. D., noted author and physician says: "It wastes energy to have an uncomfortable bed either in sickness or in health."

The ordinary woven wire, coil or national spring not only wastes energy because it is uncomfortable, but may cause serious illness by distorting the spine, and causing pressure on the nerves. A symptom of this is backache.

The Rome De Luxe Bedspring is scientifically constructed to support the "in" curves of the body which ordinary springs do not touch. It does this because it gently gives, to the prominent parts of the anatomy. Two people of unequal weight may sleep side by side in perfect comfort, because the Rome De Luxe Bedspring does not sag.

Examine the Rome De Luxe Bedspring at your dealer's. The more carefully you compare it with any spring at any price the more certainly you will recognize its superior luxurious comfort.

It is always finished in Rome Gray enamel and on the side rail appears, the Rome Quality Trademark which identifies all Rome products. Look for it—it is your guarantee. The De Luxe is interchangable—fits either wood or metal beds.

ALASKA IS O.K., SAYS ENVOY SENT TO INVESTIGATE

Refutes Stories of Hard Times Sent States.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—What's the matter with Alaska?

"Inadequate and costly transportation," says Dan A. Sutherland, the Alaska delegate in congress.

"Too much red tape," says the interior department, which would take over the administrative functions of all other departments pertaining to Alaska.

"Absentee government landlordism, divided departmental control, and hampering restrictions of development of natural resources," says Representative Curry, chairman of the house committee on territories, who is pressing for legislation to place all Alaska resources at the disposition of a resident development board.

Wall Street Complaining?

"Nothing at all the matter with Alaska," retorts the department of agriculture, while the conservationists insinuate that the wails of distress emanate not so much from the Alaskans as from certain plutocrats of Wall street, hitherto thwarted in their endeavors to corner the natural riches of Alaska, but still hoping for a new dispensation.

President Harding and his cabinet have devoted several sessions to discussion of the Alaska problem. The house committee has held extensive hearings on the Curry bill and is now awaiting the return of Secretary of the Interior Fall to submit his views before action is taken on the measure.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace dispatched E. A. Sherman, asociate forester, to Alaska early last summer to investigate the alleged retrogression of the territory. Mr. Sherman has just returned and submitted an elaborate report, declaring that Alaska is suffering from nothing more than its share of the world-wide hard times. All the industries of the territory, he reports, are doing as well as if not better than the same industries elsewhere.

Sherman Says All's O. K.

"In the face of such a showing," the Sherman report concludes, "one marvels more and more at the origin of this report that Alaska is on the downward grade. I would like to know the true inwardness of that idea.

"Why has the impression that business in Alaska is in such a deplorable state been so generally 'sold' to the people of this country? Why is it that we have all been led to believe that Alaska is not progressing, that the territory is run down at the heel, commerce going to the dogs, and the people fleeing the region like rats from a sinking ship?

"The growth of our northland is now a steady growth, in which the resident Alaskan, and not the promoter or underwriter, is being the chief beneficiary. That seems to me to be most desirable."

Alaskans Are Satisfied.

By way of preface to his findings Mr. Sherman says:

"Everybody I met on my recent visit to Alaska was worried about the territory excepting the people who live there.

"If you will examine the census returns for Alaska for 1920, you are certain to draw from the figures renewed faith and confidence in the region. It is true that in 1920 the population of the territory was 9,457 less than in 1910, a decrease of 14.47 per cent.

"But let us examine the nature of this decrease. In the first place, there were 1,209 Chinese in Alaska in 1910, as compared with only fifty-six in 1920, a decrease of 1,153 Chinese. During the same period the Japanese part of the population of the territory decreased 601—a total oriental decrease of 1,754.

"People elsewhere may sympathize with the territory for this loss of population, but people in Alaska do not consider it either a social or economic loss.

"Furthermore, it is interesting to note the increased proportion of native born whites in the territory."

BOY HIKES FROM SPOKANE SEEKING HIS MOTHER HERE

ANNA A. SLOAN.

Where is Anna A. Sloan, a widow, who formerly resided at 4338 Vincennes avenue, Chicago? Her son, John Sloan, who reached here Friday from Spokane, Wash., wants to know. He hiked all the way to Chicago from Spokane, hoping to find his mother, from whom he has been separated for twenty-one years. At the Vincennes avenue address Sloan was told his mother had moved away last June. Sloan is 23 years old and an ex-service man.

AIR SPEED MARKS SOUGHT TODAY IN CONTESTS HERE

James Curran, crack pilot, and an S. V. A. scout plane, will be the stellar attraction of the flying meet that is to be held this afternoon at Ashburn field by the Aero club of Illinois. The airman will make an effort to break all Chicago speed records.

The S. V. A. scout ship, which is owned by R. C. Diggins, is rated at about 160 miles an hour. Curran, in a flight timed by officials of the Aero club, will attempt to speed the ship up to 175 miles. This ship is Chicago's only entry in the Pulitzer trophy race, the classic airplane event of the year, that will be held in Omaha, Neb., Nov. 3.

There will be an altitude contest at Ashburn field today, gliding contests, stunting exhibitions, and a twenty mile airplane race around the field.

Charles Dickinson, 65 years old, America's oldest living pilot, will take part in the contest.

INDUSTRIES OF RUSSIA HIT BY "TIRED FEELING"

Soviet Workers Keep Busy Dodging Work.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

REVAL, Oct. 8.—Russian industries admittedly produce less than one-fourth of the pre-revolution output.

The bolsheviki explain their weakness as due to a lack of raw material and spare parts for which the allies' blockade and the disorganization of transportation are equally blamed.

The lack of materials and spare parts is surely a great factor, but in those industries which were operating, so far as I could learn, the low production principally was due to the fact that no one would work.

Factory after factory has gone to pot because when the laborers became all powerful they replaced the experts and chiefs, they being bourgeoisie, with men who knew more about how to get votes than to run machinery. Now, in many places the experts are back at their old jobs trying to rebuild the machinery which was destroyed through incompetence or neglect, but they have no authority over the men, so they are not accomplishing anything.

Oil Production Decreases.

Probably the best example of what the soviet organization has done to industry can be found in the Baku oil fields, which before the war gave jobs to 40,000 of the best paid workers in Russia and produced about 144,000,000 gallons monthly. Now 30,000 men are employed, and the production has dropped to about 28,200,000 gallons, and is decreasing gradually, despite drilling and the opening of new gushers.

I visited two fields, one of which was the Balakani Sabuntchi, covering an area of six and a half square miles and containing 3,000 wells. Formerly it was the largest producing field in the world. Viewed from a hill, the field was an imposing sight, with the high derricks erected so closely that the impression was given that all were parts of the same structure. As the government automobile in which we were riding chugged on three cylinders into the maze not a human being was in sight. The place seemed utterly deserted.

What's the Use of Working?

After motoring several blocks we finally passed a guard and came to four wells which were working—two gushers and two bailers. At one bailer, which was being operated by fifteen men, I asked several workmen how they were progressing. Two who spoke German complained that they were not getting enough food. While I was talking a bailer valve stuck and there was a call for men, with practically no response. It took at least half an hour before the men standing around for just such an emergency laid hands on the bailer to pull it aside so that the valve could be fixed. The valve itself was fixed in ten minutes.

I asked the bailer chief if he noticed how slow the men were in taking hold.

"Yes," he replied, "but they argue why work when they get their pay anyhow, or what is the use of working for a government which will not give enough to work on. It is impossible to attempt to operate industries under those conditions. The chief loafers are the politicians belonging to the councils, who hold meetings at the busiest hour. If one attempts to get a little action through discipline often they oust him.

Conscientious Workers Suffer.

"The conscientious workmen, who are in the majority, suffer, of course, and they refuse to work because it seems futile. You will notice that more than three-fourths of the wells are idle, yet we have nearly as great a man power as before the war. The reason why the output is what it is—although less than a fourth of the pre-war production—is because we are working a lot of big producers which give us a lot without hard work."

The nationalization of the fishing industry, which before the war sent its catch to Astrakhan and vicinity, proved such a failure that the bolsheviki returned the industry to the fishermen. When the government took charge there were 30,000 men employed; when it quit there were only 15,000, and the output had dropped below the local needs.

When working for the soviet the fishermen managed to catch nothing. One fisherman told me that it was foolish to work for the government, as it did not make any difference whether he worked or not and, anyway, he got little or nothing in return.

Factories Are Idle.

Going up the Volga one sees the smokeless chimneys of factories towering above the surrounding misery like huge monuments to a prosperous past. While waiting for a boat at Saratoff I attempted to visit one of the cotton mills, but found it closed. I walked in through a hole in the iron gate of the fence surrounding the plant. A wooden fence and small buildings adjacent to the main plant were falling to pieces.

In the factory building itself the windows were broken. I sometimes wonder whether in all Russia there is a building with all its windows intact. I tried to peek into a window, but all the spinning that I could see was being done by a spider.

Low Pay Causes Shutdowns.

Although I did not see a single spinning factory operating during my trip up the Volga, an inspector told me several were working at from one-third to one-half of the normal capacity. About 30,000 men are employed in these mills which before the war gave work to 100,000. He said that one of the biggest causes of the industrial collapse was the fact that the workmen were getting much less under the soviet régime than they got from the capitalists from whose clutches the revolution saved them.

"Just Because" Is Girl's Reason for Taking Poison

Miss Mary Stewart, who said she lived at the Calvert hotel, 1801 South Wabash avenue, was taken to the Passavant hospital yesterday suffering from poison. "Just because" was her only reply to questions as to why she had taken the drug. She had called a taxicab to Division and Clark streets and became ill after entering it.

The new Winter Garden is a self-service restaurant—plus. If you forget something, call an "extra service maid"—there's one always handy.

DO YOU KNOW—

—that at the Winter Garden you can get a whole broiled baby lobster, with melted sweet butter, served hot—or cold—with chili sauce for 60c?

—that delicious broiled whitefish, with peas and potatoes, costs but 35c at the Winter Garden?

—that the Winter Garden serves a wonderful sirloin steak, weighing 1¼ pounds (enough for two), broiled, with butter sauce on top, to order, for 75c?

—that you can get Fried Oysters, 6 big ones, with tartar sauce, for 35c?

—that the Winter Garden serves real coffee, pot (2 cups), for 10c?

—that here you get French pastry, pies, baskets and tortens for 15c and 20c?

—that there are hundreds of other delicious dishes, equally low priced, in this new self-service restaurant?

The Winter Garden is open every day from 7 a. m. to midnight—Sundays included. Music 6 to 8.

Princess Sedan with Ansted Engine $2785

Here, briefly, is the story of why a limited number of people may now get remarkable closed car values at remarkably low prices—

When the general economic condition demanded lower prices, it did not affect every manufacturer the same. It was one thing to cut the prices in order to liquidate a stock of cars, but the solution to the problem lies in building better cars for less money.

This is just what Lexington has been able to accomplish!

While the Lexington's prices are unusually low, considering the high character of their closed cars, yet the great significance of this announcement lies in the opposite direction.

The Princess Sedan is the result of Lexington's determination to excel in one thing—a fine, luxurious, and efficient car that will maintain its high efficiency with a minimum of attention over a long period of time.

Lexington is able to achieve this success, because, from the first blueprints to the finished car, everything is carried out under one direction. The various steps of manufacture and assembly are conducted practically under one roof. Each is considered not as a separate process but as an important means toward the accomplishment of the final result—a car with a perfect unity in appearance, balanced by performance.

Associated with Lexington in the United States Automotive Corporation are many factories, effecting vast manufacturing economies and affording perfect control of the quality at every stage of production.

The Princess Sedan is built with such engineering correctness, such fineness in materials, such deliberate, painstaking workmanship, that it will endure and perform in excess of previous standards, and give the owner a permanent investment of unrivalled worth.

The Princess Sedan body is practically a full, built-up job. The glass drops into the doors and is raised and lowered with a crank. The neatness and completeness of its interior furnishings and appointments leaves nothing to be desired. Color options are Blue Black and Bronze Green; upholstery in Spanish leather, exquisitely trimmed.

It offers new economy of operation and greater adaptability to driving requirements because it is lighter and more economical of fuel and tires. There is less load for the motor and it is free from the usual body twist and top-heaviness, making it better suited to use on all kinds of roads.

Its most important single feature is the Ansted Engine, rapidly becoming recognized everywhere as the world's greatest stock car motor. This motor, because of its marvelous flexibility, quietness, and absence of vibration helps make the Princess Sedan exceptionally easy to handle. You simply cannot understand what a relief and pleasure it is to drive it!

Let us explain the many advantages of the Ansted Engine, and acquaint you with the great value, beauty, comfort, and economy of the Princess Sedan.

The factory's policy of limited production on this model warrants us in emphatically urging you not to delay a moment!

U. S. APPROVAL OF ILLIANA HARBOR TO BE REQUESTED

Delegation to Ask Naming of Commission.

A delegation from the Association of Commerce with representatives from the states of Illinois and Indiana are preparing to go to Washington within the next week to ask congress to appoint a fifth member of the commission for Illinois harbor, an interstate project to be built in Wolf lake, on the Illinois and Indiana line.

At the last sessions of the Indiana and Illinois legislatures bills were passed for the creation of a commission to build the harbor, two to be named by each state and a fifth by the government.

Action by Congress Asked.

Senator Medill McCormick of Illinois and Representative Wood of Indiana recently presented resolutions to the senate and house asking congress to appoint the fifth member and to approve the commission and the project of creating the interstate harbor. It is not expected that any opposition will be made, as it has the official indorsement of both states.

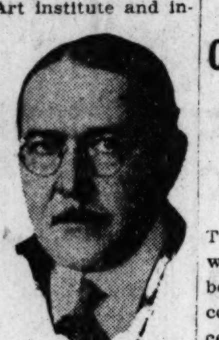
When completed the harbor, according to plans, will be one of the largest in the world. A series of large docks will be built at its entrance in Lake Michigan and the channel connecting Lake Michigan with Wolf lake will be dredged to admit the largest type of boats. Wolf lake also will be dredged and docks built along its shores capable of taking care of the growth of tonnage expected for the next fifty years.

Connects with Waterways.

The harbor will connect with the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence waterways to the Atlantic coast and also with the Illinois waterways system from Lake Michigan to the Gulf.

ROBERT B. HARSHE APPOINTED HEAD OF ART INSTITUTE

Elevated from Post of Assistant.



ROBERT B. HARSHE

Robert Bartholow Harshe, formerly a student at the Art institute and internationally known as an artist, was chosen director of the institution yesterday. He succeeds George William Eggers, who, after holding the post for five years, resigned Oct. 1 to accept a similar position with the Denver Art institute.

Mr. Harshe, who has been associate director of the Art institute for nearly a year, is considered particularly fitted to head the largest art school in the world.

Fitted by Experience.

After the completion of his studies here and abroad, he became, in 1902, supervisor of manual arts in Columbus, Ga. In 1905 he was instructor of fine arts at the University of Missouri; from 1908 to 1913, assistant professor of graphic art at Leland Stanford Jr. university; director of the public museum in Oakland, Cal., in 1915, going from there to the Carnegie institute in Pittsburgh, where he served as assistant director of the fine arts department until he came to Chicago.

On International Jury.

For a time he was secretary of the International Jury of Awards, and on one occasion went to Paris as one of the three American members to the International Congress of Art Education.

Since Mr. Harshe has been with the Art institute he has brought about several notable additions to the institution. Among these were the establishment of a printing department, where the arts of printing are taught, and the jewelry department, where the making of exquisite designs for jewelry is carried on.

ARMISTICE WEEK WILL OPEN WITH TREE PLANTING

Ceremony Set for Lincoln Memorial at Capital.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8—[Special.] To celebrate the opening of Armistice week, Nov. 7, an armistice tree will be planted on the grounds of the Lincoln memorial here. Plans for the ceremony to mark the calling of the conference on the limitation of armament by President Harding are being completed by Lieut. Col. C. O. Sherrill of the department of public buildings and grounds and the American Forestry association, which will have charge of the tree planting.

Asks Illinois to Set Record.

"We are calling upon the entire country to plant an armistice tree some time during the week of Nov. 7," said Charles Lathrop, president of the American Forestry association. "A memorial tree, on the grounds of the Lincoln memorial will be a particularly fitting mark for generations to come of the date upon which President Harding called the limitations of arms conference, as well as for the date of the signing of the armistice. Let Lincoln's great state set a record. An American elm, selected by Col. Sherrill, is particularly appropriate as typifying all that is best in Americanism."

At 23d Street Entrance.

The American elm, which will fit in with the landscape plans of the architects in charge of the grounds about Lincoln memorial, probably will be placed at the 23d street entrance to the memorial, just on the edge of the drive that leads to the Potomac river. This part of the grounds is nearing completion rapidly.

VETERANS OFF FOR CONVENTION OF THE LEGION

Hackett Boosters in Cheering Spirit.

With the same old rollicking cheer that resounded through Brittany three years ago more than 400 veterans of the world war whooped their way through the Dearborn station last night and boarded special trains for Decatur. They were delegates and alternates from Cook county to the third annual state convention of the American Legion, which opens tomorrow in Decatur.

A rapid canvass of the first train that pulled out indicated that most of the men aboard were pledged to Col. Horatio B. Hackett, one of the three strongest contenders for state commander.

The Hackett people evidently "put one over" on the other factions by grabbing off all reservations and filling the first special train. They were headed by the colonel himself and Maj. Reed Landis. The others will follow today.

Clinnin Boosters Busy.

Boosters for Col. John V. Clinnin among the crowd that last night rallied around the former commander of the 130th infantry and the strength of their "tiger" would indicate that their favorite will be well up in the race when the balloting starts.

The two factions headed by Hackett and Clinnin are making frantic efforts to block the reëlection of William R. McCauley of Olney because of his alleged connection with the Small-Lundin-Thompson political organizations.

McCauley Claims Chicago Votes.

That the McCauley contingent was making an eleventh hour effort to stem the tide against their "second term" candidate by publishing reports that McCauley would get 50 per cent of the Chicago delegations was charged by the Hackett men and they pointed to evidence that two-thirds of the Cook county and Lake county delegations were pledged for the former commander of the 124th field artillery, 33d division, who was the only artillery colonel wounded in battle.

TRACES CRASH OF ZR-2 TO LACK OF PROPER STUDY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—[From the London Telegraph.]—The court of inquiry investigating the ZR-2 disaster has made public an official report stating that the accident was due to the "failure of the structure" and saying that the outbreak of fire immediately following the sundering of the airship was responsible for the deaths.

The court states that many new modifications were included in the ship's design and brings out the following points:

"It is evident that in some cases there was a lack of vital aerodyamic information as to the effect of these modifications on the strength of the structure.

"The design should have been examined and discussed by an official and competent committee before the ship actually was constructed. There is no evidence to show that this was done, although there was plenty of opportunity after the armistice."

Paris Paper Is Gloomy Over U. S. Parley.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The Paris newspaper Liberte this evening pessimistically forecasts the failure of the Washington disarmament conference, stating:

"As the date approaches the heads of the governments are less anxious to attend, as it will not be a pleasant pastime but a difficult political game. "A conflict between the United States and Japan has for a long time been regarded as likely to result in a second international war. No human force was able to prevent the European war. Everything attempted precipitated it. Will the Washington conference be more successful than The Hague?

"The delegates will not grab Japan by the shoulder and ask it if it wants war—yes or no. Japan is not even named in the agenda. But the Chinese question is there, and speaking of China without mentioning Japan is as difficult as a pre-war discussion of Alsace-Lorraine without mentioning Germany."

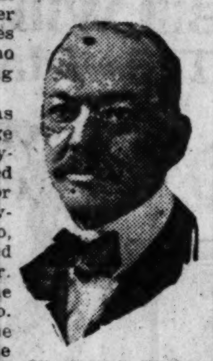
JAPAN TO ACCEPT PROGRAM

TOKIO, Oct. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—Japan probably will accept the American agenda for the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and far eastern questions, but may suggest additions to it, according to information in responsible circles here. These additions would avoid concrete questions but would include general principles, such as equal opportunity through the entire Pacific. The agenda was discussed by the cabinet today and will be submitted to the advisory council on Monday.

Japan should propose for the agenda a number of subjects relating to the Pacific, it is asserted by the Asahi Shimbun. These subjects should include, first, the application of the Anglo-Japanese commercial treaty to Australia; second, the favored-nations customs treatment in Indo-China; third, recognition of the principle of equal opportunity, based upon the C class mandatory rule in zones placed under the mandates of England, Australia and New Zealand by the treaty of Versailles.

Disarmament of American territories in the Pacific should be urged by Japan at the Washington conference, declared Dr. Saburo Yamada, dean of the Imperial University of Law, in an address before the National Policy association here last night.

WIFE SEEKS HER HUSBAND, MISSING SINCE LAST JULY



CHARLES E. KINSEY

Mrs. Ada Kinsey of Benton Harbor, Mich., yesterday appealed to THE TRIBUNE to aid her in her search for her husband, Charles E. Kinsey, who has been missing since July 19.

Mr. Kinsey was formerly a village official in Maywood, having lived in the suburb for many years. Several years ago, however, he moved to Benton Harbor.

On July 17 he drove to Chicago. Two days later he put his automobile in a garage and has not been seen since.

WORKING GIRLS' CLUBS URGED TO LESSEN PERILS

Establishing of many clubs where working girls can enjoy a wholesome life and better companionship is recommended as a solution of the housing problem for women in a report published yesterday by the Chicago Community Trust, 10 South La Salle street.

The report covers a survey of conditions made by college professors and social workers under the direction of Miss Annie T. Trotter. It declares that charitable homes for working girls have proved failures and shows housing conditions in Chicago for "non-family" women to be inadequate and unsatisfactory, with the "lodging house peril" for young girls still in existence.

Clubs with regulations such as will hold normal girls who like to go out in the evenings are urged. Slightly stricter clubs for very young employed girls; model homes for waitresses, and homes for art, music and professional girl students under 21 years also are proposed.

Dentist Who Sued Crane for Teeth Must Pay Wife

Dr. Emil A. Schmuck, a dentist, who was recently awarded a judgment of $2,000 for a set of false teeth made for Herbert C. Crane Sr., was arraigned before Judge Charles A. McDonald yesterday to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for failure to pay $300 temporary alimony to his wife, Mrs. Grace Della Schmuck. He was ordered to pay $100 immediately and $200 within the next thirty days. Her bill states her husband has an income of $15,000 a year and charges him with desertion.

MISSING MAN FOUND DEAD.

The body of Charles Szpila, 23 years old, 1638 Wright street, missing since last Saturday, was found in the river near North avenue bridge yesterday.

GERMANS DICKER WITH BRITISH ON MORATORIUM

Bankers Pave Way for Reparations Deal.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 8.—From a reliable entente source it has been learned that a proposal for a moratorium on Germany's reparations payment for at least three years unofficially has been made by big German banking houses, in behalf of the government, to British banking interests. Should this exchange of views between the financiers result in any tangible success it is expected that the government officials who inspired the proposal will step into the limelight.

The members of the guarantee commission, an offspring of the reparations commission, were not surprised to learn that the moratorium idea was taking hold, inasmuch as certain members believe that the fulfillment of the reparations payments, which it is their duty to supervise, is now impossible, and that Germany's indsutrial effort in straining to fulfill them would result in further harm to the entente's industrial and economic status.

Trying to Stabilize Finances.

The moratorium is one of four items planned for the stabilization of Germany's finances which are occupying the attention of the nation's political, financial, and industrial life. One of them—the Wiesbaden pact between the French and German reconstruction ministers—has become a fact. The others are an internal cerdit backed by industries, banks, and real estate owners, and a few American credits

Concerning the report that Wall street groups have offered the government enormous credits, the foreign office claims ignorance. In banking circles it is said that two of the offers are merely repetitions while the third may be new. It is supposed to be a deal through brokers historically connected with German finances. However, in American official circles it is said that no official move has been made.

Bankers Are Pessimistic.

Banking interests generally are pessimistic over the situation. In fact, some circles believe that the repeated press accounts of new billions in credits from America and elsewhere are merely an effort to bolster the value of the mark until such time as the seriousness of the situation is realized by the entente, as well as in Germany, and the Versailles treaty paragraph dealing with finances and reparations is completely revised.

NEW ERA DAWNS FOR PRESS CLUB, COMERFORD SAYS

Members of the Chicago Press club in meeting yesterday adopted a resolution deposing all elected and appointed officers of the club and authorizing a commitee of three to draft a new constitution and prepare plans for the election of a new roster of officers.

The step was taken because of a crisis which has arisen in the club's affairs necessitating drastic action. Those named on the committee of three are Frank Comerford, chairman; James F. Stepina, and Chris D. Hagerty.

Instead of the usual motion to adjourn the members were called upon to rise and sing "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Comerford declared that the action of the members meant "the dawn of a new day for the Press club."

MISS PRINDIVILLE BECOMES BRIDE OF ROBERT HOTZ

Miss Priscilla Allen Wed to Ellis D. Slater.

Miss Elizabeth Prindiville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Prindiville of Winnetka, was married to Robert S. Hotz, son of Mrs. Frederick T. Haskel of 2824 Prairie avenue, yesterday afternoon in the garden of the residence of her parents. Mgr. Kelly of Wilmette, assisted by the Rev. S. J. Haarth of Hubbard Woods, officiated.

The bride's gown was of white chiffon velvet with a court train of the same. A band of d'Angleterre lace, which was worn by the bridegroom's mother when she was married to his father, held the tulle veil in place. She carried Madonna lilies.

Bridesmaids in Blue.

The bride's attendants, Miss Lila Hotz, sister of the bridegroom and maid of honor, and Miss Isabel Watkins, Miss Catherine Rehm, Miss Virginia Hood of Minneapolis, and Miss Emma Wyckoff of Buffalo, bridesmaids, wore gowns of larkspur blue georgette and velvet and darker blue velvet hats trimmed with shaded blue plumes. They carried pink gladioli and larkspur.

During the marriage ceremony the bride and bridegroom stood before a trellis of autumn leaves and flowers. Following the ceremony there was a reception indoors. After a motor trip in the east Mr. and Mrs. Hotz will be at home at 1362 North Dearborn street.

Miss Allen Is Wed.

Another interesting wedding was that of Miss Priscilla Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon M. Allen of Kenilworth, and Ellis Dwinnell Slater, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ellis Slater of Kenilworth, which took place last evening at Kenilworth Union church. The bride's gown was of white velvet with a court train lined with orchid chiffon. Her gown was trimmed with lace which had been on her mother's wedding gown and her tulle veil was held in place with a band of lace.

Miss Artena Phillips of Youngstown, O., was maid of honor, and Mrs. Samuel Loomis Hypes of Kenilworth was matron of honor. Miss Phillips wore orchid taffeta and silver lace, and Mrs. Hypes' gown was of spangled blue net.

The bridesmaids, Miss Catherine Slater, Mrs. Ward Starrett and Miss Miriam Shattuck, wore turquoise blue velvet dresses and carried Columbia roses. Mr. and Mrs. Slater will live in Evanston.

BEWARE CHINA, M. E. MINISTER WARNS WORLD

Tells Conference of New "Hate Hymn."

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

"China, with her 400,000,000 people and her standing army of 1,000,000 is chanting a hymn of hate!"

"China has scores to settle and the rest of the world would better look out."

This warning of a new menace in the far east was voiced last night by the Rev. Ralph A. Ward, secretary of the foreign missions board of the Methodist Episcopal church, before the Rock River conference in Thoburn M. E. church, West 64th and South Paulina streets.

"At the Washington disarmament conference the most fundamental issue will be a decision for world ideals to which China must adjust herself," he continued, "and in the hands of American statesmen is an opportunity such as has not come to any group of statesmen in decades.

"China is naturally a peace loving nation, but she is forced to think in terms of armies and navies. Chinese children today are having burned in on their minds, by seeing them printed on the covers of their textbooks, two words, 'China's disgrace.'

"Chinese women are working the two words into their embroidery.

"They are working the words into the ornamentations of buildings where they can be seen by all, 'China's disgrace.'

Resentment Comes to Life.

"I once heard a group of soldiers at drill chanting a hymn of hate. China has scores to settle and the rest of the world would better look out."

The Methodist Episcopal church ministered to 697,436 native Christians in foreign lands in 1920, an increase of more than 60,000 within the year, Dr. Ward told the conference, adding that the contributions for this work were more than doubled, totaling $4,077,992.

Another important announcement was the calling of a national conference of Methodists to consider the world-wide missionary and benevolent interests of the church, at Detroit, Mich., for three days, Nov. 15, 16, 17, which 3,000 delegates are expected to attend.

State conferences upon the religious work of the Methodist church in colleges and recruiting for life service will be held this week in Evanston, on Wednesday at Northwestern university and on Thursday at the Northwestern University building in the loop, under the auspices of the board of education of the Methodist church, of which Dr. A. W. Harris, former president of Northwestern university, is the secretary, and the commission on life service, of which the Rev. W. J. Davidson is the secretary.

Representation in the quadrennial general conference will be reduced from one minister out of every fourteen to one minister for every forty-five, according to action taken yesterday by the Rock River conference.

Meet Next Year at Princeton.

The next meeting of the Rock River conference in 1922 will be held in Princeton, Ill., it was announced.

Yesterday morning's session of the conference was disturbed by the charge made by members of the committee on state legislation that their names had been placed upon the report which they themselves had not seen. The difficulty was straightened out by referring the report back to the committee for reconsideration.

"This report," said the Rev. John Thompson, "charges that the American public schools are ungodly, and we cannot sanction that." The report further dealt with the work of the Methodist church in opposing the twelve bills introduced into the last legislature for the legalizing of prizefighting, and also told of the attempt to secure legislative regulation for the motion picture industry.

"The screen," the report is said to read, "is America's worst school of crime, and the picture industry must be controlled or American children will be ruined by it."

Bishop Thomas Nicholson preaches in the Thoburn church this morning at 10:30 o'clock, following the "love feast" held at 9 o'clock, and the Epworth league will hold its anniversary service this evening.

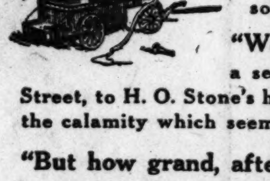
He Played a Memorable Part in the Chicago Fire

The Following Is an Actual Experience in the Great Fire of 1871, Written by Honorable Thomas Hoyne. It Appears in Andreas History, Under the Title "The Burning of Chicago."



WHO can describe the confusion, the excited faces, the earnest movements of men, women and children? Here was the rich lady with her arms full of boxes and there a poor family with nothing but their children; but the distress expressed in all faces and by all movements was something terrible to witness and never to be forgotten.

"We had moved some household effects and it was a serious question whether in moving as far as Twentieth Street, to H. O. Stone's house, we had even then gone far enough south to avoid the calamity which seemed pursuing us.

"But how grand, after all, is human nature! While we were taking leave of our home, removing our most precious relics, friends were constantly coming in, pressing our hands, in tears, and soliciting us to take shelter with them. Among these were H. O. Stone and Fernando Jones. They brought wagons, too, to carry our goods. God ever bless them! What consolation in that dread hour did these evidences of friendship afford us!

"But the great cloud passed over our home. In two days we received back our goods into the house, and, although we had lost our income in rents, we felt grateful that a home had been spared to us."

The Historic Service of H. O. STONE, the First, to His Fellow-Citizens During the Great Disaster of 1871 Typifies the Service Rendered Today by This Organization—Animated by His Ideals of Conservative Investment, Thrift for All the People, and Progressive Service.

An Interesting Chapter in the History of The Big Chicago Fire

THE fine wisdom and the great importance of Insurance were brought to light, with great intensity, by the bright, flaring flames of the big Chicago Fire, in 1871.

The Home Insurance Company, New York, suffered a loss of no less than $3,151,106.19 by restituting the losses of its policy holders among the Chicago fire sufferers.

On January 1, 1871—9 months prior to the fire—the assets of this Company amounted to only $4,669,125.90. Yet, all the claims were adjusted with the utmost promptness, without a single case of litigation, without our borrowing a cent, and without asking for, or calling in, a single mortgage. The only ones to bear the brunt were the Home stockholders—they were assessed to the extent of 60% of their holdings.

Today, the Home assets are over $70,000,000 and the Company has grown to be

"The Largest Fire Insurance Company in America"

The vital importance of Insurance is being emphasized more and more every year. The annual fire losses in this country increased, during 1920, to $500,000,000. They totalled over $1,416,875,000 for the last 5-year period.

It is a good policy to insure yourself against loss—it is the best policy to insure with the Home.

KING GEORGE PRAYS FOR JOBS FOR THE JOBLESS

Says He Is Sorely Tried by British Problem.

BY OTIS PEABODY SWIFT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Speaking at the ceremonies attendant upon the opening of the extension of the royal exchange at Manchester, King George said:

"I am sorely troubled by the present widespread unemployment, which is causing so much suffering to so many of my people. It is my sincere hope that the efforts of my ministers to alleviate the present and prevent future unemployment may be successful. I earnestly pray that by the blessing of divine providence and the united efforts of all classes in the community we may wipe out the evil effects of the great war and restore commercial and productive activity to the nation."

Later, conversing with J. R. Clynes, the chairman of the parliamentary Labor party, the king discussed the possibilities for restoring international trade.

Exports Show Big Decline.

The Board of Trade returns for the month of September, which were issued today, show a decline, as compared with September of last year, of more than $263,000,000 in the value of imports and $249,000,000 in the values of exports from Great Britain. Last year the imports were $600,000,000 and the exports $480,000,000. The largest export losses were in the cotton yarns, woolen yarns, iron and steel manufactures, wearing apparel, and chemicals.

It was also announced that in the month of September bullion was exported from Great Britain to the value of £6,266,000 (roughly, $25,064,000), of which £5,000,000 ($20,000,000) went to the United States and £900,000 ($3,600,000) to British India.

Navy Will Sell Old Ships.

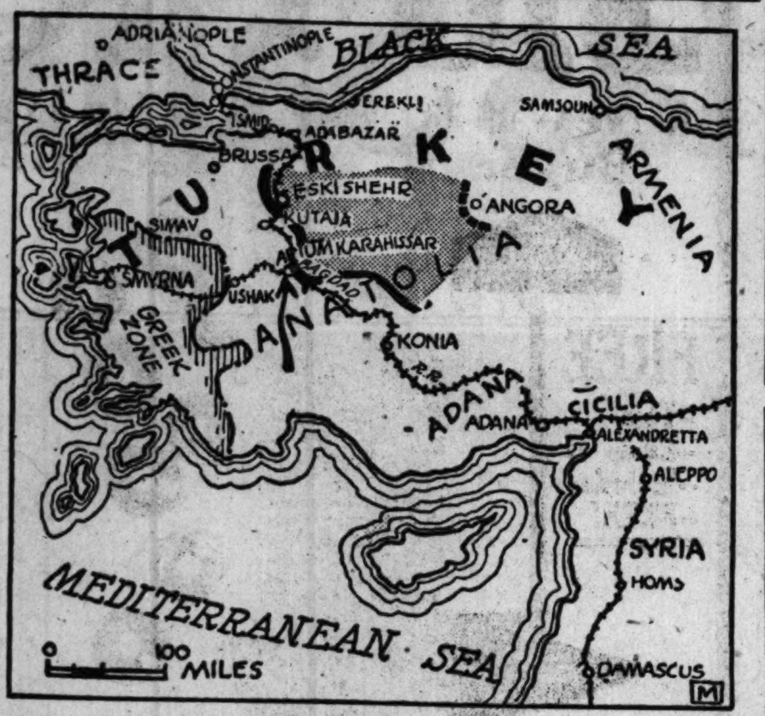
The admiralty today announced that in view of the unemployment, it is preparing to sell a number of surplus obsolete warships to breaking up firms with the object of increasing employment. Purchaser must agree to begin wrecking the ships immediately.

It is expected that Prime Minister Lloyd George will meet the committee appointed at Friday's labor conference on Wednesday to confer on the unemployment problem.

Russia to Seek Workmen in America, Report Says

RIGA, Oct. 8.—The Russian soviet commissariat of labor has sent agents abroad to recruit foreign workmen for Russia, according to a radio message from Moscow today. The agents are going principally to America, the message said.

GREEKS RETREAT IN TURKEY



THE Greeks are reported to be pulling out of Turkey slowly following their defeat before Angora. Latest accounts tell of fighting at Afiumkarahissar, where the Turks were attempting to rush them. The shaded portion of the map shows the extent of the Greek retreat. Afiumkarahissar is a fortified town of great strength. It and its companion city, Eskishehr, were the Greek strongholds against a Turkish counter thrust. Eskishehr has fallen. Should the otner city follow it the Greeks will be thrust back into the Smyrna zone, military experts predict.

KING CHARLES I. OF MOVIES BIDS BRITAIN GOOD-BY

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 8.—At one time this morning it looked as if Charlie Chaplin's habit of sleeping late would make him miss the boat train for Southampton, scheduled to make connections with the Berengaria. Lively hustling brought him in a taxi to Waterloo station five minutes before the train pulled out.

The avenues around the station and the train platforms were crowded with enthusiastic admirers, mostly women and children. Girls rushed to the car windows to kiss him, in spite of the guard of brawhy policemen.

"Did I enjoy my visit? I loved it. Next summer I will be here again. I will produce a film over here." So Charlie kept up a running fire of answers to his questioners.

"H. G. Wells is a great man. He is not an intellectual gargoyle, but a human being all the time. My week-end down at Dunmow with him was great. We discussed all the problems of the universe."

The ship's chef made a huge three tier cake surmounted by a chocolate figure of Charlie in character in honor of the occasion.

HINTS FILIPINO FREEDOM WILL BE HELD UP 4 YEARS

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 8.—[By the Associated Press.]—The question of Philippine independence will be laid on the table for at least four years. This was indicated in a speech tonight by acting Gov. Gen. Charles E. Yeater at a dinner tendered him on the eve of his departure by American, Filipino, and foreign residents of Manila.

DEMOCRATS TO HOLD MEETING BEFORE NOV. 11

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—[United Press.]—Chairman George White of the Democratic national committee will issue a call tomorrow for a meeting of the committee "to discuss the welfare of the party," he announced here tonight, following conferences with Democratic senators. The meeting, it was indicated, will be held before the disarmament conference opens, Nov. 11, and will take place in a western city, probably Chicago.

DENIES POLITICS HAS HAND IN GOOD ROADS DAY FETE

Officials of the Cook county highway department denied yesterday that political schemes have in any way entered into plans for the celebration of "Good Roads Day," to be observed at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the new Des Plaines river road south of Des Plaines.

"The sole aim of this dedication is to demonstrate the real value of paved roads in Cook county," said George A. Quinlan, superintendent of highways, "and to publicly announce the completion of 235 miles of permanent pavements in the county's system."

KEWANEE Builds of Steel—

Why is it that big ships and locomotives invariably demand boilers made of steel? Because wherever the hazard is greatest, utter reliability is of paramount importance.

Why isn't this reliability just as important to you when you put up a building? Can you afford to use a cast-iron affair, knowing that in the dead of winter, just when you need it most, it is apt to crack?

Don't you know that when a cast-iron boiler cracks, you have to put out the fire, and install new sections? That may take two or three days. And in the meantime, what becomes of your tenants? Do they freeze or move? And how much profit is turned into loss?

REMEMBER THIS—Kewanee Steel Boilers do not crack. They are made of the finest quality of steel. We know they will last as long as your building will. Just how much longer they will last, we do not know. We have only been making them for thirty years.

AND DON'T FORGET that Kewanee Smokeless Steel Boilers will burn any kind of fuel without smoke.

A Service Plan that Has Satisfied

175,000 HOLLAND OWNERS

ABOUT fourteen years ago A. H. Landwehr, the General Manager of this company, and his asscciates instituted a revolutionary policy in the selling of furnaces.

This policy was based on the conviction that no furnace, however good, can give satisfactory service unless it is scientifically installed to meet the exact conditions to fit the particular heating need of each individual home.

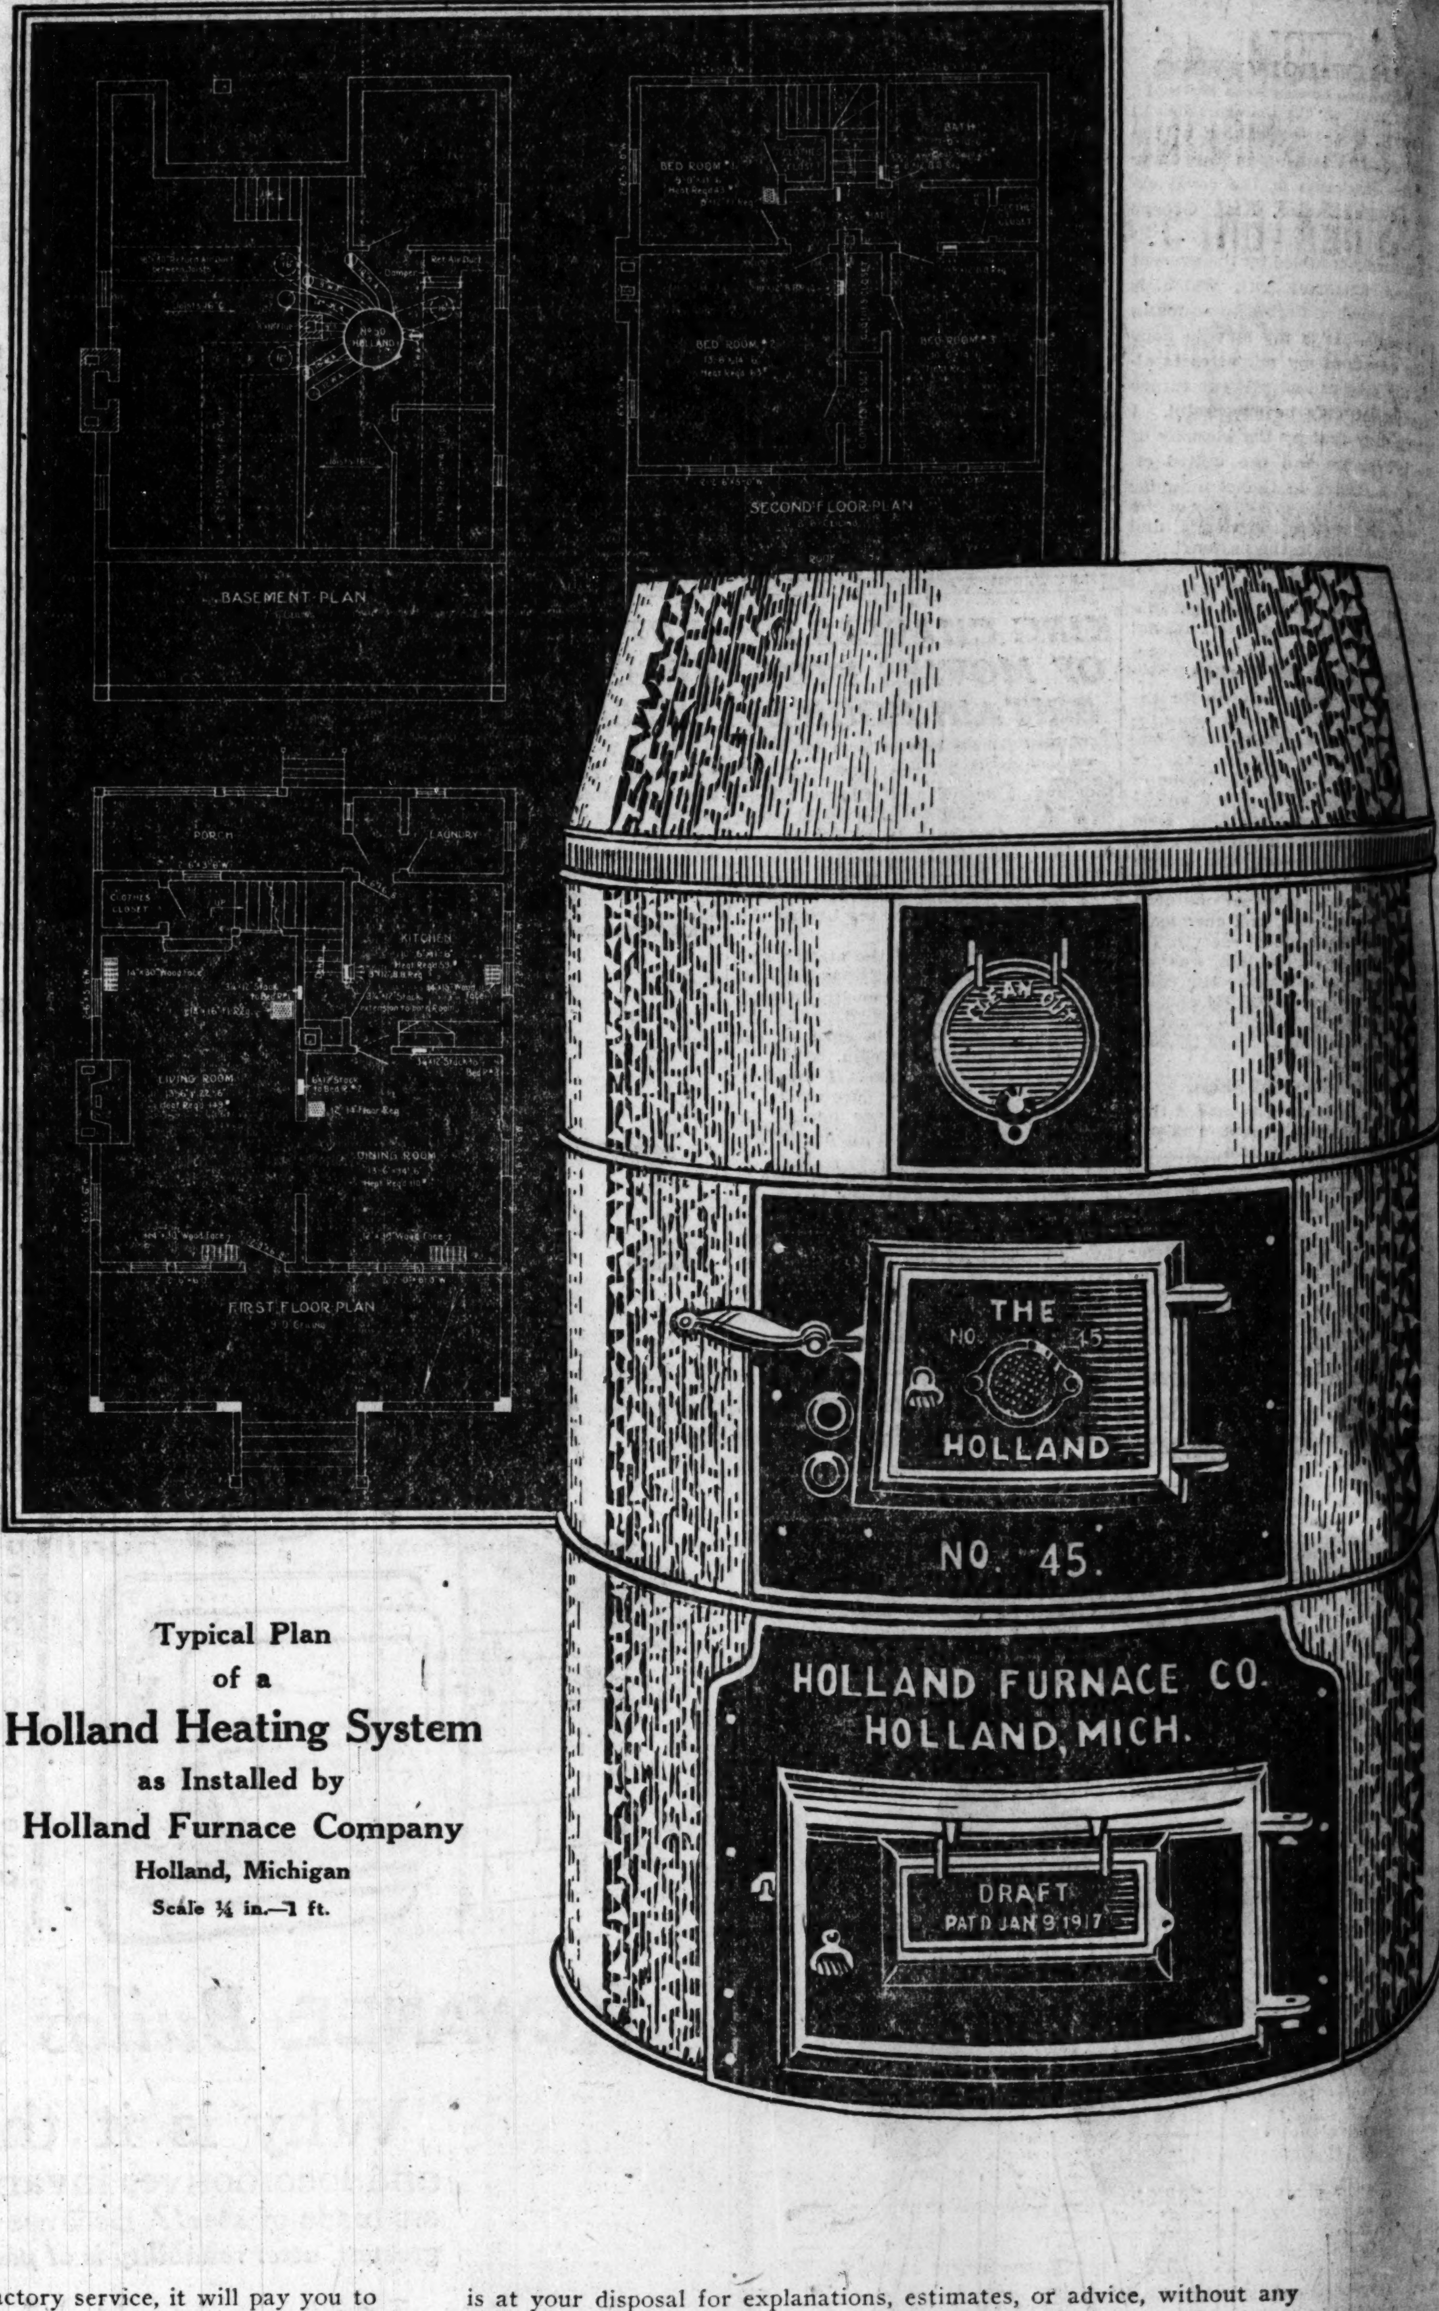
In other words, they believed it was more essential to sell a customer on a complete guaranteed heating service, based on a scientific study of that customer's requirements, rather than to try to sell him just "a furnace"—and then allow the furnace to be "guessed" into his house by dealers or tinsmiths inexperienced in the science of heating and the natural laws which govern warm-air circulation.

To carry out this policy, every Holland representative from that day to this has been a Holland-trained expert; and Holland Furnaces have been sold only through factory-controlled branches who make it their exclusive business to sell and to deliver a service of complete satisfaction to the customer. That, fundamentally, is the reason why there is no chance of the customer going wrong in the purchase of a Holland Furnace.

When you order a Holland Furnace, one of these experts visits your home, studies the plan of your house, the size of the rooms, location of windows, doors, stairways, etc. He then outlines a floor plan of correct installation similar to that shown back of the furnace illustrated on this page. It is based on the correct size, the proper location, the exact pitch of the pipes, the draft of the chimney—every detail, in fact, that is necessary for complete heating efficiency. This plan is submitted to you for acceptance and the furnace is installed according to these specifications by trained installation men from the Holland Branch.

After it is installed and is giving satisfactory service, we deliver to you our Guarantee Service Bond, which is a definite protection of continuous satisfaction, backed by all the resources of this company. This bond is transferable in case you dispose of your property, giving the new owner the same protection. This is one of the reasons why it is now so generally known that a Holland Furnace makes your house worth more to live in—to rent—or to sell.

And although the Holland is a superior furnace, both in original design and exclusive improvements and refinements that make for better economy, cleanliness and long-lived service, still the Holland Company will absolutely not sell a furnace on any plan other than the one above outlined; namely, that of designing and controlling the installation according to our knowledge of what is best suited for the customer's particular requirements.



Typical Plan

Holland Heating System

Holland Furnace Company
Holland, Michigan
Scale ⅛ in.—1 ft.

For we realize that a business such as ours, which has been built up solely on a good product and the good-will of our customers, can afford to have only satisfied customers. And to assure this essential owner satisfaction, we know that correct installation is quite as necessary as a superior product.

On this basis, the Holland business has grown from a small organization working in a restricted locality into the largest installers in the world of warm-air furnaces, with 175,000 satisfied customers. Today, it operates, as you will see by the branches listed below, in six of the Northern Central States, and is increasing its radius of operation only so fast as its policy of training Holland experts and developing Holland branches will allow.

If you are planning or building a new home, or, if your present heating equipment is not giving you satisfactory service, it will pay you to consult one of our Holland Branch Managers, and find out the logical reasons why Holland-Heating has been so universally satisfactory wherever it is known.

Call up the nearest Holland Branch. An experienced Holland man is at your disposal for explanations, estimates, or advice, without any obligations on your part.

We make a specialty of replacing heating and ventilating systems in houses already built. We do it without damaging the plaster, or inconveniencing you in any serious way.

We also make a Pipeless Furnace of superior quality, which, if suited to your requirements, we should be very glad to install on the same plan.

Holland Furnaces may be had for cash, or, you may pay for them on easy terms out of the savings that you will make on fuel, and the more economical, cleanly, and lasting service of the Holland System.

Write for the "History of Warm-Air Heating"—an instructive book, which explains in detail the reasons that have made Holland Company the largest installers of furnaces in the world.

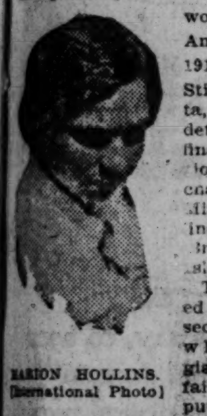
Deal, N. J., Oct. 7.—[Special.]—After holding undisputed authority over the women golfers of America since 1916, Miss Alexa Stirling, of Atlanta, Ga., today was dethroned in the final of the national women's championship by Miss Marion Hollins of West Brook, Long Island.



MARION HOLLINS.
[International Photo]

The match ended on the thirty-second green when the Georgian, then 4 down failed to sink a putt of less than four feet, the ball trickling past the cup. Miss Hollins then holed out a three footer which made her the 1921 champion by 5 and 4.

Winner Never in Doubt.

The failure on the part of the champion at this point, however, was not surprising, for, after the first few holes in the afternoon, when Miss Stirling showed a flash of her real ability and reduced her opponent to practically even terms, the winner was never in doubt. It was Miss Hollins' day, not Miss Stirling's.

There was a touch of disappointment in the face of Miss Stirling as she congratulated her robust conqueror, and when Miss Cecil Leitch, the British woman champion, who was put out of the running by Mrs. Fred C. Letts Jr. of Chicago in the second round, offered her condolences to the vanquished and her congratulations to the victor there was just a faint trace of a tear in Miss Stirling's eyes.

Result Big Upset.

The defeat of Miss Stirling was almost as big an upset as that of Miss Leitch, but, while it is only fair to state that Miss Stirling did not play the golf that she has at her command, the golf that has brought her honors never before won by any woman with the exception of Miss Leitch herself, yet Miss Hollins took advantage of most of the breaks, and most of the breaks came for her. Time and time again the Atlanta wonder laced out shots that found trouble by slender margins and she built up for herself a disadvantage she was unable to overcome.

Alexa's short game, usually the feature of her play, went back on her cruelly and lost her the title on the green. Miss Hollins, after getting away to a good start in the early part of the morning match, played with all the confidence in the world and atoned for many bad shots by brilliant ones that never allowed her distinguished rival to get upon even terms.

Play in Downpour.

When the first half of the match was ended Miss Hollins had a margin of 4 up. Just before they started out in the concluding round the sky became overcast and rain began to fall. For the first four holes of the afternoon round the steady drizzle seemed to aid Miss Stirling and for a time threatened to overcome her rival's lead and change the whole complexion of things. Alexa won three out of the first four holes, two of them in par figures. It looked as if she were going to pull the match out of the fire, but then Miss Hollins, not a whit perturbed by the sudden change, caught hold of herself and at the twenty-seventh hole had again succeeded in bringing back her lead to 4 up.

Miss Hollins' Achievements.

On her way to the title, Miss Hollins, in the first round, defeated Mrs. M. L. R. Spaulding of Buffalo, 9 and 7; in the second round, she defeated Mrs. David Bault of Memphis, the southern women's champion, 4 and 2; in the third round, she won from Mrs. F. C. Letts Jr. of Chicago, 4 and 3, while in the semi-final, she conquered Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Chicago, 1 up in 19 holes.

Out side of today's achievement, Miss Hollins' greatest year in golf was in 1913, when she captured the Metropolitan women's title, in addition to being a runnerup in the national event. This year, in the British championship at Turnberry, she had the distinction of going farther toward the finals than did any other American women.

Dartmouth Eleven Shuts Out New Hampshire, 24-0

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 8.—Playing in a downpour of rain, Dartmouth defeated New Hampshire today, 24 to 0. Despite poor conditions the game was well played. Capt. Robertson of the Greens added 18 points to his season's total with two touchdowns, a field goal, and three goals from touchdown.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

CHICAGO FIRE OF 1871.

THERE are many persons who think the reported origin of the big Chicago fire of Oct. 9, 1871 (the kicking over of the lamp by Mrs. O'Leary's cow), is fiction, but any one here at the time knows it to be a fact and that the first newspapers published after the catastrophe gave such an account.

The water works, for some reason or other, was put out of commission early that morning, cutting off the supply; and, to make matters worse, a strong southerly wind swept flame and smoke swiftly northward, taking everything in its path from about 12th street (jumping the river) to Fullerton avenue on the north, excepting the old Ogden home, in the center of the block now occupied by the Newberry library. The old Line Block, on Randolph at the river, also escaped complete destruction, and, remodeled somewhat, still stands.

As a small boy, I recall leaving our home in North Wells street with the family when it was too risky to remain longer and joining the crowds of humanity surging northward along the streets afoot and in all sorts of conveyances. Some were drawn by hand, loaded with all kinds of furniture and even household pets, while dogs followed their masters.

I knew of one family which buried its piano, another its winter's supply of coal, in a pit in the back yard. Our folks with a couple of teams saved some of our most necessary articles by removing them seven miles out to the wilds on the lake shore (all built up now and within the city limits).

For a week the sky was rosy at night from the burning ruins. Relief from all over the country was forwarded, both food and clothing. I received an overcoat from the relief station in the Lincoln school, and it served well during the cold winter that followed.

The severe weather, however, did not stop rebuilding operations, which went on rapidly, and a new city rapidly rose from the ashes. C. E. Jennings.

THE AWKWARD DEALER.

When the cards have run against you
And you're several smackers out
And you get an ace high bob-tail,
You could almost rise and shout
As you see your sweet spade coming;
As he lifts it from the deck,
You would like to hug the dealer,
You could fall upon his neck.
First he juggles it a second
In his great, ungainly paw,
Then he drops your card face upward
And thus kills you on the draw.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

In spite of some Homeric heroics by Percy Jones of Texas, who pitched two innings on one foot, the White Sox won the third straight city series game from the Cubs yesterday by 4 to 3, in ten innings, but lost Ray Schalk, for the rest of the series, perhaps. Schalk's second right finger was hit by a foul tip.

PERCY JONES.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The game was a world's record breaker for flukes and accidents. All but two of the seven runs counted were due to horseshoe breaks for the team which scored them, and the other two were scored on bases on balls, which are not exactly the same as base hits.

Jones Hero of Game.

Jones' the day's hero, held the White Sox to one hit in nine innings and probably would have copped a victory if he had not tried to pitch the game out with one hoof seriously injured after the seventh inning, when he wrenched his right ankle sliding into second base, trying to beat a close play in the seventh round.

Dick Kerr tried to come back with only two days' rest and might have copped the game but for the flukes that happened in the first inning when the Cubs scored two runs on next to nothing. But that round was offset by the last half of the ninth, in which the White Sox scored three runs on nothing at all.

In the first round Flack scratched a hit through Collins and Hollocher beat out a hit to Kerr. Terry rapped to Johnson, who would have forced Hollocher at second, but Collins muffed the throw. The bases were full with nobody out. Kelleher rapped to Kerr, who threw home, forcing Flack out. Barber also tapped to Kerr, who tried to force Hollocher at the pan but slipped and made a wild peg on which two runs scored before Schalk recovered the pill. Maisel also hit to Kerr, resulting in Kelleher's death on the path, and Grimes rolled out.

Cubs Make Another Run.

The Cubs added one run to that in the eighth on two passes and a single by Maisel, and it looked a cinch for them.

The Gleasons made one hit, by Hooper, in eight rounds, and the four bases on balls given them in that time were useless. Jones, in spite of his injury, had the nerve to go through apparently. Bratchi started the home ninth with a walk, and Johnson drew another. Strunk hit a hopper to Jones, who tried unwisely to force Strunk at second and lost the play, filling the bags. He could have beaten Strunk to first easily. Collins was retired by Grimes, letting McClellan, who ran for Bratchi, cross the plate.

Hooper then popped out, and Sheely would have done so on a Texas leaguer to right center if the Cubs had not got their wires crossed. Flack finally tried for the fly and muffed it, letting two runs in, tying the score.

Hodge blanked the Cubs in the tenth, in spite of two bases on balls; then the Sox won out. Mulligan opened the last half with a single and the crippled Jones was relieved by Freeman. Yaryan sacrificed. Hodge popped out, but Freeman issued the fatal pass to Johnson. Strunk came across with a ripping single to right, on which Mulligan scored the winning run.

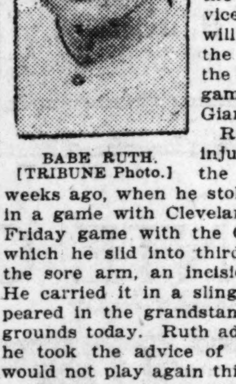
RUTH MAY NOT PLAY AGAIN IN WORLD SERIES

New York, Oct. 8.—Babe Ruth, champion home run slugger, was told by Dr. George D. Stewart late today that his infected left arm, operated upon Friday, must be given at least a week's rest. This means that the Yankees' star, if the doctor's advice is heeded, will not appear in the remainder of the world series games against the Giants.



BABE RUTH.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ruth's arm was injured just above the elbow two weeks ago, when he stole second base in a game with Cleveland. After the Friday game with the Giants, during which he slid into third, aggravating the sore arm, an incision was made. He carried it in a sling when he appeared in the grandstand at the Polo grounds today. Ruth admitted that if he took the advice of his doctor he would not play again this season.

"But my absence won't hurt the Yankees," he said. "It will make them fight all the harder."

Rain Drives 22,000 Home.

Ruth's case was the big topic among the fans tonight. That was all there was to talk about after rain had washed away the fourth game of the series today and sent some 22,000 fans home with only rain checks to show for their efforts to grab a point of vantage in the Brush stadium.

Both teams were on the field before it became necessary to call off the day's show. A shower about noon didn't do much damage to the playing field, but when another downpour came shortly before 2 o'clock Umpire Chill instructed the announcer to inform the anxious crowd there would be nothing doing before tomorrow. Whether a Sunday game will be possible was far from certain at a late hour tonight.

Alter Yank Batting Front.

With Ruth out of the game and Fewster taking his place, Manager Huggins will be compelled to make a shift in the batting order of the Yankees. Fewster undoubtedly will be the leadoff man, with Elmer Miller hitting in third place.

While the Giants chafed under the enforced idleness and resented the untimely interference of the weather man, the Yankees took a decidedly different view of the situation; in fact, they welcomed the layoff. It accorded their pitching ace, Carl Mays, an additional day in which to recuperate from his strenuous work in the opening game.

The Giants' manager said the postponement would not affect his plans of battle.

"At the present time I intend to pitch Douglas against the Yankees in tomorrow's game."

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

What is the matter with boxing?

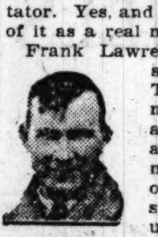
Where Asked.

North Michigan avenue and Ontario street.

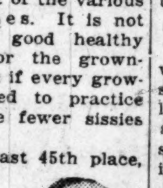
The Answers.

G. W. Kluge, 4055 Southport avenue, salesman—A well known New York minister recently stated that the Dempsey-Carpentier bout is an indication that we are gradually drifting back to the days of the massacre of the Christians. I differ with him. The only thing the matter with boxing is that we do not have enough of it.

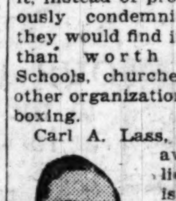
Wilfrid Green, 3722 Rokeby street, chauffeur—I don't know that there is anything wrong with boxing. In the light of present day ethics the oldtime fights were all wrong, but they now have it down to an exact science where it is worth while to participant and spectator. Yes, and I am strongly in favor of it as a real man's sport.



Frank Lawrence, 47 East Ontario street, garage owner—There is nothing the matter with boxing as a sport or in the management of the various matches. It is not only a good healthy sport for the grownups, but if every growing boy was compelled to practice boxing there would be fewer sissies and more real men.



Fred E. True, 450 East 45th place, salesman—Boxing is a good, clean sport, and if people in general took more interest in it, instead of promiscuously condemning it, they would find it more than worth while. Schools, churches, and other organizations ought to encourage boxing.



Carl A. Lass, 1534 South Western avenue, salesman—I believe that in boxing one is taught the greatest character builders of any athletic sport. Too much criticism and not enough knowledge of the art has brought it into more or less ill-repute. I would like to see boxing permitted everywhere under the supervision of city and state.

PENN VICTOR ON KICKOFF SCORE

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 8.—The University of Pennsylvania was held to a 7 to 0 victory over the Gettysburg eleven today. The only touchdown was scored in the first period when Jonathan Miller, Pennsylvania half back, accepted Gettysburg's first kickoff and ran through the whole opposing eleven. After that Gettysburg was invincible.

Badges Fail to Get Booze Sleuths Into World's Series

New York, Oct. 8.—Fifteen federal prohibition agents were refused admission at the Polo grounds today when they attempted to "crash" the pass gate without paying admission. The agents showed their badges, but police told them they were no good.

PURPLE BEATEN BY STRONG TEAM OF GOPHERS, 28-0

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 8.—It was a genuine grudge game when Minnesota and Northwestern fought on Northrop field today, and the Gophers, superior in strength, though far from the old time teams of the institution, came out with a decisive victory, 28 to 0. The Gophers crashed their way over the Purple goal line once in each of the four quarters.

ARNOLD OSS.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Though Northwestern was licked thoroughly, the boys of the Evanston school displayed an aggressiveness and gameness that was quite admirable. But there were times when things seemed on the verge of a fist fight, and a few times fists did figure, while on other occasions penalties were inflicted for clipping and piling up after a play was over.

Jeers for Visitors.

It was a rough combat. The feeling was shown on the field and in the stands. Several times when the cheer leaders called for a series of rahs for some visiting players the students stood up and jeered, instead of cheering. At least, most of them did.

An incident at the start of the game stirred up the wrath of the rooters when a Northwestern man blocked Arnold Oss, star of the Gophers, as he was running down on a punt. Some say it was Capt. Hathaway who did the blocking in a perfectly legitimate manner, but with such force that the Minnesota star was left lying helpless. He got into one more play and then was taken out, badly hurt. After the first half he came to the side lines on crutches.

Clever Trick by Williams.

Dr. Williams numbered his players for the first time, but in such a way that it was almost impossible to identify the Gophers. The conference rule didn't say the boys should be numbered from "one" on up, so Dr. Williams pulled a bit of strategy by having four numerals on the back of each players.

They were all curly figures, like "threes" and "eights" and "fives," with only a few exceptions. No one possibly could read them from the stands. It looked like each boy had an auto license tag hanging on him. Here's a sample of a few of them: 3335, 3535, 3533, 5333, 5533, 3883, 3838, 3388, 8383, 3383, 8388.

Not the Spirit of Rule.

In contrast, the Purple numbers stood out like harbor lights. The learned doctor always has claimed numbering players gave rival schools a fine chance to study individuals. There might have been four or five scouts there today. The doctor doesn't seem to realize that a scout probably knows the rival players by other ways than numbers on their backs. Dr. Williams may have lived up to the letter of the rule, but he's a long way from the spirit.

Now for the game. First of all,

TIGERS WIN, 19-0, IN HARD BATTLE; COLGATE VICTIM

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 8.—Princeton defeated Colgate's eleven, 19 to 0, today in a contest that was harder fought than the score would indicate. Playing on a rain soaked gridiron, the visitors forced the Tigers to battle for every inch. In the first period the best Princeton could score was a safety, Mason falling on the ball behind his own goal lines after Keck had blocked Sanford's punt.

Princeton added 17 points in the second period by mingling line plunges with effective forward passes, but was held scoreless in the last half.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Stagg's supposedly high powered scoring machine, in its last public appearance before meeting Princeton, won its second conference victory by defeating Purdue, 9 to 0, at Stagg field before 15,000 spectators, of whom a fair representation were students at Lafayette and alumni of the Gold and Black.

RALPH KING.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Purdue was satisfied with the result. Chicago was not. The sum total of the Maroon points represented two block punts. One of these in the second quarter yielded a touchdown when Fletcher broke through and blocked the punt of Rate, who was standing behind his own goal posts. The Maroon lineman then won the race to the ball and flopped on it.

Maroons Score Two Points.

Again in the third quarter, Strohmeier broke through and blocked an attemptel punt by Williams, who also was behind the Purdue goal posts. This time Purdue recovered and it cost only two additional points.

Thus Chicago which against Northwestern had looked to have a powerful attack, principally by the aerial route, did not actually cross Purdue's goal line. Why?

Primarily because Purdue was keyed up to a desperate defense against a team probably a bit overconfident. When the Maroons started with a fine drive as if to roll up another high total Purdue stiffened as the enemy neared its goal.

After an attempted drop kick by Cole failed the Boilermakers twice held for downs well toward their own goal Their tackling was hard, their line charged, the Maroon forward passers were hurried and the receivers covered as they were not by Northwestern.

For a team beaten as was Purdue by Wabash a week before, it was a wonderfully plucky and game showing. With the play almost entirely in Purdue territory in the first half and the Maroons recording seven first downs to two for the Boilermakers, the visitors in the final period actually outplayed the Staggs.

Checks Purdue's Rush.

In this final period plunges by Field, Wagner, and Murphy between guard and tackle and two fifteen yard penalties assessed against the Maroons for holding and tackling out of bounds took the ball to the Maroon eleven yard line. Here it was the Maroons who held, and the Maroon secondary defense which broke up the Purdue forward passes taken out of Coach Dietz's strong box as opportunity loomed.

Turned back once on downs, Purdue again attacked viciously, with its backs hitting the opposing line on straight plays for short gains. With danger seemingly averted, Bryan fumbled and Purdue recovered on Chicago's twelve yard line. In three downs the Boilermakers gained eight yards, and a touchdown was only four yards away. Chicago's line stood solid and the game ended immediately afterward.

King Power in Defense.

In the game against Northwestern, Chicago's attack was effective and we wondered about the line. Except in the first half, the Maroon offense deserved no encomiums. On the other hand, King, the 225 pound sophomore center, answered a few questions. His passing was accurate and he was a power in defense, frequently making tackles on the wings. Zorn, backing up the line, seemed everywhere. These two players, with McGuire, Fletcher, and the ends, stood out in defense.

On offense, Cole, Hurlburt, and Moecher showed good driving power, Cole in particular being hard to stop after he got started, while Moecher frequently twisted away for another yard or two after being tackled. Hurlburt was a consistent gainer. On the whole, however, the offense was disappointing.

In considering the Maroon failure to cross the Purdue goal line consideration should be given the fact the Maroons, according to instructions, played absolutely safe. They kicked on the fourth down, with one yard to gain, when out in the center of the field. After they had secured 9 points the safety tactics were accentuated. No intricate plays of pass formations were attempted.

The contest probably was the best thing that could have happened to the Maroons before meeting Princeton. Any enlarged craniums should no longer exist. Yet the Maroons met and held the hard charging Purdue backs in the final quarter when pressed. It was a far better drill than would have been another one-sided victory.

Birk Stars for Purdue.

Now let us consider Purdue, which came into our midst seemingly foredoomed to disastrous defeat. With little difference in poundage between the lines, the Boilermakers played with a snap and dash suggesting at least near-equality between the forward walls. Birk, at end on defense and at guard or tackle on offense, was a power in stopping the Maroons' backs. Capt. Carmen played a similar rôle, while Swank often brought down his man out on the flanks.

Purdue's backs, while not gaining as much ground as the Maroons, were more effective in their final quarter threat than were the Maroons at any time in the last half.

In punting, Cole was up to his best form. Romney did not secure as much distance as against Northwestern. Williams, for Purdue, kicked lower than customary, but for satisfactory distance despite several poor passes which hurried his efforts.

Fine Forward Passes.

Chicago attempted twelve forward passes, of which five succeeded and seven were nullified by an alert defense evidently coached to be on guard against this vaunted prowess. Purdue completed two of seven attempts, with only a small gain in each instance.

Purdue kicked off, and Chicago made three first downs in eight plays. A forward pass of ten yards, Cole to McMasters, threatened a touchdown at once. Purdue stood its ground and Cole missed a dropkick from the 15 yard line. Keeping the play in Purdue territory, Chicago was unable to score and the quarter ended with the ball in Purdue's possession on Purdue's 30 yard line.

Fletcher Makes Touchdown.

In the second quarter, two fifteen yard penalties gave Chicago the ball on Purdue's 13 yard line. Two plays yielded five yards, then two forward passes failed and the ball went over. After several exchanges with the ball in Purdue territory, Rate's punt was blocked by Fletcher who fell on it for a touchdown. McGuire kicked goal. Chicago, 7; Purdue, 0. The half ended with the ball in Chicago's possession on Purdue's 20 yard line.

Chicago kicked off in the second half and near the end of the third period, Williams' punt was block by Strohmeier, Williams recovering the oval for a safety. Chicago, 9; Purdue, 0.

Purdue Starts March.

The visitors' edge in the final period occurred after one of Cole's punts touched a Maroon lineman and Purdue fell on the ball in the center of the field. Then came the unleashing of Purdue's only really effective attack and the threats against the Maroon goal line as previously described. After Chicago held for downs on its four yard line and the Maroons had made one short gain the game ended.

WOLVERINES RUN UP 64 TO 0 SCORE ON CASE ELEVEN

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Case proved no match for the Michigan eleven today, the Wolverines running up a 64 to 0 score. During the first half, Coach Yost kept most of his regulars in the lineup and the Case line could do nothing to stop the advance. Long runs by Steketee, Kipke and Uteritz, who relieved Banks, featured the half, which ended with Michigan leading, 37 to 0. Michigan continued its scoring spree in the second half and had the Case gridders completely worn out at the end of the struggle. Lineup:

CARDS VS. AKRON, LINEUP OF STARS FOR GAME TODAY

With Driscoll, formerly of Northwestern and Great Lakes, and Pollard, one of the best open field runners in the east when he played with Brown, expected to do most of the ground gaining, Chris O'Brien's Chicago Cardinals and Akron will meet today at Normal park in the feature game of the local professional football season. The park is located at 63d street and South Racine avenue.

The stars will be well supported by other well known players of the college world. King, an excellent half back at West Virginia, will be Pollard's running mate, with Kramer in the middle. Barry of Notre Dame, Hallstrom of Illinois and Koehler of Northwestern will be the Cardinals' backfield, with Driscoll at quarter back. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock.

OBERLIN BEATS OHIO STATE, 7-6, ON LINE ATTACK

Columbus, O., Oct. 8.—Ohio State's western conference prospects were given a setback today when Oberlin defeated the Buckeyes, 7 to 6. Ohio State showed little of the driving offensive which earned the conference championship last year and was unable to stop the swift Oberlin backs who carried the ball from their own fifteen yard line over the Buckeyes' goal on successive first downs in the third period.

Ohio's only score came in the first period when Left End Huffman blocked a punt, recovered it, and ran twenty yards across the goal line. Pixley then failed to kick goal.

WOODLAWN, 6; OLIVET, 5.

The Woodlawn Baptists won the senior church league championship by defeating Olivet institute, 6 to 5, at the Logan Square park yesterday. Gordon relieved Lehman at the end of the third and held Olivet to two hits and fanned ten. Score:

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Iowa ended Notre Dame's span of years of triumph with a 10 to 7 victory over the Catholics in a game of bitter intensity. The bruising contest was played over a gridiron pelted by a snow and hail flurry, and was marked by crashing tackling and hard charging.

When the closing whistle blew, several men of both teams limped off the field, aided by their mates and admirers, but the two Hawkeyes who made all the points, Capt. Aubrey Devine and Full Back Locke, were the heroes. Locke was a battered athlete, who had to be taken out in the third quarter, but came back in critical moments of the fourth, only to be hurt again.

First Quarter Is All Iowa.

Iowa crammed its scoring into the first period. The backs early found the vaunted "Irish" line to their liking, with Capt. Devine, Locke, and Miller carrying the ball for varying distances, from two to twenty yards. Stopped momentarily on the one yard zone, Locke bucked across and Devine added the goal point.

The crowd of 8,000, which had been a maelstrom of joy, changed in a few minutes, however, when Mohardt, Wynne, and Coughlin bucked Iowa's line for fifty yards, but the Hawks braced, and A. Devine and Locke led a reverse march to Notre Dame's thirty-three yard region, where the Hawkeye captain booted a drop kick for the points that decided the game.

Finding the locals' line sturdier after this score, Notre Dame's strategy veered to the aerial, and Johnny Mohardt tossed forward pass after pass to Kiley and Grant, many registering gains. Even two interceptions at critical stages by Iowa failed to stop the passes, and Mohardt finally completed a long one to Kiley, who ran thirty yards to a touchdown. Shaw kicked goal.

Notre Dame Tries Desperately.

Iowa hit the line hard enough for the Devines and Locke to gain slowly, but surely, in the third quarter, and advanced to Notre Dame's five yard line, but Notre Dame held desperately, and Locke was hurt. Then the Catholics rammed and slashed to Iowa's five yard line, where the third period ended.

Iowa held again, and Mohardt tried a forty yard drop kick in an effort to tie the count, but failed, just as more passes did. Desch went in near the end of the game and used his fresh speed in a final effort, which, with a successful pass to Capt. Eddie Anderson, planted the ball on Iowa's seven yard line, but the Hawkeyes staved off this final threat, and the game ended in midfield.

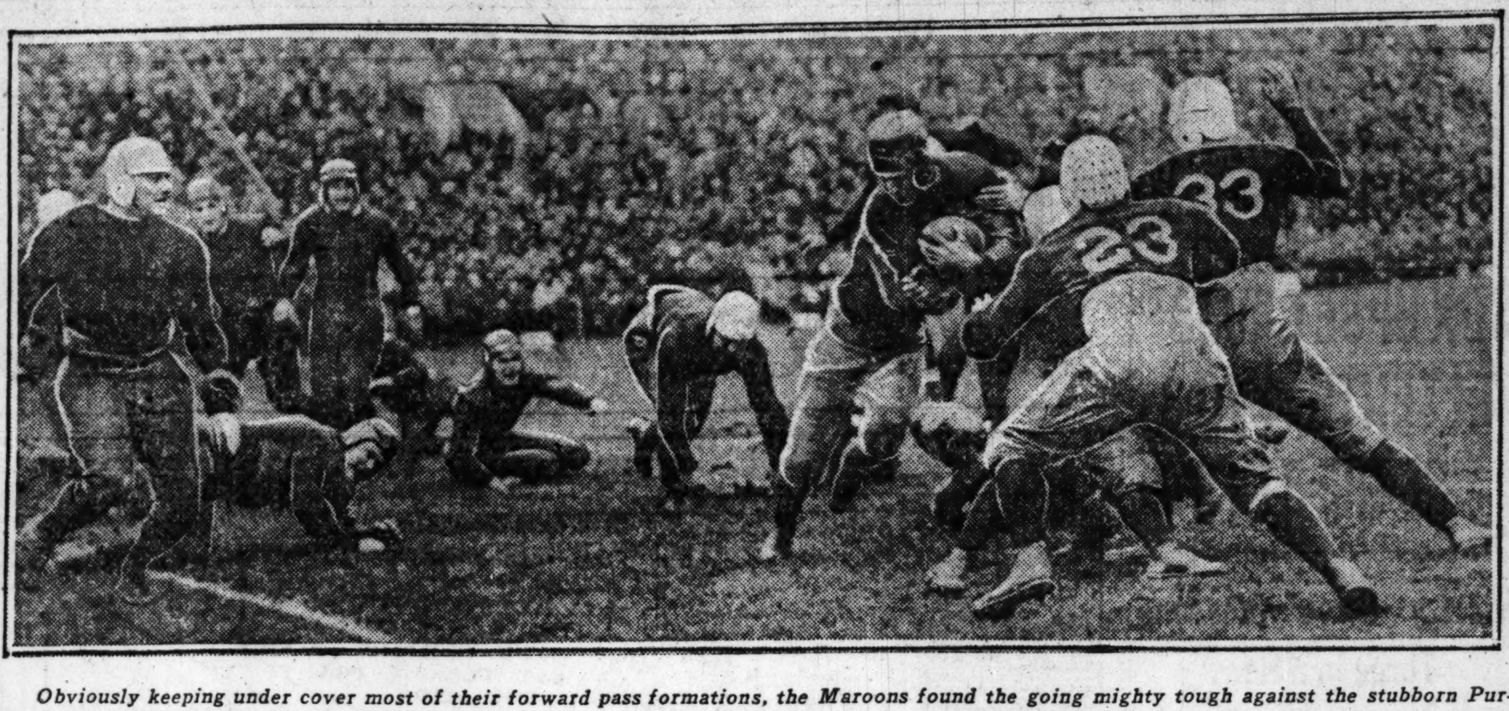
GRIT+DETERMINATION=SUCCESS



Obviously keeping under cover most of their forward pass formations, the Maroons found the going mighty tough against the stubborn Purdue defense. With a limited repertoire, Chicago found that nearly every play called was anticipated by Purdue. How off-tackle drives were choked off with short gains can be seen from this picture, where half a dozen Boilermakers are crushing Moecher to the ground.

Hyde Park High's heavyweight grid team defeated the strong Englewood outfit, champion for four seasons, in the opening game of the Chicago High School league race at White City park yesterday, 6 to 0. Art Folz, captain and star quarter of Englewood, and one of the best performers in the league, was forced out of play with the ligaments of his right wrist torn.

Hyde Park used steam roller tactics to score, pushing Englewood down the field with line bucks and short end runs to the three yard line. McCarthy bucked across for the score. Englewood rained passes in the fourth period in attempts to score, but was repulsed.

Four thousand backers of the two high school elevens turned out to witness the game. Play was stopped several times to get the crowd off the field.

Tilden won the lightweight game from Hyde Park, which was played before the major contest, 6 to 0. The touchdown was made in the first few minutes of play when Fisher of Tilden blocked a punt and Stevens picked it up and carried it across the line.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

THE DUCK HUNTER'S OUTFIT.

IT'S surprising, even a duck hunter will admit, how much duffle is necessary to make a trip comfortable and successful. After the main items, such as gun, shells, boots, and decoys are accounted for, there are still a dozen and one small articles that have to go along. You may use only three or four of them, but the trip wouldn't be a success unless they were in the outfit.

BOB BECKER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Clothing is an important item. The color scheme is, of course, khaki; and woolen shirts, cap, sweater coat, trousers, and hunting coat of the same color usually are standard in a duck hunter's outfit. The cap should be waterproof and lined as well. Many fellows are partial to the sheep lined hunting coat.

A slicker or rubber shirt is another handy garment. Ducking days are often wet days, and keeping dry is essential to comfort, so don't forget some kind of a raincoat. One that buttons tightly around the neck and has rubber bands in the sleeves is desirable.

The pleasure of many a hunting trip has been marred by the lack of warm gloves or mittens. There is an excellent shooting mitten on the market which is lined and has a trapdoor flap in the palm, permitting the use of bare fingers when you want to get busy on the trigger.

If you are troubled with cold feet when wearing hip boots, try wearing a pair of sheep lined moccasins inside of them instead of woolen socks.

Did you ever include a thermos bottle in your outfit? With a small thermos bottle, you can take along coffee, tea, or any piping hot drink you like, and the cold will never feaze you.

There are several articles not absolutely necessary to an outfit, but which if taken along, contribute to the pleasure of a hunt. Included in this list are a pair of binoculars and a camera When business gets rather dull between flights, you can pick up the glasses and amuse yourself by watching the fellows in the blind across the way, or observe the antics of birds out of range.

A camera is almost as important as shells in our outfit. If you take one with you it means that you can enjoy duck hunting all winter long—in pictures.

Don't forget the old briar pipe.

OAK PARK RUNS OVER CHAMPAIGN, 23 TO 7

Oak Park High school's grid machine handed the Champaign, Ill., eleven its first defeat in five years yesterday when it scored a decisive 23 to 7 victory over the downstate team at Oak Park. Oak Park outplayed the Champaign crew in every department, and at the end of the half had a 21 to 0 advantage.

The game proved costly for the Oak Parkers, as Loomis, star full back, was carried off the field with a broken shoulder shortly after the second half opened. Champaign also suffered a loss when Walters, right half back, fractured his right shoulder.

Robinson, Oak Park's speedy half back, scored all three of his team's touchdowns, while Baxter, the dusky star, scored for Champaign. Hardy, Madsen, and Crawford were the best performers for Oak Park, repeatedly stopping the Champaign backs for losses. Baxter was the lone star of the visitors.

Over 5,000 fans turned out, Champaign bringing 300. When Baxter scored the visitors' touchdown the Champaign rooters jumped to their feet and the stand in which they were seated collapsed. No one was injured.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The slippery octopus of the nursery rhyme had absolutely nothing on the Harvard and University of Indian elevens today, as they played their second half in a tremendous downpour of rain and a sea of mud.

The rain was the climax of a most disappointing match and one widely advertised as an intersectional affair. Harvard, showing no special sign of having rounded into more than an ordinary early season team, beat the westerners, 19 to 0.

How Score Was Made.

Two touchdowns were made, one when Gehrke caught a flighty little punt made from behind the Indiana goal line only seventeen yards in the field of play, and he raced off to the side lines and scored. The other points scored by the Crimson came on Buell's goal following Gehrke's touchdown and on two field goals, one of the first quarter by Buell from the thirty-three yard line and the other a pretty shot by Pfaffman, a substitute back, from the thirty-one yard line, just at the end of the first half.

The western players had one chance to score against the Crimson. This wasn't due, however, to any attack of their own, but came when McCaw blocked a kick on Harvard's 25 yard line and Hanny fell on the ball for Indiana.

Indiana Attack Stopped.

The visitors' attack was stopped short for two plays, and when Kyle made a short forward pass to Hanny, Fitts intercepted it and was off with a start of more than ten yards.

Harvard made several fine approaches, one of more than forty yards in the first quarter, but a holding penalty stopped the advance, and then Buell failed to score on a 37 yard field goal shot. Later in the game the Harvard quarter missed a try for a field goal from a similar distance.

The Crimson's shifted lineup was very aggressive. Tierney and Kane did some fine work as defensive tacklers and did some fine interfering as well.

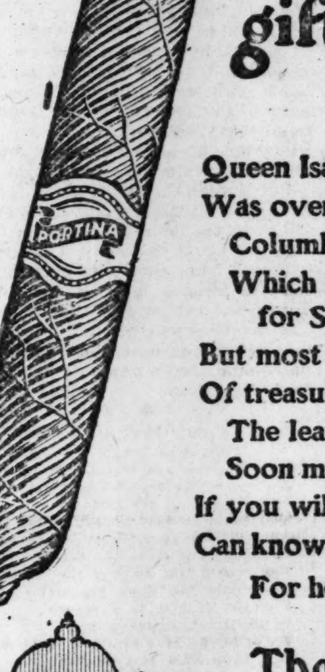
Hoosier Stars Baffled.

The two Indiana stars, Kyle and Hanny, did not have much of a chance to shine. Kyle proved a poor kicker and he had poor protection.

Capt. Kane was in the going when two of Indiana's kicks were blocked, and he nearly scored a touchdown after beating back Kyle's kick to the Hoosier one yard line.

The Indiana shifts were interesting, the combinations never having been seen in this locality before, but nothing in the way of a disguised attack developed from them and what gaining there was beyond the middle field, which the visitors did not pass all day, except when they got their one chance to count after McCaw had recovered the ball on the kick blocked by Hanny.

Hanny was the man who was due to receive the forward pass intercepted by Fitts and which was turned to the Crimson's advantage and the final score.



That Wonderful Porto Rican Cigar

Columbus' gift to Isabella

Queen Isabella's royal ear
Was overjoyed, they say, to hear
Columbus tell of that domain
Which meant a new-found wealth for Spain.
But most she marvelled when he told
Of treasure richer far than gold—
The leaf from Porto Rico which
Soon made her empty coffers rich.
If you will smoke "Portinas" you
Can know the wealth of this leaf, too,
For heaps of gold less precious are
Than this delightful MILD CIGAR!

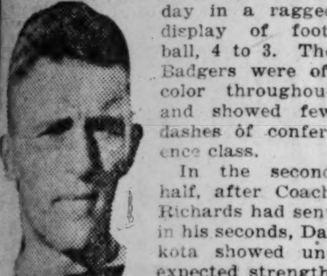
BADGER ATTACK RAGGED DESPITE 24 TO 3 VICTORY



"BOWDY" ELLIOTT.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Wisconsin defeated South Dakota State college today in a ragged display of football, 4 to 3. The Badgers were off color throughout and showed few dashes of conference class.

In the second half, after Coach Richards had sent in his seconds, Dakota showed unexpected strength and tore up the Badger wall for repeated gains.

Two Wisconsin scores were made on straight football in the first half, after several chances within the ten yard line were lost on fumbles.

The spectacular play of the game was a pass from Elliot to Sundt at the opening of the second half, the Badger captain dashing forty yards for a touchdown.

Gill, substituting for Gibson, added the final Wisconsin score by dropping a goal from the twenty yard line. Dakota's score was a drop by Johnson after line plunges, and penalties of the Badger line, had placed the ball within kicking distance.

The Badger line lacked the charging power of former elevens and the backs fumbled frequently. Lineup:

A SLIDE, A BRUISE AND TEARS FOR YANKS!

PURPLE GRID TEAM BEATEN BY GOPHERS

mention must be made of Martineau, the fleet Gopher half back. He's a terror when he's loose and made several long runs, and did some of the swellest kind of tackling. When it came to tackling, however, Capt. Hathaway of the Purple gave him a close run. The latter was all over the field, bringing down Gopher runners and several times nailed Martineau.

Purple Lose Scoring Chance.

The Purple had one fine chance to avoid a shutout and then ruined it by pulling what looked like a bad play. In the third quarter Blumenthal ran a punt back to the Minnesota six yard line, and on three plunges the Purple carried the ball to within one foot of the goal line. Instead of sending it over for that final ten inches or so, Blumenthal attempted to dash around the end, and Martineau nailed him on the five yard line.

On another occasion when the Purple was stopped for the fourth down on Minnesota's thirty yard line H. Penfield dropped back to the forty yard line and tried a drop kick. He missed it by inches, the ball hitting the goal post.

Gophers Score Early.

Minnesota scored in the first five minutes of the first quarter, largely because a prettily blocked punt by the Purple went out of bounds on its own thirty-six yard line. From there the Gophers executed just ten plays to carry the ball over.

In the second quarter the Gophers marched from the twenty yard line clear down the field for a touchdown, made by short but powerful charges.

There was a lot of punting in the third quarter, and when the Purple fumbled the Gophers got the ball on Northwestern's twenty-eight yard line. Martineau reeled and dodged for twenty yards on the first play, and then Brown went over after three more plunges.

It was late in the fourth quarter when the final score was made, and it was largely due to a fine return of a punt by Myrum. McCreery followed with an eighteen yard crash to the nine yard line, from where the score was made on three attacks at the Purple wall. Lineup:

ILLINOIS SPILLS DAKOTA, 52 TO 0; FUMBLES OFTEN

DON PEDEN.

Urbana, Ill., Oct. 8.—[Special.]—Featured by the firce plunges of Jack Crangle, who scored three touchdowns, Illinois had to use only straight football to defeat the South Dakota eleven before a large opening game crowd today, 52 to 0.

The victory may prove costly to the Illini for Don Peden, after several sensational runs, was removed from the game in the first period with an injury.

Despite the top-heavy score, Illinois did not play championship football, fumbling frequently and being unable to work forward passes with any success. The punting was poor and neither McGann nor Anderson booted kicks for more than 38 yards.

Sabo's feat of six goals from touchdowns in a like number of tries was the redeeming feature. Lineup:

STUART CARRIES HOME WAMPUM IN GOLF TOURNEY

BY JOE DAVIS.

R. DOUGLAS STUART.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

R. Douglas Stuart, an Onwentsia brave, whose sturdy ancestors trailed the moors of Scotland, displayed the best ability in traversing the four rounds of the home trail and won the fourteenth annual powwow and golf tournament at the Onwentsia club yesterday. His scores of 86, 83, 84, and 82 gave him a total of 335 and possession of the Heez-thuh-baibee prize.

R. O. Lord, who is a genuine Indian because he plays at Indian Hill, trailed home in second place with 359, his rounds being 92, 84, 85, and 98.

Victor of Three Trophies.

The "terrible Mr. Bangs," whose initials are W. D., and who belongs to the Geneva tribe, swung his clubs with telling effect, getting three trophies, but the board on excess prizes when it meets this morning probably will reduce this number to two, as no Indian is supposed to get more than two prizes on one day.

Paired with Walter R. Kirk, Mr. Bangs won the Two-best-stahs prizes for member and guest with 735 gross, Kirk having 367 and Bangs 368. He also won the third flight and Lo-net-tah prize for 72 holes.

Slason Thompson, who with H. C. Chatfield Taylor and the late Bland Ballard originated the powwow, made the full round in company with Big Chief Charles Atkinson and David A. Boyes.

Chase Winner of Prize.

Others present who took part in the first tournament in 1906 were Thomas Taylor, Sam T. Chase and Henry S. Robbins.

Chase won the prize for the greatest number of holes in 5 with a total of 30, and E. I. Cudahy that for the best hole made during the powwow, getting a 3 on number 9. Rush C. Butler won the prize for low score at the twelfth hole in four rounds with 24 strokes, after a tie with several others.

B. H. Rader and C. A. Irvin, with a net total of 325 for the thirty-six holes yesterday, won the Pin-Non-Med-De'z prizes for member and guest. Playing the "baby," or sixteenth, hole in 2—3—3—3, for a total of 11, W. V. D. Wright, a local brave, won the Robz-Thuh-Crai-Dul prize.

Victors of Other Prizes.

Other prize winners were:

W. S. Brewster, highest gross score, 474.

W. V. D. Wright, best low gross at eighteen holes Friday and Saturday, 180.

The leading flight winners were:

First—Douglas Stuart defeated R. O. Lord, 7 and 6.

Second—H. A. Wrenn defeated J. C. Meecham, 1 up.

Third—W. D. Bangs defeated S. S. Durand, 4 and 2.

Fourth—Melvin A. Traylor defeated S. B. McKinney, 5 and 3.

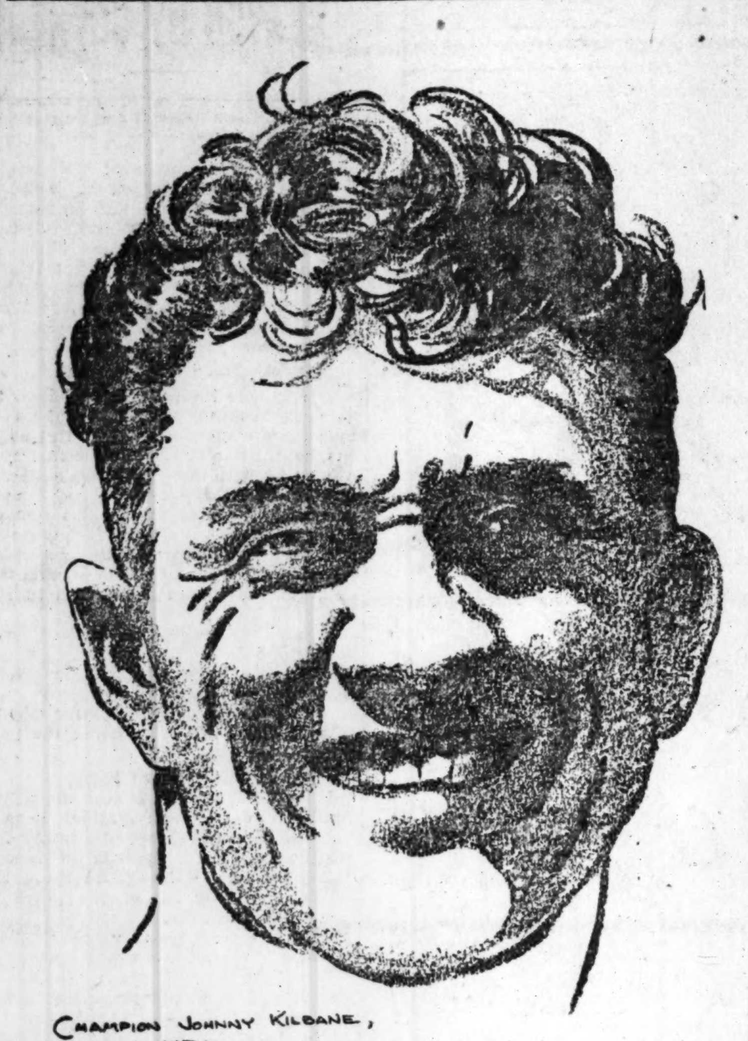
A "HASBEEN" OR A "COMER"?



Champion Johnny Kilbane, with the smile they can't knock off.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

As Jimmy Dougherty, the Leiperville philanthropist, says, Johnny Kilbane "came back with bells on" when he knocked out Danny Frush of Baltimore in the seventh round. Danny Frush was the second Baltimorean to razz Kilbane into a championship match when everyone was sure Kilbane had dropped into old age and lost his punch. The other young gentleman from Baltimore was George Chaney. Like Frush, Chaney looked like a coming champion. He had a long list of knockouts to his credit. He was a go-getter.

Chaney met Kilbane Sept. 4, 1916. He was a rugged rough fighter, with big shoulders, big hands and a southpaw wallop. Kilbane fairly massacred him. Knocked him out in three rounds. There was no more talk of Kilbane as a "poor old hasbeen."

Johnny retired to comparative ease again, taking on a small bout occasionally for revenue and caring little about challenges. He had shown he could beat the best featherweights. He boxed Freddy Welsh, Frankie Fleming, Young Kansas, and two or three other good men, and then thought he might as well take over the lightweight championship, as he was getting big for the feather class.

This was Kilbane's one mistake. He tried for the lightweight title just when we had the best lightweight champion in many years—Benny Leonard. Benny outboxed and outpunched Kilbane, and knocked him out in three rounds.

Benny Valgar, the skinny, fast rap-a-tap boxer, outpointed Kilbane and made him look a little clumsy—probably the first time Kilbane ever did look clumsy in the ring. So every one thought it was about time for Johnny to retire and let some other good featherweight have the title.

Danny Frush, coming along fast and showing a good enough punch for a champion, got the chance. Kilbane consented to fight him for a consideration—$60,000 for fighting and $3,000 for his autograph to the articles. Frush got $2,500. He was expected to make his profit afterward if he won the championship.

It was a hard bargain Kilbane drove. But the public regarded his end as the price of the championship. At 32 Kilbane is a veteran of fourteen years in the ring. His black hair is turning gray. He wears a few decorative wrinkles. He was supposed to be making a farewell appearance.

Frush showed plenty of gameness and punching power. He outboxed Kilbane at times, outslugged him now and then, but to the astonishment of the crowd Kilbane fought a rough, spiteful fight, like a coming champion rather than a fading one. He knocked Frush down in the third, sixth and three times in the seventh. He knocked Frush down with the right and with the left.

It was Kilbane's only knockout in fifteen fights that year. But he knocked out the most dangerous man he met. His reputation was made. The following February he met Featherweight Champion Abe Attel, who had been invincible for many years. He beat Attel on a decision in twenty rounds and won the title.

SARI GOES OUT OF YACHT CLASS, BUT TAKES RACE

Sari, Samuel Dauchy's R-boat, proved to be the Bob Fitzsimmons of the sailing game yesterday when it went up into the Q-boat class and knocked off six heavyweight competitors in the first of the Q-boat championship contests. The race was sailed under auspices of the Jackson Park Yacht club over a triangular ten mile course off 67th street.

The winner was followed over the line by another Chicago Y. C. boat, Spider. The first Jackson Park craft to finish was Gem, which cut in between Spider and Siren, the latter being the third C. Y. C. craft among the four leaders.

Sari's time for the ten miles was 1:18:10, while Spider's was three minutes and eleven seconds slower. The victor won by virtue of time allowance, as the Corcoran craft, Gem, which finished first, is one of the largest of the Q-boats and had to give time to Sari, Spider, and Chaperon.

Two more races will be sailed, the first at 10 o'clock this morning and the second at 3 this afternoon. Summaries:

Start, 3:00.

Yacht, owner—	Finish.	Time.	Points.
Sari, S. Dauchy	4:24:55	1:18:10	100

Gem, J. Corcoran	4:21:25	1:21:25	71 3-7
Siren, G. Spies	4:22:47	1:22:12	57 1-7
Jackson Park II., C. W. Kraft	4:22:31	1:22:31	42 6-7
Chaperon, J. O'Rourke	4:26:39	1:25:01	28 4-7
Princess, W. Haedtler	4:25:55	1:25:11	14 2-7

Ogden T. McClurg's Yank was victor in the second contest of the last series at the Chicago Yacht club, beating Railton's Gossoon by one minute and thirty-three seconds. Wright's Colleen finished third, more than six minutes astern of the winner. Minnow, the Webster twins' sixteen footer, won in the one design class, with Naiad, Ancona III., and Iro crossing the line in the order named.

Lincoln Park Crew to Have English Shell

The regatta committee of the Lincoln Park Boat club announce that they have ordered an English eight-oared shell of the type used by Oxford and Cambridge, with the exception that the boat will be equipped with the American type of swivel oar lock instead of the thole pins as used by the English oarsmen. The boat will be delivered during the winter ready for spring rowing. With this addition the Lincoln Park club will have a fleet of five eight-oared shells which is comparable to the equipment of any rowing club in the country. The annual election of officers for the ensuing year will be held at the clubhouse tomorrow night.

Finest Laboratory Facilities

The Public Health Institute prides itself on its splendid laboratory. Nothing is of more vital importance in dealing with venereal disease than a well equipped laboratory. The facilities of the laboratory are necessary, in the first place, to ascertain whether there actually exists venereal infection in a suspected case. Symptoms only are by no means sufficient for accurate diagnosis. The laboratory is also of vital aid in determining the treatment and ascertaining the results

To Employers:
You can help in the good work of the Public Health Institute and add to the efficiency of your own working force by letting your employees know the facts about venereal disease and the service of this Institute. We supply employers with placards for posting in proper places, also literature for distribution among employees. Write for particulars.

Are you afflicted with a venereal disease?

If so, do not try to cure yourself. Avoid patent "remedies." They may ruin your whole health and life. No matter how poor you are, you need take no chances at all on getting the right treatment and right care in your affliction. You may come to the Public Health Institute, where you will receive the best of treatment and care at a small cost.

Effective Treatment—Acute or Chronic Cases

Daily the Public Health Institute is helping hundreds who are afflicted with venereal diseases. Some of these are young people who have but lately contracted disease; others are men and women of advanced ages (up to 60) whose trouble has been of years' standing.

Besides treating patients medically, the Institute also does valuable educational work on the prevention of venereal disease, which is of vital benefit to the community at large. Every physician, every clergyman, every welfare worker, every citizen who wants to be a good citizen should encourage the worthy mission of the Public Health Institute.

The public-spirited men who founded the Institute did so not for gain, but to make a fight on venereal disease in the interest of the public health and good. Their purpose was to place within the reach of everyone, no matter how poor, the very best of medical care, treatment and advice.

The cost of treatment is small—a fact made possible by the large number of patients handled. Any individual can readily pay without depriving himself of any necessities.

Privacy and Convenience

The Institute is completely equipped with the very latest scientific facilities for the treatment of venereal disease, including a splendid laboratory for the making of Wasserman and other tests. The Institute can handle 30 patients at a time, each in a private treatment room. This means no waiting in a crowded reception room, no delay in being treated. Privacy from the time you enter until you leave.

Every case receives the attention of competent physicians especially well trained in this work—men of heart and understanding, who really want to do something for the person who is venereally diseased.

The Institute occupies the entire 4th floor of the Reliance Building at 32 N. State St., southwest corner Washington. Centrally located in the heart of the loop, within easy transportation distance for everyone. Patients who work in the loop or close to it, can run up at noon for treatment. Those who work at a distance from the loop can come in the evening after work or on Saturday afternoons.

If you are afflicted with a venereal disease, lose no time in getting the proper treatment. Not only for your own sake, but for those with whom you live. A visit to the Public Health Institute will do much to put your mind at rest.

Warmth by the Pound

Beautiful hand-finished Sweaters, sold as they used to sell wool and clothing long, long ago; by the Pound

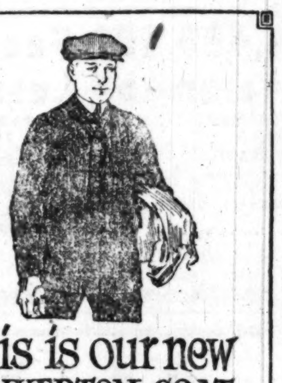
BACK in the days when a thick, home-woven "jerkin" of wool was as apt to come in handy turning aside the point of a flint tipped arrow as in keeping out the bitter New England wind, they bought wool by the pound.

They didn't think the custom was a bit odd—in fact they figured it was the only way to get honest value. And it was—and is.

That was long and long ago. But there is one place in these United States where fine wool—in beautifully knit garments—still is sold by the pound. Put right on the scales and weighed before the garment can go into its box and be on its way to you. That place is Neenah, Wisconsin—and the people who sell woolen warmth by the pound are the JERSILD KNITTING COMPANY.

They make sweaters; JERSILD SWEATERS. Coat styles, pull-over styles, belted styles—for men and women and boys and girls—in colors and stripes and combinations without end.



This is our new PINKERTON COAT

Plenty of warmth for out-door sports or work and enough "style" for INDOORS.

Closely, finely woven of finest wool; "BY THE POUND." In gray, brown, green, black, "heather" mixtures, and combinations.

And, since a sweater first of all must keep you snugly warm in even the chillest weather, yet be elastic and light enough to give you comfort in work or exercise or play, JERSILD SWEATERS, are made big and thick for warmth, but light and soft for freedom of movement. Knit carefully to fit—and then finished by the skilled hands of Danish knitters, a JERSILD garment simply can't rip or ravel.

They're big enough and bulky enough and warm enough so that you'll need no overcoat with a JERSILD SWEATER. Yet the lightness of them, and the pliant "give," makes you want to wad them into a ball, just to see 'em fluff back into shape.

Wear them any time, all the time you're out of doors. And be warm, cozy, comfortable as you've never been before.

Watch for the advertising of stores, right in your town, where you can buy JERSILD SWEATERS—by the pound. Or write to us for your nearest JERSILD DEALER'S name.

The closing hog market was active at the high point of the week, with some shipping orders unfilled. Eastern buyers paid $8.70 for fancy 175 lb "Yorkers." Owing to the limited offerings five of the regular packers remained out of the trade. Higher prices are expected Monday.

Hog receipts last week at 119,100 were 7,300 smaller than the previous week, 34,700 larger than a year ago, and 2,000 larger than the ten year average. Shippers took about a fourth of the receipts at 29,700. Estimated average weight last week, 245 lbs, or 1 lb lighter than the previous week, 4 lbs heavier than a year ago, and 21 lbs heavier than the ten year average.

After advancing 50c@$1.00 the first four days of the week, closing cattle trade weakened, with about half the gain lost. Top yearlings reached $11.50 early in the week. Average price of good beef steers for the week gained 45c at $9.25.

Lively competition in the sheep and lamb trade advanced prices 25@50c. Feeders were good buyers, paying up to $7.50 for thin stock. Best fat lambs sold as high as $9.10. Aged sheep sold up to $5.25 during the week.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 23,000 cattle, 34,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep, against 29,765 cattle, 27,655 hogs, and 30,649 sheep the corersponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 65,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 125,000 sheep.

Monday's probable receipts of hogs are variously estimated from 28,000 to 42,000. Edward Morris marked 42,000, E. S. Waterbury 41,000, William Garrett 40,000, F. W. Waddell 37,000, C. Gross 36,000, W. H. Overman 35,000, F. R. Burrows 34,000, and J. M. Waters 33,000.

Tax Exemption Plus Safety.

There is a class of securities which is finding increasing favor with the investing public for the reason that it combines tax exemption with safety and a fair rate of interest. We refer to the bonds of the Federal Land banks and of the Joint Stock Land banks. The Supreme court of the United States has held that these bonds are instrumentalities of the United States government and that they are exempt from all federal state, municipal, and local taxation, except only inheritance tax. The Joint Stock Land banks operate under federal charter and government supervision. The Federal Land banks are a legally created part of the banking system of the United States. The bonds of both are obligations of the issuing banks, in which the stockholders' liability is double the amount of their stock, and are secured by collateral consisting of an equal amount of United States government bonds or first mortgages on farm bonds. These mortgages are limited in amount to one-half the value of the land and 20 per cent of the value of the permanent improvements. These bonds are acceptable by the United States treasury as security for government deposits, including postal savings funds, and are legal investments for all fiduciary and trust funds under the jurisdiction of the federal government.

In a statement with relation to the Federal Land bank bonds Secretary of the Treasury Mellon recently said:

'In view of the very satisfactory financial condition of the banks themselves, of the exemption of the bonds issued by these banks from federal, state, municipal, and local taxation everywhere in the United States, and of the very adequate security back of these bonds, they should prove an attractive security to investors, large and small, throughout the country."

City of Toronto.

V. R. T.—The $10,000,000 city of Toronto, Ont., 6 per cent bonds are due serially July 1, 1925, to 1951. They are a direct general obligation of the city payable from taxes on all taxable property therein. Under the laws of the province of Ontario every bylaw authorizing the issuance of debentures must provide a specific sinking fund to be raised each year sufficient to retire the debentures at their maturity, which guarantees that no refunding of a single loan will be necessary. The assessed valuation of ratable property is $693,483,354, the total funded debt $130,106,352, and the net debt $46,688,141. These bonds are a high grade, conservative investment.

The output of our mills during this 30-day sale would give employment to nearly 100,000 skilled and unskilled laborers.

NATION'S GRAIN YIELD IS SHORT OF LAST YEAR'S

The small grain crops of the United States as given by the government crop report late Saturday aggregate 2,047,000,000 bu, a loss of 28,000,000 bu for the month, and of all grains 5,211,000,000 bu, a loss of 50,000,000 bu or about 1 per cent during the month of September. As compared with last year the small grains show a decrease of 537,000,000 bu, and the five grains are short 606,000,000 bu or 14 per cent from 1920 final harvest returns. The aggregate of wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley is 128,000,000 bu less than the five year average of 1915-19 as given by the department of agriculture.

In the face of this shortage grain prices are the lowest of the year and for corn and oats are materially below the immediate pre-war average, with corn the lowest since 1912, while wheat averages above the pre-war level.

Wheat Crop Is Short.

The wheat crop has fallen down materially, the estimate of 741,000,000 bu being 46,000,000 bu short of last year's and the smallest since 1916. Losses last month were in spring wheat, which aggregates 197,000,000 bu, or 13,000,000 bu under the September returns and 121,000,000 bu below last year's, and compares with an average of 258,000,000 bu and an average of 831,000,000 bu for all wheat. The three northwestern states have 111,000,000 bu and are short 11,000,000 bu from last year, making the smallest crop since 1916, when only 91,000,000 bu were raised.

On the basis of the total crop this year, with the carryover, there is a supply of 830,000,000 bu for the season, which after allowing for bread and seed requirements and carryover into the 1922 crop suggests around 175,000,000 bu for export, of which the greater part has already left the United States. The movement from the farms has been heavier than for years in proportion to the crop and the bulk of the supplies are in the the show windows.

Figures on the Corn Crop.

A corn crop of 3,614,000,000 bu is suggested by the October report, and is the second largest on record. There was a loss of 22,000,000 bu for the month of September, and of 68,000,000 bu, as compared with the final returns of last year, but the total is 366,000,000 bu above the five year average.

The seven surplus corn states have 1,570,000,000 bu, a shortage of 38,000,000 bu, as compared with September returns, and show 136,000,000 bu less than last year.

Iowa leads with 419,423,000 bu, a drop of 5,000,000 bu for the month and of 52,000,000 bu from last year, while Illinois, the second largest corn state, has 309,000,000 bu, a gain of 15,000,000 bu. There were losses of 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 bu in the leading states with the exception of Ohio and Kansas, which gained 4,000,000 to 6,000,000 bu for the month, but are short as compared with last year. Texas has 175,000,000 bu, or 1,000,000 bu more than it raised last year. Condition of all corn Oct. 1 was 84.8, compared with 81 last month, 75.7 last year, and a ten year average of 75.

The oats crop is the shortest since 1911, being 1,079,000,000 bu, showing a loss of 23,000,000 bu in September and of 447,000,000 bu from last year. Barley is 39,000,000 bu from last year and rye 5,000,000 bu short of last year's.

The potato crop of 346,000,000 bu is 23,000,000 bu more than a month ago, 82,000,000 bu less than last year, and compares with an average of 371,000,000 bu.

PUMP COMPANY CUTS PRICES.

The Hayes Pump and Planter company, Galva, Ill., has announced a sweeping price reduction of one-third on its prices for four wheel planters and cultivators, effective tomorrow.

350 FAILURES IN WEEK.

There were 350 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun, compared with 369 for the preceding week and 200 for the corresponding week last year.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Oct. 5 by 204 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $985,093,000, compared with $871,344,000 a week ago.

Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported amounted to $985,093,000, compared with $1,237,599,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The United States Steel corporation will issue its statement of unfilled tonnage tomorrow. It is expected to show an increase ranging from 65,000 to 100,000 tons during September. This would be the first gain in bookings reported by the corporation in thirteen months. It is reported plans are under way for a combination between Bethlehem Steel works and a shipbuilding company at San Pedro in erecting a steel mill at Los Angeles harbor.

The Federal Securities corporation and Ames, Emerich & Co. will offer tomorrow an issue of $1,053,000 Central Illinois Light company first and refunding mortgage bonds at 98½ and interest, to yield over 7.65 per cent. The Kansas and Gulf company has authorized an issue of $3,750,000 of 8 per cent serial gold notes, which are to be offered to stockholders for subscription.

Striking employes of the Corn Products company's plant at Edgewater, N. J., have accepted a reduction in wages of 5c an hour and returned to work. It is reported that the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey is considering a plan for the reduction of all wages in its refineries near New York City.

The American Lumberman says while there has been some decrease in the total volume of orders booked, this decrease has not been sufficient to affect the strength of the market. Buying by the retail lumbermen continues fairly heavy and the industrial trade is still picking up. Prices have shown a decided firming up tendency.

RAILROAD NOTES

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report a little betterment in the coal shipments but the traffic is still below normal for this time. Building material shipments have increased on some roads, and there have been good shipments of lumber. Steel tonnage is gaining slowly. Officials of southern roads report there was a good movement of cotton on some lines, and the movement of wheat to the gulf is still fair. General merchandise is running about even with a year ago. Total tonnage is still a little below the figures of a year ago.

Senator Cummins, chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, has been in conference with the other senators from the agricultural states with regard to freight rate reductions on farming products and will present their full case to the railroad executives with whom he expects to confer this week.

An issue of $3,000,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bonds, maturing July 1, 1946, was proposed to the interstate commerce commission yesterday for approval by the Western Pacific railroad. The proceeds of the issue will be used to redeem $2,700,000 of outstanding 6 per cent equipment trust notes and reimburse the company's treasury for $300,000 of the notes already paid off.

It is reported here that the Erie railroad company has closed a contract with the Greenville Steel Car works for the repair of 1,000 steel cars.

LACK OF BUYING KEEPS GRAINS AT LOW LEVELS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

The grain markets are suffering to a considerable extent from the absence of new investment buying, rather than from heavy selling pressure, although liquidation was of liberal volume a good part of the day, and new low levels were made for all grains.

Evening up for the week and for the government report, which was given out long after the close, brought a fair rally, but closing trades were unchanged to ¼c lower for wheat and ⅞@1⅛c off for corn and ¼c lower for oats, while rye, after selling lower early, advanced and closed ½@1c higher, with December leading.

Severe liquidation, with new low prices made daily, featured the week's trading, the extreme decline bringing a revival of export buying, although it had little influence as a sustaining factor. The close was at a good rally from the lowest prices of the season, with wheat 6½@8¾c lower, corn, 1½c lower on the active trading futures, oats off 1⅜@2½c, rye, 8½@9c, and barley 2c lower. Lard lost 57½c for October and 22½c for the deferred futures, while January ribs finished 22½c lower than a week ago.

Buying Support Poor.

Liquidation was on in wheat, and the buying support was poor until the last. There was continuation of the same bearish sentiment that has existed all week, and little resistance to the decline here until toward the last, when reports that two cargoes of Pacific coast wheat were sold Friday to go to India, caused a rally. There were also sales on the Pacific coast to Italy, and 1,000,000 bu new business was reported from New York.

This started a buying movement, which carried the price up 1¾c to the top level of the day, but it met increased selling, which carried the price off at the last.

At the low point December was down to $1.07¼ and May to $1.12½, with the close 1¼@1½c above the inside figure, with an uncertain feeling. Kansas City reported the milling output there for the week 100,000 brls, or 47,000 brls more than last year, and said the mills were booking a good business on the decline. Minneapolis reported larger sales of flour at reduced prices.

Export clearances from the seaboard were 83,000 brls flour and 1,217,000 bu wheat. Winnipeg reported exporters buying futures and on the break here there was a good absorption of wheat attributed to seaboard exporters, but the main buying was to take profits on previous sales. The week's movement at primary markets of 11,000,000 bu was 921,000 bu more than the previous week, and a good average for this season.

500,000 Bu Corn Sold for Export.

A little break in the monotony of the routine corn news appeared in the report of 500,000 bu being sold for export, part at the gulf at 9c over Chicago December. Liquidation was on in futures and local professionals and commission houses had corn to sell on stop orders at 48c for December and 53½c for May. The low point was 47⅛c for December and 52⅞c for May.

The close was at a small rally. There were two cars of new corn in from Illinois, which came too late to be sold. The week's movement was near the record, 11,836,000 bu at primary points, an increase of 6,324,000 bu over last year.

Big buying of May oats by leading elevator interests helped to sustain values for a time, but the low point was 1c under the previous day's close for December and down to 37¼c for May, with a rally of ½@¾c at the last. Liquidation was general and there was buying of December and selling May by cash interests.

Eastern houses were good buyers of rye for Montreal exporters and advanced December 2¼c after a break of ¾c early, making a close at the best prices with a gain of 1½c for the day. Selling was by local interests.

Provisions Rally at Close.

Provisions were lower early on selling by the small packers and longs, but rallied at the last on improved buying and closed at the top for lard, with gains of 7½c on the distant futures, while October was unchanged. Cash trade was moderate. Shipments of lard and meats for the week decreased over 5,000,000 lbs and were under last year's. Liberal hog supplies are expected. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for cash wheat seems to be more liberal than generally believed. Sales Friday were reported at around 2,000,000 bu, of which only 800,000 bu were reported that day, and included in the total were 500,000 bu from the Pacific coast to India. Some New York exporters expressed the view that India would have to make heavy purchases there. Italy is expected to be in the market Monday. Sales of wheat yesterday were estimated at 300,000 to 400,000 bu in all positions. Fresh export call at the gulf slow. Corn sales were 500,000 bu at the seaboard, with 282,000 bu sold at Chicago to go to the seaboard.

Domestic shipping sales were 41,000 bu wheat, 207,000 bu corn, and 180,000 bu oats, with 50,000 bu oats sold to go to store.

Demand for cash wheat on spot was fairly good, especially for red winter. Offerings were small and premiums well maintained, with No. 2 hard ¼@½c over December. Springs were firm. Receipts, 34 cars.

Southwestern markets reported a better demand for wheat, with St. Louis 1@2c higher, but at Kansas City prices were 1@6c lower, and Omaha 2@3c lower. Minneapolis premiums were generally unchanged. No. 1 northern at Winnipeg sold at ⅛@¼c over the October, the narrowest difference so far this season.

Cash corn prices were 1c lower for the bulk of sales, with little change in the basis, No 1 and No. 2 mixed and white bringing around 2¼c, and yellow 1¾@2c under the December. Receipts, 489 cars, including 2 cars of new, the first of the season. Outside markets were unchanged to 1½c lower.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment among trade leaders in wheat remains favorable to sales on all good bulges until there is a decided letup in receipts and a belief in greater permanency to the export demand. There has been 6,000,000 bu of wheat sold for export this week, although the leading exporters are bearish. The Pacific coast is selling wheat and flour to the orient, and sold 60,000 bu to come east by rail during the day, part going to Memphis and the balance scattered out over the country. They are shipping wheat through the Panama canal to Atlantic seaboard ports, and expect to get a reduction of 15 per cent in rail rates to the east.

There has been drastic liquidation and May wheat is off 30c from the recent high point in about a month. Prices are so low that a few traders hesitate about pressing the short sides, while others are talking $1.00 for December next week. There is no general speculative trade on the buying side, and the market appears as weak at the lowest level of the season as it was recently strong around the top figures, when May wheat was above $1.40, while it is now $1.14. Wheat is selling at 70c in western Nebraska.

Corn and oats are at prices that will bankrupt the farmers if they are continued for a few months, as 30@35c for corn is entirely too low. Yet stocks are large and the speculative interest indifferent to the buying side, regardless of low values.

The purchase of 500,000 bu wheat by India on the Pacific coast was not a surprise to the trade, as vessels were chartered there some time ago with the option of sending them to India. Negotiations are said to have been under way for about a month between New York and India. The purchase in some quarters was taken as confirming the reports that the Australian surplus was exhausted and further business would not be surprising.

Finest quality of new English wheat is selling in Lancashire country markets at equal to $1.05 per bu. Owing to this low price the large port mills are severely handicapped, as they have to pay very much more for foreign grain and then pay the additional rail rate on their flour.

December wheat at Kansas City yesterday sold down to 98⅞c, the first time that any of the future markets have been below $1.00 in six years.

Included in the shipments of grain from Chicago the last week were 402,000 bu wheat and 1,878,000 bu corn to American ports via lake, and 2,435,000 bu corn and 66,000 bu rye to Canada.

Expectations are that there will be a big run of wheat in the Canadian northwest this week. It will take improved buying to sustain values, as indicated by reports from there.

E. M. Samuel, who has been on the Chicago Board of Trade for forty years, has posted his membership for transfer.

No. 2 yellow corn is $16.40 a ton, as compared with $24.00 per ton for No. 1 timothy hay.

"Choice old No. 2 yellow corn selling at 45½c reflects 25c to farmers in western Iowa, and 20c for new No. 4 yellow, and will serve to shut off the movement as soon as old sales are filled," said a local cash handler. "It looks dangerous to follow the decline in corn."

"When we reflect upon the drop in wheat prices since last year we come to the conclusion that it was inevitable, that deflation, no matter how painful, was bound to come," said William C. Weigand of J. Rosenbaum Grain company. "The war only made abnormal inflation possible. With the return of the world to peaceful endeavor production of life's necessities was bound to increase, and this is now leading us back again into the path of normalcy."

"It will be difficult to stimulate speculative buying interest in wheat until a demand is found for the spot grain," said Charles Sincere & Co. "Until this occurs no permanent advance is likely."

DRY GOODS MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Cotton goods were quieter today with prices firm in gray goods. Rising prices were made on many lines of branded domestics. Yarns were firm, combed yarns being especially strong. Knit goods were in fair demand. Linens were active and firmer. Burlaps were quiet. New lines of men's clothing for spring will be shown and priced by leading manufacturers next week. While price changes will not be important, much better values will be shown in the garments because of the higher quality cloths used.

The New York Times.

New York, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The recovery in stock market prices which began on Friday continued today and once again the upturn was under the leadership of the oils. It was not a startling upturn which took place in any quarter of the list, and probably in part represented evening up operations on the part of the speculators for the decline.

This was not wholly true in the case of oils, for it appears that some public participation has been attracted to these issues. However, the volume of trading was small and continued to be ruled by the professional element. Taking the list in its entirety the majority of changes were represented by fractions.

Liberty Bonds Rise Again.

There was spectacular buying of Liberty bonds again today, carrying most issues up to new high levels for the movement. An upturn of 200 points, or $2 per $100 bond, to $94.60 by the first 4¼s furnished the feature. Gains of other issues ranged from 20 to 80 points.

The rise in Liberty bonds has now gone to a point where approximately [illegible],000 has been added to the market value of these issues, as compared with the low record prices. Of this remarkable enhancement $588,900,000 has been added since Sept. 1. On the basis of an estimate that there are 10,000,000 owners of Liberty bonds, the total rise averages $138.40 per individual holder.

Foreign Exchange Advances.

Further evidence of strength was to be found in the foreign exchange market, an upturn in the leading rates taking place under the leadership of sterling. The recovery in sterling might be merely a reflection of the decrease in grain and cotton bills. Also there has undoubtedly been a forward impetus derived from covering operations. During last week sterling rose some 9c and 2½c of this gain came today.

The upturn in sterling has brought about a decided firming up in other rates. Francs, for instance, at the close today were up nearly ¼ of a cent, as compared with a week ago. Exchange on Amsterdam, Rome, Switzerland, and the Scandinavian countries has recovered substantially and the same degree of strength has been evidenced in the case of Sweden and Denmark.

Bank Reserves Reëstablished.

An increase of $38,826,510 in the surplus reserve of the New York clearing house banks converted last week's deficit into a surplus at the end of this week of $27,964,260. Loans and discounts meanwhile increased $2,696,000, while there was an increase in deposits of $21,169,000. The reserves of member banks at the federal reserve bank increased $36,149,000.

The statement of actual condition, with comparison with last week's figures, follows:

	Oct. 8.	Oct. 1.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Trading in Chicago stocks was fairly active in the week-end session yesterday. National Leather and Stewart-Warner were the active issues and both declined fractionally. The balance of the list was higher with all the packing house issues showing firmness. On small sales Montgomery Ward advanced 1⅛ points, this being largely the result of active buying in the New York market. All other price changes were confined to fractions.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

The weekly review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

Interest in the local securities was centered chiefly in the public utility issues, which continued to reflect improved earnings made possible by decreased costs of labor and material. New high for the current movement featured practically the entire list, sales being made in American Light and Traction common between 88½@90 and in the preferred at 79½@80½. Appalachian Power common was fractionally higher at 4½@5, while the preferred advanced four points to 38½@41. The Cities Service issues rallied materially, closing at 140 bid, 142 asked on the common, and the preferred at 53½@54, and the bankers' shares were quoted 15½@16½. Trades in Commonwealth Power, Railway and Light common were recorded at 8½@9¼, the preferred 25½@26½. Northern States Power common was neglected at 46 bid, 48 asked, preferred 79 bid, 80 asked. Standard Gas and Electric common was somewhat higher, sales being made at 8@8¼, preferred 33½@34¼.

The industrials were generally quiet, although a firm undertone was noted. Considerable trading took place in U. S. Gypsum, which improved 3 points to sales at 23½. Kellogg Switchboard also advanced to sales at 40, but was offered at this price at the close, with bids of 39. Butler Bros. was steady at 32½@33, while the Northwestern Yeast was in demand at 293, with limited offerings at 297. Consumers preferred was traded in between 61½@64, while the common sold at 5½. Burroughs Adding Machine rallied to sales at 137, and Wahl preferred was also stronger at 82 bid, with practically no stock offered for sale. Moline Plow preferred improved to sales at 8½, and Avery preferred was in demand at 48, with limited offerings at 51, and the common continued quiet at 20@24.

Interest in the sugar issues was confined to Holland-St. Louis Sugar, which declined to sales at 3⅞. Columbia was unchanged at 6¼@6¾, and Michigan Sugar was quiet at 5¼@5½. Utah-Idaho was traded in at 2¾.

The motor issues were generally quiet, Packard being unchanged at 5¼@5¾, and Stearns steady at 24@25 ex dividend. Paige eased off two points, 12@14. McCord was neglected at 5½@5¾.

Local bonds generally sold off from the previous high level, but were in better demand at the close. Armour 7s sold off from 100¾ to 99¾, but firmed up to a close of 100. The action of Swift 7s of 1925 was similar, sales ranging between 100¾@99⅝, also closing at 100. The Wilson 6s were an exception, showing decided strength throughout the week. The first 6s improved from 88¼ to 89½ bid, 90 asked, and the convertible 6s from 83¼ bid to 84 asked. The Libbys were also stronger, advancing ⅝ of a point to 96⅝ bid, 97 asked. The local utilities were off fractionally, Commonwealth Edison 6s closing at 98@98½, while the 7s lost ¼ at 100½@101. Public Service 5s of Northern Illinois were offered at 77¾, and People's Gas 5s fractionally lower at 77½@77⅞.

An "Issue" of Interest to ALL Investors!

One of America's distinctive "apartment hotels" is the security for these bonds. The location is one of the most valuable and imposing sites in Chicago's North Shore District—eminently suited for this magnificent structure designed for those who desire perfectly appointed city homes. Although neither a hotel nor an apartment building, it combines the desirable features of both.

The Management is in the hands of a large national organization that is successfully operating a number of similar highly profitable enterprises in large cities of the United States and Canada.

The Earnings are conservatively figured at four times the amount of interest obligations. Compare this carefully with the fact that many bond issues are recommended as attractive because the estimated earnings are 2½ times the bond interest.

The Stability of rental income is assured by the present demand from Chicago's substantial business men for permanent residential quarters of the character offered. For example, upon reading a brief description of this building with its unusual appointments and service, one of the best known business men in Chicago immediately made a reservation for an apartment.

The Interest is seven per cent. And it is noteworthy that we who were pioneers in bringing to the investing public this attractive rate of income on sound First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds are still maintaining it upon security of unusual desirability.

This business is a religion

—to the men at its head and to those who serve it by serving you!

The men who are making Foreman & Clark a great national institution would rather do just that—than play golf, go fishin', eat, drink or sleep.

Making work, play and hobby of their jobs —puts the big personal punch in this business.

Foreman & Clark will never outgrow their close touch with the public, because you can't outgrow homely, human, old-fashioned friendliness and warmth!

Trade Upstairs and Save $10

We manufacture our own merchandise—on a big scale—producing 4,000 garments per week in our own big New York factories.

We operate a chain of UPSTAIRS stores all over the country. We save $497,568 yearly in rent.

We operate our factories on a 4% overhead, and our stores on an 18% overhead—less than half the usual cost.

Our stocks are sold out and renewed completely every 6 weeks, instead of every 6 months. That means a small profit on our investment eight times a year, instead of big profits twice a year.

We do more for a man than any store, anywhere —we give him more in value, more in service, more in guaranteed quality. That's why, when he leaves our store, we know he's coming back, just as 83 out of every 100 customers "repeat" their buying here!

Open Saturday Evenings Until 9 P. M.

Startling Methods like these — alone could fire such loyalty
— alone could win half a million men to Foreman & Clark clothes!

We conduct the strangest school of salesmanship in the world. We teach a man by un-teaching him. He un-learns—before he learns. Most of his ideas about clothing methods get blown to the bow-bows. It's a pretty stiff jolt—if he survives, he's good.

For instance:

Maybe he's been selling clothes downstairs, where they charge off $2 to $3 on each sale for rent. Now he sells them UPSTAIRS, where big volume and low rent cut that cost to 38 cents per garment.

Maybe he's been selling clothes at four profits —now he sells them here at one profit.

Maybe he's been selling clothes (for somebody else) at $50 to $75—now he sells them (for us) at $25, $30 and $35—while his practiced eye tells him these suits and overcoats are equally well made, from equally fine fabrics!

Maybe this man who joins our staff has been selling clothes designed 6 months back—now he sells garments here styled less than 3 weeks ago, direct from our 5th Avenue New York workshops.

Maybe he's been selling clothes in plate glass and plush rug "mansions"—now he sells 'em in plain, clean UPSTAIRS salesfloors, without fancy trimmings—and he knows the difference it makes in price.

Maybe he's been selling clothes under a 35% "overhead expense"—now he's selling them here at 18% overhead.

He's seen prices marked up early in the season, and marked down again for clearance—now he sees none of that—no sales—no clearance—no bunk!

Maybe he's been selling clothes to "charge" customers, and has "charged" $6 or $7 on the price of each suit for the privilege of credit. Now he sells suits here on a cash basis only—and at cash prices only!

Maybe he's been handling clothes under a flimsy guarantee that sounded good but meant nothing—now he's selling them under the Foreman & Clark guarantee—the broadest clothing guarantee in the world—not a verbal "mess-o'-word"—but a written document bearing our authentic signature.

No wonder every Foreman & Clark man is enthusiastic! He's hard to "sell" —and we've "sold" him. He's a skeptic—and we've SHOWN him! He's "wise" to the tricks of the clothing game—and he finds all those tricks missing.

The reason we earn the confidence of the public, and keep it—is because we first earn the confidence of our men, and keep that!

The ETERNAL TRIANGLE

by INEZ HAYNES IRWIN

Two Greenwich Villagers Find the New Freedom Has Its Limitations

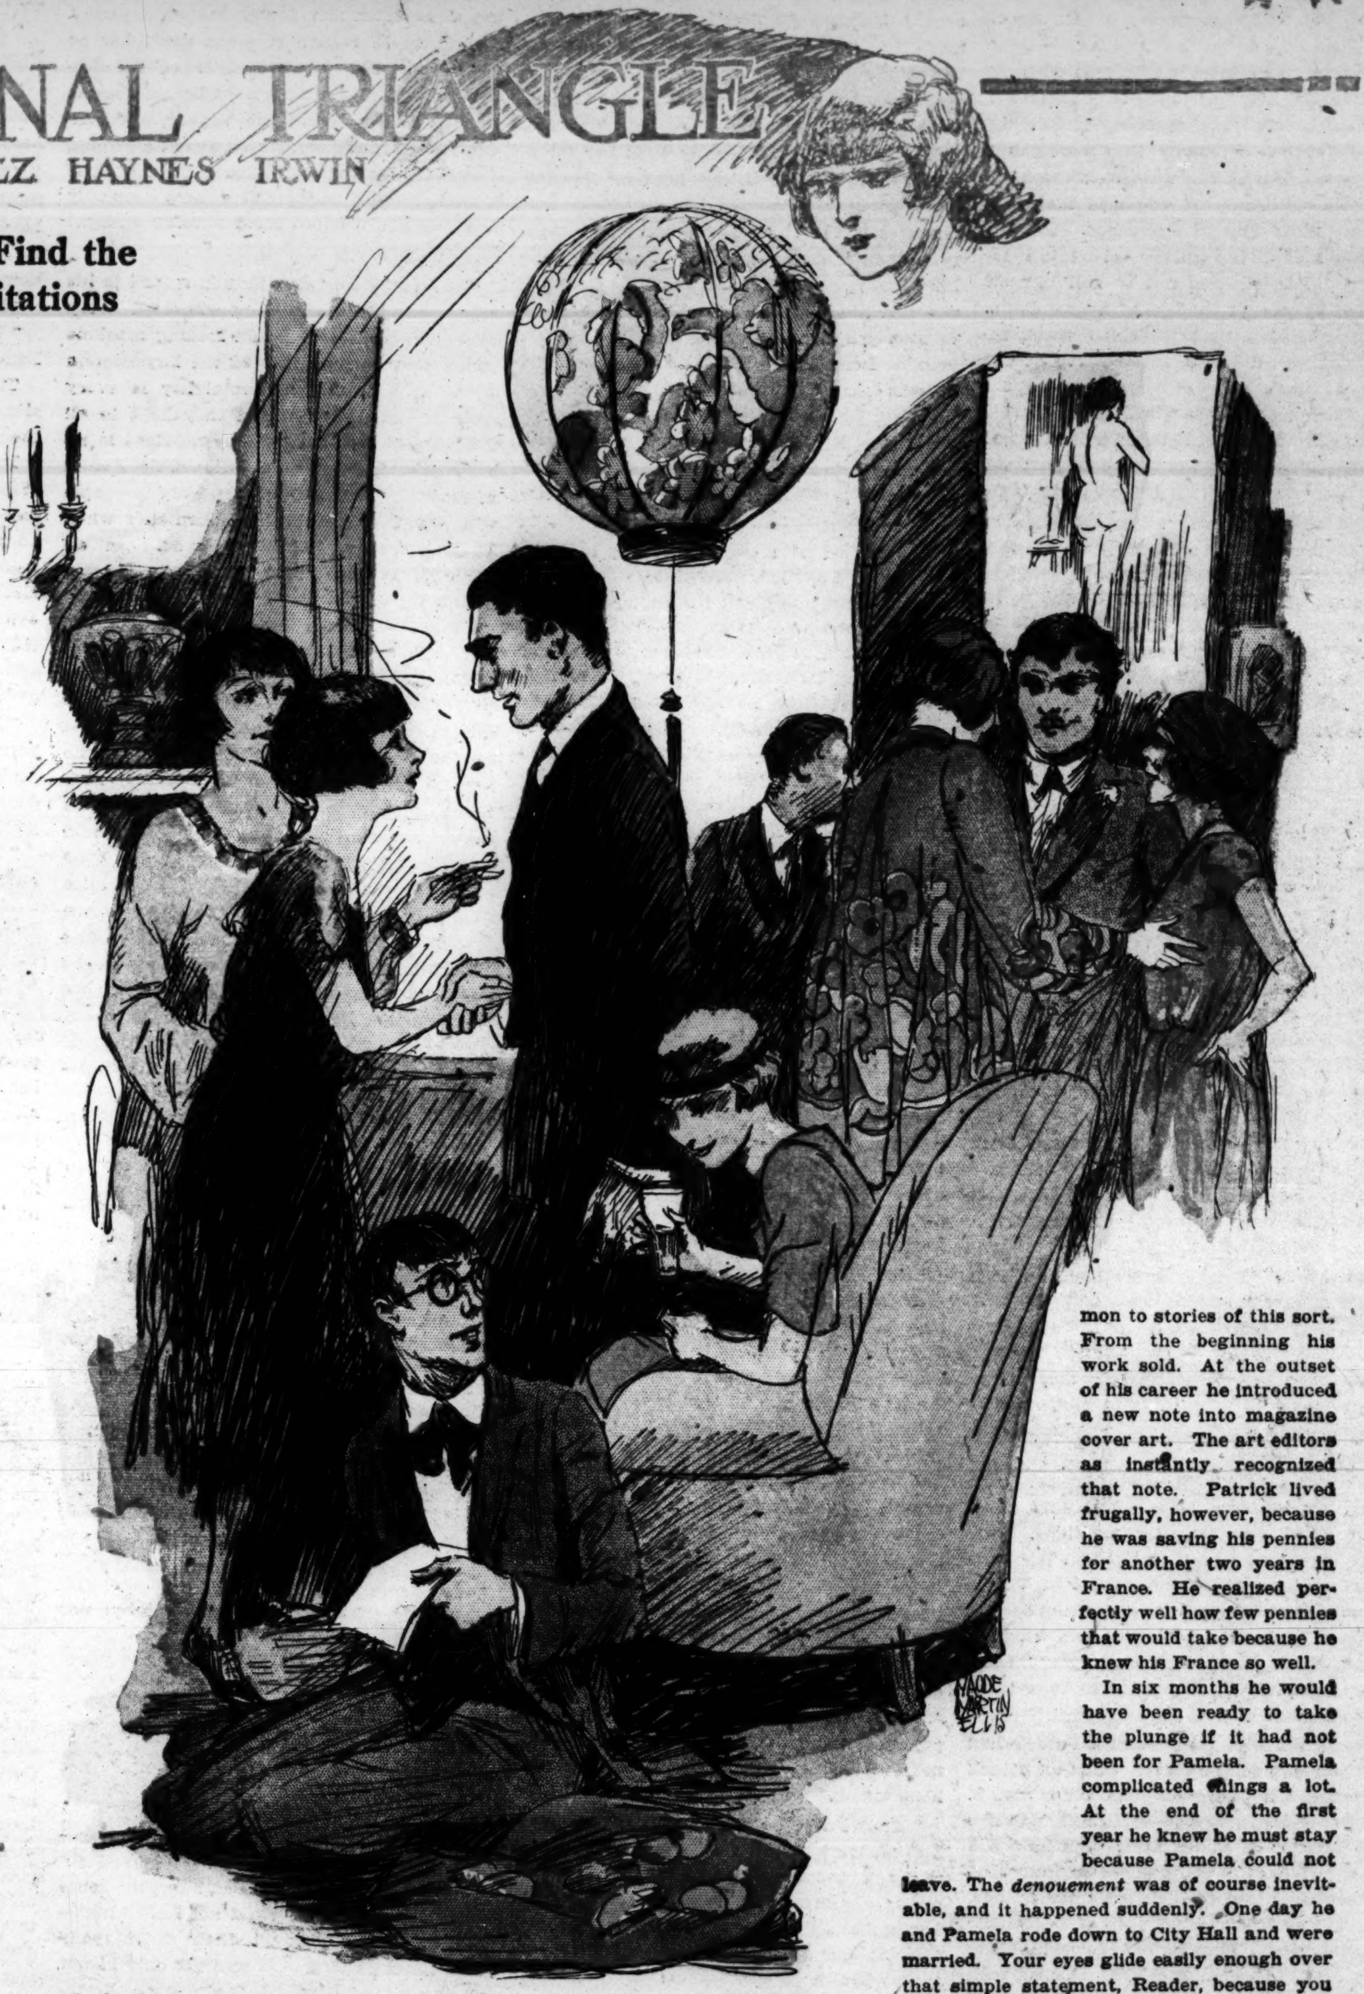
PAMELA NELSON and Patrick Quinn said always that their memories retained no picture of Greenwich Village which did not contain the other. It happened that they made their initial explorations of the Village on the same day. Pamela had come to New York from the Middle West, landing in the Pennsylvania station. Patrick had come into New York from New England, landing at the Grand Central station. Registering at colossal hotels in the vicinity, they had been struck with the idea of seeing Greenwich Village first. Both knew the Fifth avenue bus was the accepted vehicle for the invasion of this promised land. Patrick boarded the bus at Forty-second street; Pamela signaled to it at Thirty-second street. Both got seats on the top. Both pressed the button for the bus to stop opposite the Brevoort. Both arose from their seats at the same time. And then—was the driver in a malign mood that morning or did, perchance, a little, blind, winged, dimpled, curly headed, bow and arrowed god perch himself a moment on the wheel? At any rate a jerk of the bus threw Pamela against Patrick. They struck each other with a force that filled the firmament, the atmosphere, the street, and inlaid facades of abounding buildings with stars. Pamela turned red with wrath and Patrick white with embarrassment.

They passed each other constantly in the next week. And when, a month later, they met under the most decorous auspices of the Village—and nowhere is there more decorum than in Greenwich Village—they exchanged reminiscences and impressions. By this time Pamela was living in the little, dusty, queer shaped worm eaten garret of an old house situated somewhere in that tangled neighborhood where Fourth avenue engagingly crosses Fourteenth street. She was finding life chock full to the brim with romance. She had swallowed the Greenwich Village philosophy lock, stock, and barrel; hook, line, and sinker. She was even sapient enough not to say when the bourgeois commented, "O, you live in Greenwich Village!" "O, but I'm not one of the Villagers, you know." Instead she answered, "O, yes, I am a regular Villager, you know." Nevertheless she felt that her position as secretary in the office of a downtown captain of finance was a little incongruous with her new character. She wished awfully that she was an artist of some kind. Even the films would have done. But she did her best to make up for the part of a regular Villager. She bobbed her hair and, the instant she returned to her garret at night, she donned a charming smock.

Uptown slummers, making an occasional foray on the Village, noted the little slim figure with approval. Her banged brown hair stopped just short of her level brown brows, her straight brown lashes and her forward glancing blue eyes. In the back, the cropped line of hair showed a neck as slim as a boy's. Pamela had artistic aspirations and a little instinct for writing verse, but no real artistic ability.

Patrick, on the other hand, had a touch of something very close to genius. The last of a line of clergymen, he was gently born and gently bred. Two unforgettable years, his sixteenth and seventeenth, had been spent in France—the winters in Paris, one summer in Normandy, the other in Brittany. Then came college, the Great War, France again—but a France bloodily broken.

When Patrick was demobilized he found it impossible to take up his snapped-off college course. Besides he knew now that he wanted to paint. He came to New York from Boston with a boxful of easels, brushes, paints; a trunkful of canvases. He found a studio in the Village, roomy but inconvenient and dusty, which he shared with three illustrators known to the Village as "the dog artist," "the cowboy artist," and "the pretty girl artist." Patrick was a striking ugly-handsome young man. He had moments when he looked like any young girl's idea of incipient genius. That was when his heavy black hair jerked and tumbled itself about and a great brown blaze, flaring up in his eyes, accompanied the crackle of his enthusiasm. Most of the time he looked like the silent lean dark Yankee that he was.



And when, a month later, they met under the most decorous auspices of the Village—and nowhere is there more decorum than in Greenwich Village—they exchanged reminiscences and impressions.

It was only a little while, however, before, to Pamela's eyes, he bore his incipient genius aspect continually.

This is not a tale of thwarted young genius. Ability has its early successes as well as its early failures. And whether it was that luck was with him or that, even with that touch of genius, he had developed a streak of unexpected Yankee shrewdness, I can't say. At any rate, Patrick Quinn did not do the conventional starving in a garret act common to stories of this sort. From the beginning his work sold. At the outset of his career he introduced a new note into magazine cover art. The art editors as instantly recognized that note. Patrick lived frugally, however, because he was saving his pennies for another two years in France. He realized perfectly well how few pennies that would take because he knew his France so well.

In six months he would have been ready to take the plunge if it had not been for Pamela. Pamela complicated things a lot. At the end of the first year he knew he must stay because Pamela could not leave. The denouement was of course inevitable, and it happened suddenly. One day he and Pamela rode down to City Hall and were married. Your eyes glide easily enough over that simple statement, Reader, because you have no idea of the revolutions that lay behind it. For, as I have said, Pamela and Patrick had swallowed Greenwich Village lock, stock, and barrel; hook, line, and sinker; they had accepted the whole Greenwich Village philosophy. They subscribed to every magazine that Greenwich Village started. As most of them did not survive the third number this was considerable financial loss. But Pam and Pat religiously kept the files and awaited in the calm of perfect certainty the moment when their values would soar out of sight.

They went to the Greenwich Village theaters and ate at the Greenwich Village restaurants. Naturally enough, the patter of its art-world was glib on their tongues. This was, of course, instinctive with Patrick, but even Pamela spoke of "volumes," "amplitude," "values," "singing tones," etc. And they were equally prolific of phraseology when it came to intellectual patter. The terms "capitalism," "bourgeoisie," "proletariat," and "economic determinism" spattered their phrases with blind spots. They

THE TEENIE WEENIES.
THE LITTLE PEOPLE MEET AN ARISTOCRATIC GOOSE.
BY WM. DONAHEY.

IT was a terribly hot day. The sun beat down on the tiny trucks in which the Teenie Weenies were riding, and the little folks were fairly gasping with the heat.

It had been cool and pleasant when they started in the morning, but in a short time the tiny radiator was boiling over and sending up a stream of steam as high as a lead pencil.

"We've got to stop and get some water for the engine," said the Turk, as he pulled up under the shade of a bunch of goldenrod beside the road.

Usually the Teenie Weenies could gather a thimbleful of dew from the weeds and grass to fill the radiator, but the sun was so hot it had dried up all the dew, so there was nothing to do but find water elsewhere.

"There's a house over there!" cried the Doctor, pointing to a big house not far from the road. "We ought to be able to get some there."

At that moment a young chicken popped his head up over the tops of some weeds near by and stared at the Teenie Weenie trucks, first with one yellow eye and then with the other.

"Beg your pardon, sir," cried the Turk, smiling at the chicken. "Could you tell me whether we could get some water over at that house or not?"

"Why, I suppose so," answered the chicken, walking stiff-legged through the weeds toward the trucks. "You might get some from Grannie's pan, if you ask rather polite-like. She just had her pan cleaned out and filled with fresh water only this morning. If she hasn't an ugly temper this morning, I reckon she'd give you some. She's awfully stuck up and thinks she's so much better than most folks; she'll hardly ever notice ordinary people."

"W-w-w-who's Grannie, and why is she stuck up?" asked the curious Dunce, jumping out of the truck.

"Oh, Grannie is a goose-sort of aristocrat—always talkin' about her ancestors," cried the chicken. "If you go over to her pen you'd better not start anything about ancestors or she'll talk your leg off."

As the pen in which the goose lived was only a little way from the road, the Turk and the General set off to get the needed water, followed by most of the Teenie Weenies, who were curious to see the aristocratic goose.

"Now we've got to be very polite to this old goose if we want to get the water," said the General as the little people came in sight of the pen.

As the gate was open, the Teenie Weenies walked right into the pen, and the General coughed several times before the old goose saw them, for she was busy at the time smoothing out her tail feathers.

"Good morning, madam!" cried the General, lifting his hat and making his very best bow. "I hope you'll pardon this visit so early in the morning, but we are looking for water with which to fill our motor radiator. Being directed to you as the most prominent citizen, we have come to ask whether you could spare us a thimbleful?"

"Certainly, with the greatest pleasure," answered the goose, dropping a courtesy. "Whoever directed you to me as the most prominent person hereabouts certainly directed you correctly. If you wish to know, I'm the great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter of the goose who furnished the quill that signed the Declaration of American Independence," and the goose stretched up her long neck so high the poor Teenie Weenies nearly fell over backwards as they looked up at her solemn face.

With the goose's consent, the Turk soon filled the thimble, which he had brought with him, and finding the water clean and warm, he asked permission of the goose to take a swim.

The goose gladly gave her permission, and in a few minutes the Turk drove one of the trucks up near the pan, to be used as a dressing room. When the little women of the party had dressed, the men then put on their bathing suits, and soon the little folks were splashing around in the big pan like so many minnows.

The General talked to the goose while most of the Teenie Weenies were swimming, and he found the old lady was related to all the famous geese of history—the goose that laid the golden egg being among the most prominent.

When the Teenie Weenies were ready to go, the old goose laid them an egg, and the little folks were forced to leave it behind, for it was much too big to get into the tiny trucks.

had both been psyched and knew each other's complexes as well as each other's faces.

Indeed, Pamela and Patrick had gone almost as far as it is possible to go in the Greenwich Village philosophy. Very soon they became converted to the idea of a complete reorganization of society. And they disbelieved utterly in many outworn conventions—the marriage ceremony for instance. "Self-expression," "social freedom"—they were enthusiastic converts. So that when it came to the idea of marriage—they had it all worked out carefully. Dispensing completely with the marriage ceremony, they were going to live together with the understanding that each could withdraw at will and instantly from this unbinding arrangement. Pamela had no idea of giving up her economic independence. Patrick was not to feel himself restricted by any of the ties of husbandship. Each was to keep up friendships, social relationships of all kinds, irrespective of the other. If there were children—— On the whole, they hoped there would be none (children interfered so), but if there were children all those agreements were to hold just the same.

To be sure, just before the sudden marriage of the Pam-Pats, as they were called by their familiars, and just after it, it looked as though all these agreements were going to smash. In the first place, they did go through the humiliating, enslaving marriage ceremony. It happened this way. Patrick, an orphan from birth, had been brought up by a maiden aunt, Eunice Wetherbee. Aunt Eunice, though a lovely soul, and instinctively as "free" (Pat explained this all very carefully to Pamela) as any soul in Greenwich Village, was held in the bondage of many conventions by the sheer force of habit. She still believed in the marriage ceremony. Patrick knew it would shock and hurt her to have the nephew, whom she had brought up, live in free love. As it happened Pat himself did not like that phrase—free love. As he often told Pamela, it was not its denotation that he objected to, but its connotation. Pamela, too. Pamela had a mother and father and a small army of younger sisters and brothers in the Middle West. Inevitably some of them would drift to New York. Pamela's people would object very strenuously to free love. In fact, unlike Patrick, they despised both the denotation and the connotation.

Pamela did not want any more than Patrick to hurt the people she loved. In this one thing, therefore, they decided to give way to conventionality. They would go through the marriage ceremony. But in other things—each would do everything in his power to keep the other to their mutually shared ideal of social freedom.

In another respect they seemed not to be living up to their ideas. But this came about three months after marriage. For three happy months they lived in the very modern studio which Pat rented in Washington Mews, a studio with surprising appurtenances such as a bathroom and kitchenette: a studio in which actually you did not have to use folding knives and forks or train chops to stand on end.

During all these three months Pamela had been working in the office. Then an attack of influenza kept her at home for a month. After she had recovered—well, although she kept talking of going back, somehow she didn't. It had all come about so naturally, as they explained to their mystified friends, that it was just another case of "economic determinism." Pamela had turned out to be a cook. A cook. A COOK! A cook with a blazing creative power toned by all kinds of subtle reticencies and reserves. Patrick said she cooked like a collaboration between Henry James and Jack London. Your sense of taste acknowledged an exquisite blend; but even the most acute palate could not divide that blend into its nuances. After a week of Pamela's cooking Patrick was so discontented with the various table d'hôtes which they affected that he made a business proposition to her. If she would be his housekeeper and cook he would pay her exactly the same salary that she got at the office. Pamela accepted with alacrity and delight.

But, though giving towards convention in this one superficial detail, they redoubled their efforts to maintain their standards in other directions.

They both worked strenuously to keep up their old friendships. Patrick occasionally took Rosaline Macguire (a well known chorus girl on Broadway) to dinner and Daisy Darling (nationally famous film star of the first magnitude) to luncheon, but he was so bored with their chatter, so obsessed with the thought of how much better a time he would have had with Pamela that, after a while, he gave up all attempt to cut loose from the family atmosphere.

Equally Pamela did her conscientious best to meet the affection of old friends. Maxim Godolsky, perhaps the most famous Socialist in the village, had invited her occasionally to walks with him. At first she always accepted because Maxim had done perhaps more than anybody else to open her eyes to the iniquities of the old system. But somehow she found Maxim dull. And Edmund Deirich, the editor of the new village magazine, Tomorrow, occasionally took her for a day's excursion to Long Island. Pamela liked Edmund. Edmund had developed her frugal gift for rhyme. Edmund had even printed in Tomorrow some of Pamela's vers libre. Somehow when she was with Edmund she felt like a poet—not at all like a cook or stenographer. But after the third excursion to Long Island Edmund threatened to become what Pamela described as "mushy." She said nothing of this to Patrick, but the next time Edmund invited her to a picnic she was too busy to go . . . the next time . . . and the next . . . The invitations ceased to come.

And indeed in a short time she was too busy to go. For there were expectations in the Quinn-Nelson household. Although the day before Pamela went to the physician, both of them would have declared that the thought of children was unpleasant to them, the instant they received the physician's verdict they went wild with delight. They talked of nothing else. They bored their friends to death. They demanded most emphatically that the expectation should be a boy, and yet, with equal insistence, they demanded that it should be a girl. They maintained that they were going to keep their hands off the life of the expectation. It was to grow up free. Free! FREE! The expectation was to educate itself and incidentally at them. The expectation was to discipline itself and incidentally at them. If the expectation wanted to be a painter, a painter it should be. If the expectation wanted to be a stock broker, a stock broker it should be. Humorously they rather hoped it would be a stock broker. And, prefacing every monologue with these remarks, they proceeded to lay out a program which accounted for every day of the expectation's life until it should be twenty-one.

Two things they determined on early. The first thing was that they should never employ baby talk in speaking to their child. The second was that when the expectation was weaned they would leave it with Aunt Eunice—in the care of a competent nurse—and go alone for a year's stay to France. With them this became an idea so fixed that its repetition was almost ritualistic. It formed the prologue of every talk about the expectation and the epilogue.

"After all," Patrick would say, "a baby in its first year is only a wad of flesh. It sleeps and eats with the regularity of a machine. It doesn't know its mother or father. They are just moving shapes to it. Almost anybody can take care of it at this period. And in many cases a stranger is more competent than the mother, for the stranger is not emotionally excited when things go a little wrong."

"Yes," Pamela agreed, "for other reasons I think it's best for a baby to be taken care of by a trained stranger. Its mother becomes a sort of delight to it in that case. I intend to see my baby as little as possible—after it has reached an intelligent age—so that when I do come into the nursery it will be a great treat."

On one thing they were agreed and almost equally articulate. That was in regard to becoming foolish about their child. If there was one thing about which they were certain, it was that, in nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of a thousand, there was no difference in babies. Of course, sometimes that thousandth baby happened. But for the most part they looked at birth like century-old monkeys. Later they changed to little uncharacterized bags of stretching muscles. At five, or four possibly, they began to grow interesting. Still parents were always thinking that their children were different from other children; always making exhibitions of themselves by their unconcealed pride. The Pam-Pats were going to hold studiously to two rules: First, never to speak of their child to outsiders; second, to call each other's attention from time to time to the fact that their baby was just a baby—nothing more—and exactly just like any other baby. The recitation of these two rules became part of the ritual.

Pamela's maternity was a healthy one. To the day of the baby's birth she kept up her walks with Patrick. At the end she was spared that protracted wait which often disturbs young expectant mothers; the baby came within three days of the time it was expected. Pamela was conscious of a surge of indignation, after her confinement, to hear her nurse speak of it as normal; but ten days later she found that she was a little hazy in regard to what made her so indignant. She carefully followed the doctor's advice. It was ten days before she sat up, two weeks before she walked, and suddenly she found herself well again; a strong, buoyant young woman with a healthy little boy who seemed emerged from deep sleep only to nurse and dropped from nursing straight to deep sleep.

Pat Jr.—for Pamela's idea in regard to his name had prevailed—approximated very closely to the sleeping and feeding machine which they had prophesied the Expectation would be. He was a normal boy in every respect. He throve. And they kept to all the rules of the ritual. They indulged in no baby talk. They never mentioned their child in society. They showed him only to people who asked to see him, and then only when he was awake. The baby was born on Nov. 15, and they immediately set the approximate date of their sailing for France on the 15th of the June following. Every day they talked over their plans in regard to France. A little stone house in Normandy part of the summer; another in Brittany for the rest of it. A tiny apartment in Paris for the fall and winter. They began to make lists of the things they would take with them; lists of the things that would go to the storehouse; lists of the things that would go with the nurse and the baby to the little Massachusetts village where Aunt Eunice lived. Pamela even wrote vers libre on the subject of leaving the baby, and Edmund printed it in Tomorrow. Every night as she put the baby to bed Patrick used to hear her crooning to it:

I shall leave my baby when he is a babeling—
Yea, that man-child I bore yesterday.
I shall leave him!

For a year I shall be gone.
And he will know me not.
I will leave him for his sake and for my own.
Everything about him bids me go:
His little body bids me go.
His tender body, soft as silk,
And white as a new-dropped lamb,
His little body bids me go,
That my jealous mother-love may not spoil it.
His little brain bids me go:
That nimble brain, quick as a bird.
Thinking babynesses these weary months;
That little brain bids me go,
That my jealous mother-love may not blur it.
His little heart bids me go:
That leaping heart, so thick with love,
Loving but shadows this dreary time.
That little heart bids me go,
That my jealous mother-love may not harden it.
His little soul bids me go:
His straining soul, tapping its shell,
Beating against the world these lonely months.
His little soul bids me go,
That my jealous mother-love may not tear it.

I shall leave my babe when he is a babeling—
Yea, that man-child I bore yesterday.

Nevertheless, Pam and Pat, being the acute creatures they were, could not fail to notice the inevitable contrast their child made with other children. It was not only bigger than any other child of its age in the neighborhood, but it was healthier, handsomer, and stronger; with much more of what Pat called pep, and Pamela individuality. Pamela often felt sorry for the young mothers in Washington Spuare who, glancing at her baby as they passed, looked then at their own offspring.

She marveled at the self-control which prevented their mortification from appearing in their faces. Sometimes it seemed to her that they even managed to feign complacency. She spoke of this to Patrick, and Pat admitted that, having seen Robb's baby (Robb was editor of Macdougald's Magazine), he felt embarrassed about displaying his child to them the night the Robbs came to dinner.

"Why, when I think of that little, thin, scrawny Robb baby," he said, in a voice almost conscience stricken, "I feel almost ashamed that young Pat should look so like a kid god."

The months went by, however, and each day they talked about France.

"I suppose the baby will have learned to walk," Pat said, carelessly, one day, "by the time we've returned."

"Oh, yes—and talk, too," Pamela answered promptly. "If not before."

Patrick contemplated his son, lying placidly in his little bassinette. "I should think that would be rather jolly—hearing him say his first words——"

"And seeing him take his first steps," Pamela finished for him.

"And you think there's no chance of his walking and talking before we leave?" Pat hazarded.

"I'm afraid not. I suppose the average mother takes a good deal of pleasure in having her baby walk and talk. But Art is longer and much more important, and oh! how time flies!"

"Oh, of course!" Patrick agreed, hastily.

"The most important thing in our life," Pamela pursued, steadily, "is your work."

This conversation or an endless succession of variants recurred again and again in the Quinn household.

Thanksgiving arrived, and Christmas, and Washington's Birthday and Lincoln's Birthday and St. Patrick's Day. In the Quinn household there were celebrations—with due regard to the economic interpretation of history—of all these events. By the inevitable logic of the relentless Time-machine, the 15th of June had been all the time approaching, and was now coming closer and closer.

"I suppose I should be attending to our passports and steamer reservations pretty soon," Patrick said, in an offhand way, one day. "I understand that to get passports you have to start pretty early."

"Yes," Pamela answered, frankly. "I have been thinking for several weeks now that you ought to settle everything. I am going to see Miss Forest tomorrow morning, to make final arrangements about her year with the baby."

It was as though some god of luck worked for the Quinns. Their passports came promptly. They obtained a cabin, small but big enough for two, on a eight day boat. Miss Forest proved to be just the sort of a person with whom Pamela wanted to leave her baby—young, but not too young; modern in all her methods; but old fashioned in her instinctive understanding of children; fond of babies and the country; strong and a little bovine. Moreover on her first sight of young Pat, she had remarked that she had never seen a bigger, stronger, healthier, handsomer, or more intelligent child of his age.

"We must begin to pack at once," Pamela suggested.

It was arranged that Miss Forest should stay with them at their little apartment for a week before they sailed and before she left for New England.

The day of embarkation was, of course, a hectic one. Yet through it all Patrick and Pamela kept that businesslike composure which characterized them. Pamela's cheeks, it is true, blazed like bonfires all day long; but that was, of course, inner excitement. Patrick on the other hand—and possibly from the same cause—was quite white. They watched their trunks go off to the boats, they said their last good-byes, they telephoned their last messages, they gave Miss Forest her last instructions as mechanically as though it had all been rehearsed. They kissed the baby with—as always—a careful observance of the laws of hygiene, under his chin and at the back of his neck. In the taxi Pat stared persistently out of one window and Pamela out of the other. . . . But they talked vivaciously of Paris; of Normandy; of Brittany.

The boat presented the scene, normal to all voyages, of excitement and confusion: crowds of bon-voyage-ing friends; piles of trunks; arriving flower boxes, candy boxes, telegrams, cables; stewards and stevedores whipping from place to place; screams of laughter; bursts of tears. . . .

A group of friends from the Village had come to see the Pam-Pats off. Although it happened that none of them could stay until the moment of sailing, they filled the Quinns with the warm glow of their approval and their good wishes. Ten minutes before the "all aboard!" sounded, they left the ship. But as they disappeared and before the sinking sensation of departure could quite envelop Patrick, he ran into a college classmate, also starting for France. In the joy of reunion he lost sight of Pamela for a moment. When he looked for her to introduce his friend, he remembered her resolution to go to bed at once in order to ward off as long as possible the seasickness she dreaded. He stood talking to his friend until after the boat started.

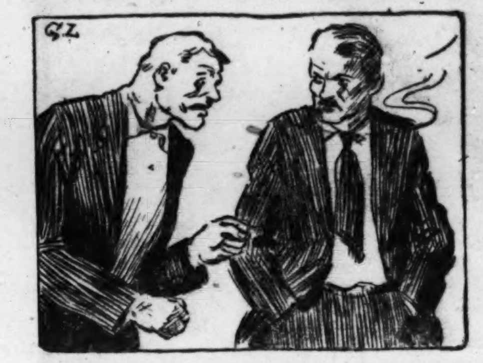
stuffed with wood alcohol. I still was a little ahead on the New York run, but that $8,000 loss was certainly hard to take.

All told, I had lost $12,000, but you've got to call such things a part of the upkeep of the game. The boys figured me as having a horseshoe, for I had dodged all trouble save that of losing my cars. Whenever I was inclined to sob the blues, I thought of Stud Tracy. Stud had five Lackicads and two Hurons grabbed on him, in addition to full cargoes. On top of it all there were five indictments staring him in the face. He dropped everything he ever made and was booked for a long vacation at Moundsville or Leavenworth.



"Marty was burning up. 'What's the matter with you?' I asked him. "Aren't you satisfied to get away?'"

Still I wasn't satisfied to bow myself out. Why should I quit when the picking was so good, and the old thrill working at fever heat. This time I paid regular money for one of those big Bissel roadsters. I had extra springs put on, had her geared up to ninety miles, and placed Eastinghome shock absorbers front and rear. They were so big they looked like silos. I didn't want to lose this sweetheart, and I framed up with a perfectly respectable friend to have the license in his name. He also took out insurance, for which I paid. If the machine were nailed, and I got away, I was to telephone him immediately, so that he could notify the Toledo police his car was stolen. And we also had it arranged, in case I was grabbed, for him to crab to the coppers just the same. I was to keep him in touch by wire along my route, and if he didn't hear from me he would know I was picked up. However, my elaborate scheme was never needed.

At this juncture, much to the great joy of all Toledo runners, Canada opened its heart and the kick commodity. At first we toted the Canadian stuff, which was about 80 proof, but it retailed at only $72 a case, and there wasn't much money in it. And all bottles were fifths. But right away the Scotch and Irish began to freely flow, and only the pikers carried the cheap grades.

We got the old price for the well known brands at first, but so much booze filtered in that competition lowered the cost to $10 for a single bottle. In the meantime a great quantity of Blue River had been shipped out of this country, and then rerouted to Canada, after which it came into our hands and we disposed of it for the good old $120 a case.

I worked with a chap at Detroit who used to make three trips a night across the river. He had the best arrangement of which I knew. This fellow had built two long torpedolike contraptions, which he towed with his motor boat. When he filled one, it would sink six inches below the water level. If he were hailed by a government boat, all he would have to do would be to let go the rope. The torpedo would float away unseen, and he would be perfectly safe. As soon as he reached this side he would get the other shell and start back. And when he returned the first one would be empty.

As you might know, we had to have the way cleared, but that was properly accomplished, though we sometimes would be held up temporarily. All this, of course, added to the general expense, and as there was a tremendous number of bootleggers in action, competition got keen, and prices again slipped.

Marty Dray was not with me on these trips, but the stickups began to meet the boys and relieve them of their loads. So I again hired Marty for protection. It was well I did. The second night after he came along I was chased coming out of Monroe. The Bissel was geared up to ninety and I was sending her along at that speed, but we couldn't shake off the following car.

They began to pop at us without effect, but it angered Dray, and before I knew what was coming off, he was firing back, through a hole he had smashed in the isinglass.

They weren't more than thirty yards behind us, but we were a lot more steady, with eighteen cases aboard, and with the absorbers and the heavy springs.

"I'm going to aim at their radiator," Marty told me. And he kept plugging away in great glee. All of a sudden we began to pull out in front and soon we lost them.

"Guess I must have hit 'em," Marty quietly said, as we thundered along. I was satisfied all right, with his shooting, but handed him greater admiration the next day when, roaming through the Capitol Garage, I ran across a machine with its radiator riddled.

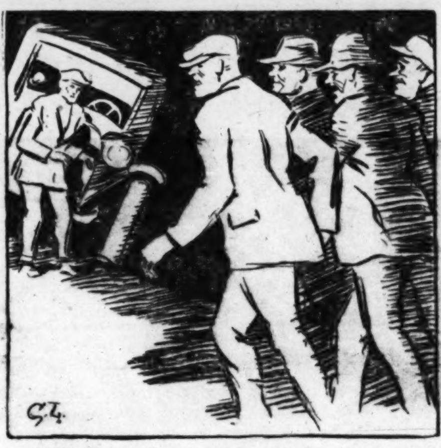
I asked who owned the car and was told it belonged to Stanley Wisnipski. Stanley was one of the stick-up leaders, and was the bird who had chased us the night before until Dray shot the machine out of commission. I confess I didn't like this game, for these eggs were cold blooded, and would not have the slightest hesitancy at knocking you off. I began to wonder if I were losing my nerve.

A week later we came out of Detroit in a heavy sleet storm, which meant we would have to do some careful driving. Speed was out of the question. However, we weren't bothered and moved along nicely until we were about twelve miles out of Toledo. The Dixie is pretty narrow, and we had to crowd to one side to let a car pass from the other direction. We began to slip and slide and then easily settled down in a comfortable ditch at the roadside.

"Nothing to do but call up the Capitol Garage," I said to Marty, "and have them send out their wrecker. I don't care much for this, but it's the only thing we can do. You watch the bus, and I'll find a phone."

I roused a grumbling farmer, and told the night man at the Capitol to rush out help.

Marty and I sat in the car and waited. Both of us were nervous, though neither said anything. "I'm worrying about stick-ups," I finally told him. "We would be soft picking, sitting here like this, if the boys should come along."



"Well, perhaps we can give you some sort of a lift," the spokesman insisted, and the quartet began to surround the car.

I suggested it would be better for me to stay with the car and for him to get out of sight on the bank the other side of the ditch. He agreed with me. In a little while we heard a car booming along, and then saw her with all lights going like a Christmas tree. Marty ducked and I waited.

Their spot caught the Bissel and they stopped. Four men jumped out. "Hard luck, old man," one of them remarked. "Do you need any help?"

"Much obliged, boys," I replied, "I've phoned for a wrecker and she ought to be here any minute."

"Well, perhaps we can give you some sort of a lift," the spokesman insisted, and the quartet began to surround the car. Just then Marty poked his head over the bank and yelled: "Hello, there, Buck Brewer, what are you doing out here?"

"Well, if it isn't Marty Dray," was the spokesman's surprised answer. "This your outfit, Marty?" Buck asked him, and when Dray agreed it was, Brewer turned to the other three, and simply said, "Nothing doing."

Those were joy words to me. Buck explained to his pals: "Marty and me have done a lot of work together, boys, and you know what that means. We'd better give you a lift."

"Yes," Marty quickly assented. "Take our load, and I'll go to town with you." And the bandits shifted my load into their car and were off.

I remained with the machine until the wrecker came up and jerked the Bissel back on to the road. She was all right, and I soon was on my way home. The next day Marty told me the driver of the Capitol wrecker had tipped off Buck, and they had hurried out to make a cleaning.

Marty's friendship with Brewer was all that saved me. Chances are if Buck hadn't known Dray, there would have been a gun fight, for Marty would not have let that opportunity slip by. I'll make a book I would have been the one to get the lead slugs.

The more I thought about this experience the more I was convinced it was a hunch for me to quit. Maybe the hunch was nothing more than plain fear, but I refused to permit myself to admit that.

I laid around for several days trying to get myself in the mood to go back to work, but somehow I had lost interest. Why should I take any more chances, I thought. With $54,000 in the bank, I had enough to give me independence for life. And when Marty came around to see when we were going to start, I told him I was through.

After dinner that evening, while friend wife was washing the dishes and I was wiping them, I said: "Nell, how would it be for you and me and the kiddies to slip down to Florida for a month?"

"Are you going to do any bootlegging there?" she asked, and she looked me right in the eyes.

"Bootlegging, what do you mean, Nell?" I was thunderstruck.

"O, don't try the innocent thing on me," she sarcastically exclaimed. "I've known for six months what you've been doing, Tom Barker, but I was determined to keep silent until you gave it up. And you have quit, haven't you, Tom?" she pleaded.

"Yes, Nell, I have," I told her, and there were tears in my eyes. "I'm through."

Womanlike, she sat right down for a good cry. And being human, what could I do but go along and cry with her?

THE YELLOW STREAK

threw his legs across the sill, and dropped into the library. Very deliberately, he turned and pushed the window softly down behind him.

Some unconscious prompting, perhaps an unfamiliar surface beneath his feet, made him look down. Where his feet rested on the mole gray carpet a wide dark patch stood out from the delicate shade of the rug. For a moment a spasm of physical nausea caught him.

"How beastly!" he whispered to himself and took a step towards the desk.

Everything was arranged just as he always remembered it to have been. All the letter trays save one were empty. In that was a little pile of papers held down by a massive marble paperweight. Quickly he stepped round the desk.

He had put out his hand to lift the weight when there was a gentle rattle at the door.

Bruce Wright wheeled instantly round, back to the desk, to face the door, which, in the gathering dusk, was now but a squarer patch of darkness among the shadows at the far end of the library. He stood absolutely still, rooted to the spot, his heart thumping so fast that, in that silent room, he could hear the rapid beats.

Some one was unlocking the library door. As realization came to the boy, he tiptoed rapidly round the desk, the sound of his feet muffled by the heavy pile carpet, and reached the window. There was a click as the lock of the door was shot back. Without further hesitation Bruce stepped behind the long curtains which fell from the top of the window to the floor.

The curtains, of some heavy gray material, were quite opaque. Bruce realized, with a sinking heart, that he must depend on his ears to discover the identity of this mysterious interloper. He dared not look out from his hiding place—at least not until he could be sure that the newcomer had his back to the window. He remained, rigid and vigilant, straining his ears to catch the slightest sound, scarcely daring to breathe.

He heard the door open, heard it softly close again. Then . . . silence. Not another sound. The boy remembered the heavy pile carpet and cursed his luck He would have to risk a peep round the curtains. But not yet! He must wait. . . .

A very slight rustling, a faint prolonged rustling, caught his ear. It came nearer, then stopped. There was a little rattling noise from somewhere close at hand, a small clinking sound.

Then silence fell again.

The wind whooshed sadly round the house, the window clattered dismally in its frame, the curtains tugged fretfully before the cold breeze which blew in at the broken pane. But the silence in the room was absolute.

It began to oppress the boy. It frightened him. He felt an uncontrollable desire to look out into the room and establish the identity of the mysterious entrant. He glided his hand towards the window frame in the hope that he might find a chink between curtain and wall through which he might risk a peep into the room. But the curtain was fastened to the wall.

The room was almost entirely dark now. Only behind him was a patch of gray light where the lowering evening sky was framed in the window. He began to draw the curtain very slowly towards him, at the same time leaning to the right. Very cautiously he applied one eye to the edge of the curtain.

As he did so a bright light struck him full in the face. It streamed full from a lamp on the desk and almost blinded him. It was a reading lamp and the bulb had been turned up so as to throw a beam on the curtain behind which the boy was sheltering.

Behind the desk, straining back in terror, stood a slim, girlish figure. The details of her dress were lost in the gathering shadows, but her face stood out in the gloom, a pale oval. Bruce could see the dark line made by the lashes on her cheek.

At the sight of her he stepped boldly forth from his hiding place, shielding his eyes from the light with his hand.

"It's Bruce Wright, Miss Trevert," he said, "don't you remember me?"

THE ETERNAL TRIANGLE

When he entered his cabin no Pamela appeared. But in the mirror was a note addressed to him in Pamela's writing. He tore it open. It read:

"Dearest: I am unworthy of you in every possible particular. I am unworthy of our baby. I cannot leave him. I have tried to make myself go to France with you—— O, you'll never know how hard I've tried—but I can't do it! I can't! I can't! I don't love him any more than you, but I love him more than France or Art or anything else. You go to France, my darling, and have your year of freedom and beauty and all the things you crave. When you come home, if you still want us, you will find awaiting you your baby and your heartbroken. PAM."

Pamela sat in the nursery, young Pat fast asleep in her arms. Her eyes were red with weeping and her mouth drooped. At intervals she pressed her cheek against her baby's cheek, as though some comfort were to be abstracted from that satin contact. Comfort always came apparently, although in mitigated form, for in another instant the tears spurted from her eyes.

Outside a taxi drove furiously up to the door, stopped, and churned at the sidewalk. After a pause it scuttled away. In the meantime the lower door opened. Masculine feet came rushing up over the stairs. Pamela lifted her head——

Patrick entered the room dripping water from every line of his figure. His eyes were not red, but he was white as a sheet.

"O my dearest—how did you—you'll catch cold—" Pamela said brokenly, leaping, baby and all, out of her chair.

Patrick gathered them into one swift, impartial, wet embrace. He replied just as brokenly:

"I couldn't go—when I found your note I jumped overboard and swam. I didn't want to leave the baby—after the first. But I put up a front before you—for I thought you did—you always seemed so determined. I didn't care about France either—or Art—or anything—only you and Pat——"

At twilight that night, when Pamela was putting the baby to bed, Patrick caught the sound of the nightly crooning. Something in the song seemed unfamiliar. He listened:

I could not leave my itty baby.
Its pitty itty hannies wouldn't let me.
Its pitty itty footsies wouldn't let me.
Its funny itty nosins wouldn't let me.
Its starry eyes, its wosy cheeks, its cherry
    mouf wouldn't let me.
I'll never leave my pitty itty baby.
No, never! never! never! never!

GEORGE LUNDY

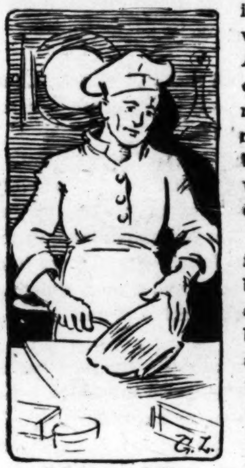
THE CONFESSIONS OF A BOOTLEGGER

An Inside Story of the Daredevil Career of the Meek-Faced Rum Runner

NOTE.—Owing to the sensational character of the revelations contained in this story, the identity of the author of "The Confessions of a Bootlegger" necessarily must remain a secret.

BEFORE we advance a single step let me admit I am a bootlegger, a bootlegger of the so-called rum running persuasion, thought I wish to tell you confidentially that to my family and my neighbors I am a peaceful, rather colorless traveling salesman for a wholesale grocery house.

In the booze trade, as we say, I am supposed to be a rather daring transporter of the commodity that, if it has nothing more, is possessed of the well known kick. Around the house everybody from mother down to Larry, our youngest boy, bosses dad around with freedom and continuity.



"I got a billet as cook in the galley of the tramp steamer Orinoco."

To give you an idea of my respectability and meekness among my neighbors, it is only necessary to point out that I always have to clear off two or three feet of snow from their walks after each downfall. They invariably beat me to the shoveling and never come within three feet of my property.

I have been following the festive pastime of dodging state constabulary, revenue agents, prohibition sleuths, constables, sheriffs, and the common or garden variety of city dicks and policemen ever since 1918.

I am not going to give you an earful about my smartness in outgeneraling the various officers of the law, for I have not always gotten away with it, but I will say for myself that I've never spent a night or a day in the hoosegow.

Sometimes artful conversation has enabled me to bow myself away from the "Good morning, judge" thing, but as a general proposition talking money was the only argument I could use to proceed on my way.

Three times I had to take it on the lam, leaving cars and cargoes to the caprices of my pursuers. With much regret and chagrin I'll have to admit that all three ventures were a total loss. And as each machine stood me $3,000 and each load of bottled in bond $1,000, you can gather without much imagination that these dashes were rather expensive. But I had to do it or live on the state's bounty for an indefinite length of time.

Bootlegging isn't what it used to be. Back in 1918 when Michigan was thirsty, running the Dixie Highway and the convenient detours from Toledo to Detroit was a nice, comfortable profession.

But in these perilous times when the country is longing for a drink and getting a million, rum running is no business for a respectable member of the community.

And so I've decided to retire. I have made mine, a fairly comfortable little stake, and I'm going to get out before I have wished on me a speaking acquaintance with any federal judge.

Whisky running now is being done in up to the minute fashion, in a major way and with business like methods. The game is in the hands of big men and is almost a closed corporation.

Individual runners like myself—the independents, as it were—haven't much chance to go along far, and you're sure to be nailed sooner or later.

Another serious menace to the private driver is the stickup crowd that lies in wait for you and robs you of your cargo without a word of thanks or appreciation.

I'll give the stickup boys credit for their system, for it is novel. It doesn't work in the summer, but it makes 'em plenty of money when there is ice and snow on the road.

Then it is a simple matter for your car to slide off into a ditch, but a terrible task to get out the heavily laden machine. And it isn't good business, as a matter of precaution, to ask any passing autoist to help you.

The big garage men, with their wrecking trucks, used to be safe, and it is to them we had to appeal. But in the last winter this had come to be another grave danger.

The stickups have members of their gang hanging around the important garages, and when a night call comes in that a machine is ditched at so and so and to send out the derrick car, it is a simple matter for the boys to be tipped off.

Of course, the driver of the derrick car does not hurry, and invariably reaches the spot of the accident a half hour after the stickups have rushed out in their high powered machine. If the ditched auto is filled with liquor the stickups quietly and efficiently remove the load and bid the indignant victim good-night. Sometimes they hook on a chain, pull out the car and its load of twenty cases, and depart, leaving the robbed driver standing there in the middle of the road thinking of some dastardly revenge. However, I'll give the stickups proper appreciation for their good deeds—they generally leave the car, so as not to cheat the garage people out of their job.

Of course, this pernicious system often has brought about some pretty gun play, but there isn't much use for one man, or even two, to try and battle four or five, all competently armed and eager for the fray.

This sort of thing finally got on my nerves. I often had declared right out loud in the bootlegging public that nobody was going to take my load without a fight, but after some reflection I decided I was urging the boys to knock me off, and I did want to enjoy the little bank roll I had accumulated after three years of winter and summer toil.

But it wasn't easy to pass up the game, with the wild rides in the night, the frequent barkings of automatics and .45s, the constant outwitting of the law, the thrill of the chase, and the steady growth of the bank account. It is a gay and festive life, but don't try it unless you are ready to give up your fireside and its companions every time you step on the accelerator.

And please don't cuddle up to the belief that bootlegging is an easy road to wealth. Far be it from me to discourage anybody, but very few have quit with a roll and without the badge of an indictment.

The green hand hasn't a chance in the world to be successful. It is just like any other business, and you can't get far unless you know the tricks of the trade, the inside procedure, have plenty of friends along the way, and, most important of all, are wise to the "system."

When I say "system" I am saying a mouthful, for no bootlegger is in any danger at all of making the grade unless he is jerry to its devices.

One has to be made of the clay of the daredevil to go along in this pastime.

I fell into the game. I had always been full of adventure from my kid days, and when I was 14 I quit school and got a job in the cabin of a Great Lakes freighter.

I didn't tarry long on fresh water. Down east I went, and with the longing for the sea in me I shipped on a four-masted coal schooner in the coast trade. I was the cabin boy, and as I had a good captain and liked the work I remained on the Caleb Beckwith for two years.

Eventually I tired of Norfolk and the New England ports, and wanted to see a bit of the world. I had learned something about cooking by this time, and I got a billet in the galley of the tramp steamer Orinoco, a Liverpool boat.

I'll say I saw the world on this good old tub, but I'm sorry to admit I had no unusual or exciting experience during the three years I bobbed about on every sea and traveled to every land.

I hadn't been very thrifty, but I saved a little, and when I finally quit the salt water I had enough to live on a while without working. In New York I ran across some home friends, circus people, who were about to start out for the season with an equestrian act. Through the Norris Family I went along with the show, doing all sorts of work from the lowly stake driving to the lofty throwing of meat to the lions. I remember I was once sent out to collect clover for the llamas. I will take off my hat to the man who invented that job.

I puttered along with the circus in a happy-go-lucky way and did not have a worry in the world. But my troubles were en route. I taught a fox terrier some tricks, which opened up a new field, and I was promoted to a clown's suit. I used to do my specialty with the little dog, and, without bragging, I am proud to state I was always able to take the minds of those in my immediate vicinity off their three ring troubles.

This act brought me a fair salary and much more comfortable living, but one day my dog died and I lost my job. Had I been gifted with a sense of the ridiculous I might have stalled along as a straight clown, but I never could make a smart crack offhand, and so back among the lions I went.

I got to be quite friendly with the kings and queens of the jungle, but they never were particularly fond of me, though I didn't suspect their animosity until Old Ben, a superannuated has-been lion, who probably was trying to fool somebody into the notion of his youth, reached out and competently clawed me on the left arm from shoulder to wrist.

That dirty trick provided me with hospital attention for a month and cured me of the society of lions. I kissed the circus good-by and when the doctors nudged me away from the white capped nurses I went home.

The folks talked me into settling down, and I went to work in a wholesale grocery house. In a little while I was sent out on the road, and I made good on the job. After I married a girl from one of the little towns on my territory I believed I had become a respectable member of society, but every now and then I was stung with the old symptoms of wanderlust. But Larry came, and Jimmy and Amy followed, and I was solidly riveted to the fireside foundation.

And then Michigan went dry. Every week when I called on the trade in that territory I had many requests from thirsty customers and friends, who never dreamed what prohibition would do to them and who had neglected to utilize cellars for the purpose for which we now know they had been built.

Of course, I had to take care of the boys, and as Ohio was delightfully wet then I would carry three and sometimes four bottles in my grip.

I always got the market price and made a nice profit. I didn't tell the folks anything about my side line, and the extra money I made was put away in another bank.

After a while the state officers began to get busy, and grip-searching became a daily pastime. This naturally reduced the traffic and, consequently, raised the prices, and I gradually increased the old roll. By this time I was carrying an extra suitcase, well filled, and was getting by in good shape because of my friendship for the railroad conductors and brakemen. My grip was conveniently hidden each trip until the danger was past. Of course, I had to look after these boys, but a quart every now and then was certainly indifferent pay for the work they were doing.

I could see regular money in the game, but realized I would have to have a car to do the work right, and so I bought a second hand flivver. A lot of taxi drivers were going into the transporting on a big scale, but I decided I would be modest about it and continue peddling groceries.

On each back door of my flivver I had painted:

Cook & Corcoran,
Wholesale Grocers,
Toledo, O.

That was the name of my firm, and I breezed along without a question. I did all my driving during the day, and I called on the trade in my customary way.

It was great sport. Of course, I didn't get many thrills, for I never was suspected, but it was fun anyway and gave me a certain feeling of adventure that I had missed ever since I left the circus.

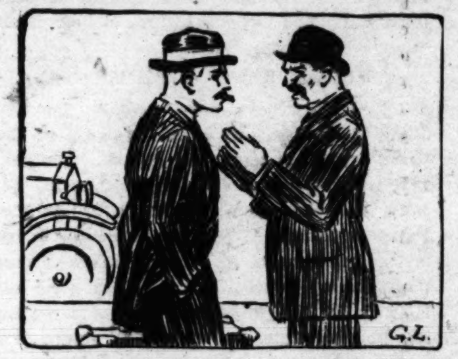
In most of the towns I was doing business with the garage men, which I have found is the most satisfactory system. I always put up my car upon arriving, and while I was out calling on the grocers and cigar dealers my load would be emptied

I made three trips a week into Michigan and spent Saturday and Sunday at home And all the time the old bank roll continued to grow. On each haul I carried five cases, for which I paid $150, and drew down $300. I was making about $150 a trip and $450 on the week. It was the softest kind of a proposition, and my major wish is that it had continued. I probably could have secreted more bottles in my flivver, and maybe I could have got a better price, but everything was running smoothly, and I was taking no chances. I am such a meek looking individual that even if I had been tipped off to the Michigan officers they probably would have laughed at the accuser.

I decided to play safe even when the Michigan Supreme court let down the ban for four days and enabled the rest of the world, it seemed, to carry liquors from Ohio into Michigan. Machines transporting booze throughout these four days on the Dixie Highway were so closely packed in their slow movement that one could walk along the tops of the autos the entire sixty-two miles from Detroit to Toledo and then hike back the same way over those going north.

It was a glorious hooch festival, an orgy of booze carrying, and the entire state of Michigan paraded to Toledo empty handed and then staggered back, laden to the gunwales with 105 proof.

Naturally my market was knocked galley west, but the liquor was a case of come easy, go easy, and in a few days I was back at the old stand. If things had only gone along in this soft way by now I would be spending my winters in California and my summers on the New England coast, but there's always a fly in the ointment, and the first thing I knew the whole darned country went dry.



"There's a lot of money in the game. But you can't get by with that flivver of yours."

But that little annoyance didn't bother me much. Toledo had profited by Detroit's laxity, and when the law went into effect there was enough booze stored all over that city to float the American navy and to find anchorage for Japan's ships as well. Prices scooted immediately, but the boys had to come across with the increase to me, and my tax remained steadfast.

It wasn't long before Toledo began to feel the effects of the great drought, and the apparently never ending supply began to dwindle. I found the stuff harder to get, and I no longer could be particular about the brand. I accepted what they gave me and was darned glad to get it.

Pretty soon the admission charge to a bonded stamp reached such lofty proportions that my customers were finding it difficult to make sales, and my trade fell off. And the next thing I knew the Toledo wholesalers were out themselves. It looked as though my game was going on the well known hummer, and I began to worry. I was enjoying the bootlegging as a sporting proposition, and naturally I was greatly in love with the stake I had accumulated. I didn't want to quit, and I had no desire to toss off the fat profits.

I was in what you might call a receptive mood when one of the Toledo handlers of the booze wondered why I didn't do a little hauling for him.

"You're a conservative sort of a bootlegger," he said, "and just the fellow to beat the game. You could make the Pennsylvania trip a couple of times a week, without ever running into a prohibition agent."

"But my job," I protested.

"Well, there's a lot of money in the game, as you know," he seductively pointed out,

THE CONFESSIONS OF A BOOTLEGGER

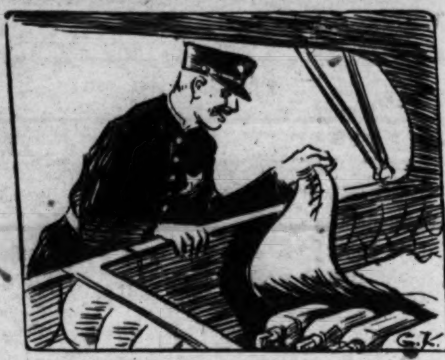
"and your grocery job can wait for another day. But you can't get by with that flivver of yours. You'll have to get a regular car. Need any financial help?"

I told him I had enough to get a high powered machine and that I would take him on. I quit Cook & Corcoran and informed the wife I was going to work for a specialty house. I didn't dare tip her off, for she would have stopped me cold turkey. I bought a used Huron supersix, a pretty nifty job that had been run only 3,000 miles, and was ready for the big game.



"A policeman had come along, noticed my Huron headed the wrong way and jumped in. Of course they would find my 240 bottles."

My maiden effort behind that roaring motor was full of thrills, and I rejoiced as my spirit of wild adventure once again had full sway. The blood went coursing through my veins and I was back in the land of romance and daredeviltry.

But I was doomed to disappointment. The Pennsylvania junket was just as easy as my Michigan experience.

Why, I used to drive right up to the warehouse in broad daylight, get my load, and start away. It was our idea that Pennsylvania was cheating the rest of the country in that no effort was to be made to stop the sale of liquor or beer, in order that the miners could be kept satisfied and induced to remain at work.

I never knew whether or not that was true, but there must have been some sort of an understanding, for we were not troubled for a long time. I would drive close to the Ohio line in the daytime and then shoot across the boundary after dark.

All night long I whistled the Huron over the ground at about sixty. I had a route that, with a few detours, took me around every town. It was tough the first two trips, for I had to feel my way along, but after that it was a case of "get off the track, for here comes No. 6, and she's two hours late, running downgrade."

I carried twenty cases in the old bus. They cost me $50 per, and I sold them to the Toledo dealer for $100. He got $120, and sometimes more. At one time selling by the quart brought as high as $18, but the standard price most of the time remained at $12, though now it is even cheaper than that.

It was mighty hard work. The roads were fair, but there were many poor stretches, and one had to know how to handle the car to keep out of some sleeping farmer's corn field. It was drive, drive, drive. In most of the cars there were two drivers, and they took turns at the wheel. But I always preferred to work alone. I got so I hated this haul, and I wasn't a bit peeved when I was quietly tipped that the district was to be closed and that I would have to do my buying at Pittsburgh.

The Pittsburgh drive was almost as bad, until I found a buyer in one of the small towns near Columbus. Once a week I left him a load, and this cut down the wearisome journey a bit. But it was in this blamed burg that I ran afoul my first bad luck. And it happened in the most innocent way.

I drove into this town one night dog tired. I put up my Huron in the friendly garage and got a room at the hotel. I always used three sets of license tags. One was under my own name out of Toledo; the second was registered under a phony cognomen, and the third was a Pennsylvania number. As luck would have it, I had the second set on the machine. The Pennsylvania license was sometimes dropped with a friendly farmer just before I reached the Ohio line, and I picked it up on my way back. I never carried more than the set I was using. Occasionally I would go all the way back and forth with the same tags. I was mixing 'em up.

I had a good solid sleep this night, but when I went to the garage in the morning car and cargo were gone. The garage man didn't know a thing about the machine, but the colored floor man finally admitted he had run the Huron out on the street early in the morning when he was getting the cars ready for their owners to come. As luck would have it, he left the machine headed in the wrong direction on the street. They have a rule in this town that when a parking law is violated the machine is run into the police station. A policeman came along, noticed my Huron headed the wrong way, and, without saying anything, jumped into the machine and drove it to the hoosegow. Of course, they would find my 240 bottles scattered all over the Huron and would be hanging around to nab me. So the only thing for me to do was to beat it into Toledo. And I did that little trick without asking further questions. That was a $4,000 wallop at one fell swoop, as they say, but it was my first experience of the sort, and I didn't have much of a kick coming.

The next day I gave up another $3,000 for a Lackicad, and was again ready for business. I stood in well with the Pittsburgh distributors, and they asked me why I didn't cut out the long haul to Toledo and work directly with Columbus. That was a pretty good suggestion, for the shorter journey saved the wear and tear on the car and gave me a chance to get more rest. And I could get home about as often as I thought necessary to keep friend wife in an amiable mood.

So I decided this would be my last trip to Toledo. As you might imagine, we had all the prohibition men spotted, and were careful not to run them down with the car. On my way out of town I saw a couple of the birds and naturally figured right away they were on my trail. So I stepped on her and tried to shake them. They clung pretty close for several miles, but finally dropped out of sight. I then knew the trick was off. They simply would telephone ahead and I was certain to be nabbed. There wasn't a thing for me to do but run the car up a lane and desert it.

It was either giving up the car or my freedom, and I didn't have any desire to linger behind bars and smile pleasantly at the ladies of the Friendly Aid Society, when they brought books and flowers. It was pretty tough to toss off another $4,000 on top of my previous loss. But it had to be done, and so I parked the machine and walked half a mile to an interurban station. I went back to Pittsburgh. I didn't sleep a wink that night. The next morning I went around to see the distributors and to get some sympathy. My long face must have startled them.

"For heaven's sake, what's the matter with you?" asked Moxie Hahn, one of the partners. "You look as if you were just starting out to do a long stretch in the stir."

"Nothing much," I tried cheerfully to tell Moxie, "only the boys were after me last night and I had to ditch the machine and load."

"You're a boob," Moxie said disgustedly. "They weren't after you at all. They wanted some sort of information, but had no intention of picking you up. Where's your car?"

And when I told him, he urged: "Get an interurban and chase right back. If you are lucky your Lackicad will be there."

And with my heart in my mouth I took the trolley, got off at the little station, and ran all the way to the lane where I left the machine. A block away I saw it, and I want to tell you that was some joy. There she was standing like the old Orinoco used to ride at anchor in a quiet harbor. And not a bottle was missing. That was a cheerful ride, I can assure any innocent bystander.

After looking over the Pittsburgh-Columbus situation I decided to make the daylight run. The main road between the two cities was a beauty, and that summer was crowded with traffic going one way and the other. I could make the trip in eight hours breezing along nice and comfortable, and was never noticed in the parade of machines.

Twenty cases of liquor make a pretty heavy load and will cause your car to sag so much a prohibition agent can spot you coming down the road two blocks away. I had extra cantilever springs put on the bus so she wouldn't drop an inch, and I drove back and forth with fine freedom and more or less enjoyment.

That was a great summer for all the boys, and those who took things easy and went along conservatively were not disturbed. Every now and then on the road I used to notice a big limousine, driven by a colored chauffeur, but never suspected they were carrying booze in it. And then Tommy Conboy, who took my place on the Toledo run, tipped me off.

A Columbus loan shark, who took great delight in beating the law, had the body specially built, with a false roof and sweeping fenders. In the roof was a copper compartment, and under each fender was another. The car would carry about fifteen cases in bulk.

On several trips this bird had his wife and two sons along, and traveled as a tourist. After ten trips the fellow was satisfied he had licked the government and sold the machine. I never saw it again, and suspect some honest citizen is riding around in it now without a knowledge of what the car was built for, or any idea of the secret compartments.

The Pittsburgh center was too good to be true, and one gloomy day, just the sort for the rope and soap box, I was told the trick was off. Moxie Hahn tipped me to a distributor who would work with me if I cared to continue, but he said he was through. The government boys had tightened up, according to Moxie, and had warned all the good guys off the reservation. That was enough for little me, and I went back to Toledo determined to loaf for the winter.

But there is never any rest for the weary. I wasn't home two days before I began to get restless, and, of course, I had to slip right downtown to the haunts of the runners. In easing around I quickly learned that New York was the new center, and that some of the boys were already in the long haul.

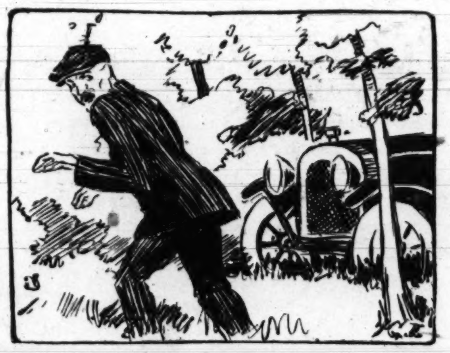
They didn't appeal to me at all. I wasn't interested in the 1,600 mile trip, the dangers of the road, and the difficulties I knew I would be up against getting to the "enemy" strung along the way. No, none of that in mine, I thought. I'll sit pretty at home and be on the alert for anything that comes up. Yet the call of the road bumps had me fast, and I knew I would fall sooner or later.

They finally talked me into it. I was the intrepid runner and had no desire to have the gang think I had a streak of yellow.

One of my chief reasons for hesitating was due to the fact I would have to take an extra driver with me. And there were darned few I cared to have along. Eventually I picked up Marty Dray, who was a two gun man as well as an expert driver.

Marty had piloted a yegg crew around Ohio and had the nerve of a lion tamer. The safe cracking game was a little slow, and, like all the soup merchants, he was out of sugar. So he jumped at the chance to make $50 a week.

The roads, as a whole, were fierce until we struck New York state, after which the going was neat and nifty. But it certainly was tough work. When I was at the wheel, Marty snoozed, and I tore off the snores while he shot her over the road. It was a gay life and made my old circus travels seem like a feather bed in comparison.



"There wasn't a thing for me to do but run the car up a lane and desert it."

Getting in harmony with the "enemy" was not difficult, but I am here to say it was expensive. These boys are no pikers. The right guys tipped us off on the trouble makers, and occasionally along the route I had to lay up a heat and remain under cover until the coast was clear.

Sometimes I was delayed by this procedure, but I was always able to make the journey back and forth in a week. All went well until I got the wrong tip one night coming out of Erie, Pa. I had word it was all right to slide through, but the "enemy" had been switched and the first thing I knew they were on my back.

I was at the wheel, and I stepped on her for further orders. On to the floor went the accelerator, and I kept it there. I aroused Marty and told him to keep his head up. We were running headlong into the night without lights, but the "enemy" had their spotlight on us.

"They're not gaining," Marty said, "but, hang it all, neither are we."

And so we went for ten miles. I began to get nervous. I was worried for fear a sleepy farmer would come driving up the middle of the road, which would mean kingdom come for Marty and me. Believe me, I had no keenness for busting into a pair of horses with us hopping along at a sixty gait.

Suddenly I heard a "pop!"

"They're shooting," Marty yelled in my ear. He didn't have to tell me. I was well aware of it. The roar of the motor couldn't kill that expected sound.

They kept pecking away, but we were outriding the bullets, I guess, for none came near us. Then all at once came a "bang." At first I thought we were hit, but I knew different when the Lackicad swerved. I felt sure we were going into the ditch, but I gave the wheel a quick twist and we straightened up again.

We had either a blowout, or a bullet had hit a tire. We certainly were in trouble, but I never let the gas sag. My luck was still with me, for we were coming into a town where I had put up several times, and I knew if I could make it, Marty and I would be harbored.

The "enemy" now were gaining on us, but we were still bumping along at a fast clip, though I realized we couldn't go much farther.

Coming into this place is a sharp turn, with roads going either way and the main pike continuing straight down. I decided to run up one of the side roads for a hundred yards, desert the car, and make it for the friendly house. My one hope was the "enemy" would guess wrong, and then have to come back to look for us. If they did that we had a good chance to make our getaway.

After making the curve and getting out of their sight, I turned to the left, drove a couple of hundred yards, and shut her off. "Follow me," I yelled to Marty, and away we went across the fields.

We could see their headlights, brightening the main road as we ran, and knew they had gone straight on. Soon they saw they had been fooled, and they stopped and turned. But we didn't wait to see any more, and beat it for our one chance. We aroused our friend and quickly got under cover.

Marty was burning up. "What's the matter with you?" I asked him, "aren't you satisfied to get away?"

"That was a sucker play," he grumbled. "Why couldn't we have ambushed that gang and cleaned 'em out when they came back? With you on one side and me on the other we would have knocked 'em off sweet and pretty."

"That might have been all right," I told him, "but none of the shooting thing in mine."

"Well, you're the first bootlegger I know who wouldn't pepper the 'enemy'," he declared. "They're not going to get me without a battle."

The "enemy" left one of the gang in the town for two days looking for us, but he apparently was satisfied we had gotten away, and ducked. Our friend then drove us over to the next town, where we caught an interurban into Cleveland. We took a train back home, but didn't hear any band at the station when we arrived. The trip cost me $4,000, but I was darned well satisfied to have escaped the pinch.

I bought another Lackicad right away and with Marty started back east. After the other escapade we were mighty sure the way was safe before we went on. And then came more bad luck.

We had some engine trouble down east, but we limped along until we reached a right garage man, who stuck the car away in a corner and promised to have it ready for us early the next morning.

There had been a stick-up in this burg a couple of nights before, and the dicks were looking for another. As luck would have it they picked out this garage to keep their car running and ready to make a fast getaway. Nothing happened in the stick-up line, but something fell on me.

Along about 2 o'clock in the morning the coppers got thirsty ranging around, and wondered if they couldn't dig up a bottle of booze in some car. And they started looking through the machines parked in the place.

Right well you know they didn't overlook mine, and when they saw the 240 quarts—and there were no fifths in the accumulation, either—they had a jubilee. They were all set to nab me when I came for the machine in the morning, but as soon as the garage man got down he found what was up, and right away tipped me off. There was nothing to do but take it on the 1 a. m. And back to Toledo I went with my bandit chauffeur. I heard afterward the coppers divided fifteen cases among themselves, and turned in the car with sixty bottles. I don't wish them any bad luck, but I hope the glassware was

Blue Ribbon Fiction

SYNOPSIS.

Hartley Parrish, who has had a sudden rise to wealth as a result of the war, has several guests at Harkings, his country house. They include Lady Margaret Trevert, her daughter Mary and son Horace, and Robin Greve. When Greve proposes, Mary tells him she is engaged to Parrish and admits mercenary motives. Greve leaves her in anger. Mary hears a shot, and when her brother and others break into the library, which is locked from the inside, they find Parrish dead, apparently a suicide, with a revolver in his hand. Suspicion is directed toward Greve as a factor in the suicide when Bude, the butler, tells of hearing angry voices in the library. Mary shares this suspicion, but Greve denies all, and voices the belief Parrish was murdered. He finds a scrap of blue paper beside the body, and later a bullet mark on an upright in the rose garden. Mary, through her brother Horace, requests Greve to leave the place. She declares she never will be married to him as long as she believes he holds the key to Parrish's death. Detective Manderton, in charge of the case, tells Mary the verdict on Parrish's death will be "suicide while of unsound mind," and professes to be satisfied, although when she assails the suicide theory she can see he is determined not to drop the case. Jeekes, Parrish's secretary, tells of a French woman in Parrish's life. While he is talking with Mary a door is found ajar, as though there had been an eavesdropper. Robin arrives home and is visited by Bruce Wright, formerly employed by Parrish. Wright tells of Parrish's rise from the London slums, of his career in South Africa, and mentions one Victor Marbran as an enemy.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

The Blue Envelopes.

STRETCHED full length in his chair, his eyes fixed on the ceiling, Robin remained lost in thought.

"The conversation came back to me today," said the boy, "when I read of Parrish's death. And I wondered——"

"Well?"

"Whether the secret of his death may not be found somewhere in his adventurous past. You see he said that Victor Marbran was an enemy. Then there was something else. I never told you—when you took all that trouble to get me another job after Parrish had sacked me—the exact reason for my dismissal. You never asked me either. That was decent of you, Robin."

"I liked you, Bruce," said Robin shortly.

"Well, I'll tell you now," he said. "When I joined H. P.'s staff after I got out of the army I was put under old Jeekes, of course, to learn the work. One of the first injunctions he gave me was with regard to Mr. Parrish's letters. I suppose you know more or less how secretaries of a big business man like Hartley Parrish work. They open all letters, lay the important ones before the big man for him to deal with personally, make a digest of the others or deal with them direct. . . ."

Robin nodded.

"Well," the boy resumed, "the first thing old Jeekes told me was that letters arriving in a blue envelope and marked 'Personal' were never to be opened. . . ."

"In a blue envelope?" echoed Robin quickly.

"Yes, a particular kind of blue—Jeekes showed me one as a guide. Well, these letters were to be handed to Mr. Parrish unopened."

Robin had stood up.

"That's odd," he said, diving in his pocket.

"I say, hold on a bit," protested the boy, "this is really rather important what I am telling you. I'll never finish if you keep on interrupting."

"Sorry, Bruce," said Robin and sat down again.

But he began to play restlessly with his cigarette case, which he had drawn from his pocket.

"Well, of course," Bruce resumed, "I wasn't much of a private secretary, really, and one day I forgot all about this injunction. Some days old H. P. got as many as three hundred letters. I was alone at Harkings with him, I remember. Jeekes was up at Sheffield and the other secretaries were away, ill or something, and in the rush of dealing with this enormous mail I slit one of these blue envelopes open with the rest. I only discovered what I had done after I had got all the letters sorted out, this one with the rest. So I went straight to old H. P. and told him. By Jove!"

"What happened?" said Robin.

"He got into the most paralytic rage," said Bruce. "I have never seen a man in such an absolute frenzy of passion. He went right off the hooks, just like that! For a minute I thought he was going to kill me. He snatched the letter out of my hand, called me every name under the sun, and finally shouted: 'You're fired, d'ye hear? I won't employ men who disobey my orders! Get out of this before I do you mischief!' I went straight off. And I never saw him again.

Robin Greve looked very serious. But his face displayed no emotion as he asked:

"And what was in the letter for him to make such a fuss about?"

The boy shrugged his shoulders.

"That was the extraordinary part of it. The letter was perfectly harmless. It was an ordinary business letter from a firm in Holland. . . ."

"In Holland?" cried Greve. "Did you say in Holland? Tell me the name? No, wait, see if I can remember. 'Van' something—'Speck' or 'Spike'."

"I remember the name perfectly," answered Bruce, rather puzzled by the other's sudden outburst, "it was Van der Spyck and Co. of Rotterdam. We had a good deal of correspondence with them."

Robin Greve had opened his cigarette case and drawn from it a creased square of blue paper folded twice across. Unfolding it, he held up the sheet he had found in the library at Harkings.

"Is that the paper those letters were written on?" he asked.

Bruce took the sheet from him. He held it up to the light.

"Why, yes," came the prompt answer. "I'd know it in a minute. Where did you get hold of it?"

"Bruce," said Robin gravely, without answering the questions, "we're getting into deep water, boy!"

Robin Greve stood for an instant in silence by the window of his rooms. His fingers hammered out a tattoo on the pane. His eyes were fixed on the windows of the chambers across the court. But they did not take in the pleasant prospect of the tall, ivy framed casements in their mellow setting of warm red brick. He was trying to fix a mental photograph of a letter—typewritten on paper of dark slatey blue—which he had seen on Hartley Parrish's desk in the library at Harkings on the previous afternoon.

Prompted by Bruce Wright, he could now recall the heading clearly. "ELIAS VAN DER SPYCK & CO., GENERAL IMPORTERS, ROTTERDAM," stood printed before his eyes as plainly as though he still held the typewritten sheet in front of him. But the mind plays curious tricks. Robin's brain had registered the name; yet it recorded no impression of the contents of the letter. Beyond the fact that it dealt in plain commercial fashion with some shipments or other he could recall no particular whatever of it.

"But where did you get hold of this sheet of paper?" Bruce Wright's voice broke in impatiently behind him. "I'm most frightfully interested to know. . . ."

"Found it on the floor beside Parrish's body," answered Robin briefly. "There was a letter, too, on the same paper. . . ."

"By Gad!" exclaimed the boy eagerly, "have you got that, too?"

Robin shook his head.

"It was only your story that made me think of it. I had the letter. But I left it where I found it—on Parrish's desk in the library. . . ."

"But you read it . . . you know what was in it?"

Robin shrugged his shoulders.

"It was a perfectly straightforward business letter . . . something about steel shipments . . . I don't remember any more. . . ."

"A straightforward business letter," commented the boy. "Like the letter I read, eh?"

"Tell me, Bruce," said Robin after a moment's silence, "during the time you were with Hartley Parrish I suppose these blue letters came pretty often?"

Young Wright wrinkled his brow in thought.

"It's rather difficult to say. You see, there were three of us besides old Jeekes and of course these letters might have come without my knowing anything about it. But during the seven months I worked with H. P. I suppose about half a dozen of these letters passed through my hands. They used to worry H. P., you know, Robin. . . ."

"Worry him?" exclaimed Robin sharply, "how do you mean?"

"Well," said Bruce, "Parrish was a very easy going fellow, you know. He worked every one—himself included—like the devil, of course. But he was hardly ever nervy or grumpy. And so I was a bit surprised to find—after I had been with him for a time—that every now and then he sort of shriveled up. He used to look . . . well, careworn and . . . and haggard. And at these times he was pretty short with all of us. It was such an extraordinary change from his usual cheery, optimistic self that sometimes I suspected him of dope or some horror like that. . . ."

Robin shook his head. He had a sudden vision of Hartley Parrish, one of his long, black Partagas thrust at an aggressive angle from a corner of his mouth, virile, battling, strong.

"O, no," he said, "not dope. . . ."

"No, no, I know," the boy went on quickly. "It wasn't dope. It was fear. . . ."

Robin swung round from the window.

"Fear? Fear of what?"

The boy cast a frightened glance over his shoulder rather as if he fancied he might be overheard.

"Of those letters," he replied. "I am sure it was that. I watched him and . . . and I know. Every time he got one of those letters in the blue envelopes these curious fits of gloom came over him. Robin . . ."

"What, Bruce?"

"I think he was being blackmailed!"

The barrister nodded thoughtfully.

"Don't you agree?"

The boy awaited his answer eagerly.

"Something very like that," replied the other.

Then suddenly he smashed his fist into the open palm of his other hand.

"But he wouldn't have taken it lying down," he cried. "Hartley Parrish was a fighter, Bruce. Did you ever know a man who could best him? No, no; it won't fit! Besides . . ."

He broke off and thought for an instant.

"We must get that letter from Harkings," he said presently. "Jeekes will have it. We can do nothing until . . ."

His voice died away. Bruce, sunk in one of the big leather armchairs, was astonished to see him slip quickly away from the window and ensconce himself behind one of the chintz curtains.

"Here, Bruce," Robin called softly across the room. "Just come here. But take care not to show yourself. Look out! Keep behind the curtain and there . . . peep out through this chink!"

Young Wright peered through a narrow slit between the curtain and the window frame. In the far corner of the courtyard, beneath the windows where a short, round iron post marked a narrow passage leading to the adjoining court, a man was standing. He wore a shabby suit, and a blue handkerchief knotted about his neck served him as a substitute for the more conventional collar and tie. His body was more than half concealed by the side of the house along which the passage ran. But his face was clearly distinguishable—a peaky, thin face, the upper part in the shadow of the peak of a discolored tweed cap.

"He's been there on and off all the time we've been talking," said Robin. "I wasn't sure at first. But now I'm certain. He's watching these windows! Look!"

Briskly the watcher's head was withdrawn, to emerge again, slowly and cautiously, in a little while.

"But who is he? What does he want?" asked Bruce.

"I haven't an idea," retorted Robin Greve. "But I could guess. Tell me, Bruce," he went on, stepping back from the window and motioning the boy to do the same, "did you notice anybody following you when you came here?"

Bruce shook his head.

"I'm pretty sure nobody did. You see, I came in from the Strand, down Middle Temple Lane. Once service has started at Temple Church there's not a mouse stirring in the Inn till the church is out. I think I should have noticed if any one had followed me up to your chambers. . . ."

Robin set his chin squarely.

"Then he came after me!" he said. "Bruce, you'll have to go to Harkings and get that letter!"

"By all means," answered the boy. "But, I say, they won't much like me butting in, will they?"

"You'll have to say you came down to offer your sympathy . . . volunteer your services—oh, anything. But you must get that letter! Do you understand, Bruce? You must get that letter—if you have to steal it!"

The boy gave a long whistle.

"That's rather a tall order, isn't it?" he said.

Robin nodded. His face was very grave.

"Yes," he said presently, "I suppose it is. But there is something . . . something horrible behind this case, Bruce; something dark and . . . and mysterious. And I mean to get to the bottom of it. With your help. Or alone!"

Bruce put his hand impulsively on the other's arm.

"You can count on me, you know," he said. "But don't you think . . ."

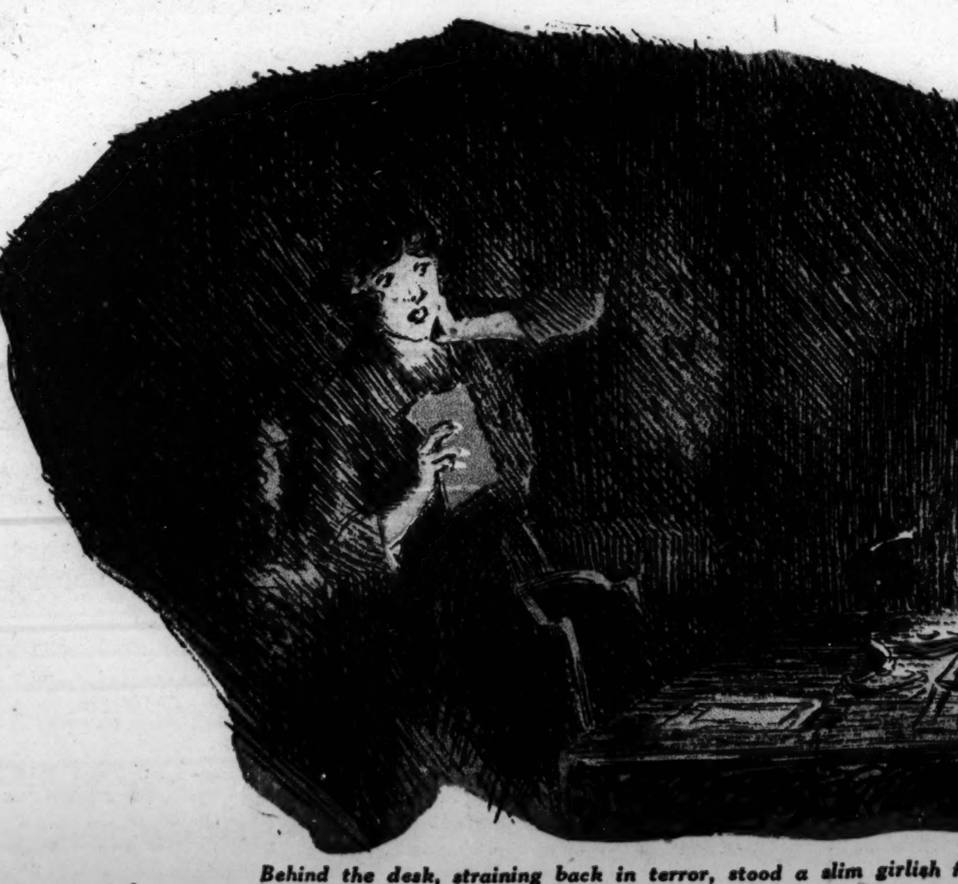
He broke off shyly.

"What?"

"Don't you think you'd better tell me what you know? And what you suspect?"

Robin hesitated.

"Yes," he said, "that's fair. I suppose I ought. But there's not much to tell, Bruce. Just before Hartley Parrish was found dead I asked Miss Trevert to marry me. I was too late. She was already engaged to Hartley Parrish. I was horrified. . . . I know some things about Parrish . . . we had words and I went away. Five minutes later Miss Trevert went to fetch Parrish in to tea, and heard a shot behind the locked door of the library. Horace Trevert got in through the window and found Parrish dead. Every one down at Harkings believes that I went in and threatened Parrish so that he committed suicide."



Behind the desk, straining back in terror, stood a slim girlish

"Whom do you mean by every one?"

Robin laughed dryly.

"Mary Trevert, her mother, Horace Trevert. . . ."

"The police, too?"

"Certainly. The police more than anybody!"

"By Jove!" commented the boy.

"You ask me what I suspect," Robin continued. "I admit I have no positive proof. But I suspect that Hartley Parrish did not die by his own hand!"

Bruce Wright looked up with a startled expression on his face.

"You mean that he was murdered?"

"I do!"

"But how? Why?"

Then Robin told him of the experiment in the library, of the open window, and of the bullet mark he had discovered in the rosary.

"What I wish to know," he said, "and what I am determined to find out beyond any possible doubt is whether the bullet found in Hartley Parrish's body was fired from his pistol. But before we reach that point we shall have to explain how it happened that only one shot was heard and how a bullet which apparently came from Parrish's pistol was found in his body. . . ."

"If Mr. Parrish was murdered, the murderer might have turned the gun round in Parrish's hand and forced him to shoot himself. . . ."

"Hardly," said Robin. "Remember, Mary Trevert was at the door when the shot was fired. Your theory presupposes the employment of force, in other words a struggle. Miss Trevert heard no scuffling. No, I've thought of that . . . it won't do. . . ."

"Have you any suspicion of who the murderer might be?"

Robin shook his head decidedly.

"Not a shadow of an idea," he affirmed, positively. "But I have a notion that we shall find a clew in this letter which, like a blithering fool, I left on Parrish's desk. It's the first glimmer of hope I've yet seen. . . ."

Bruce Wright squared his shoulders and threw his head back.

"I'll get it for you," he said.

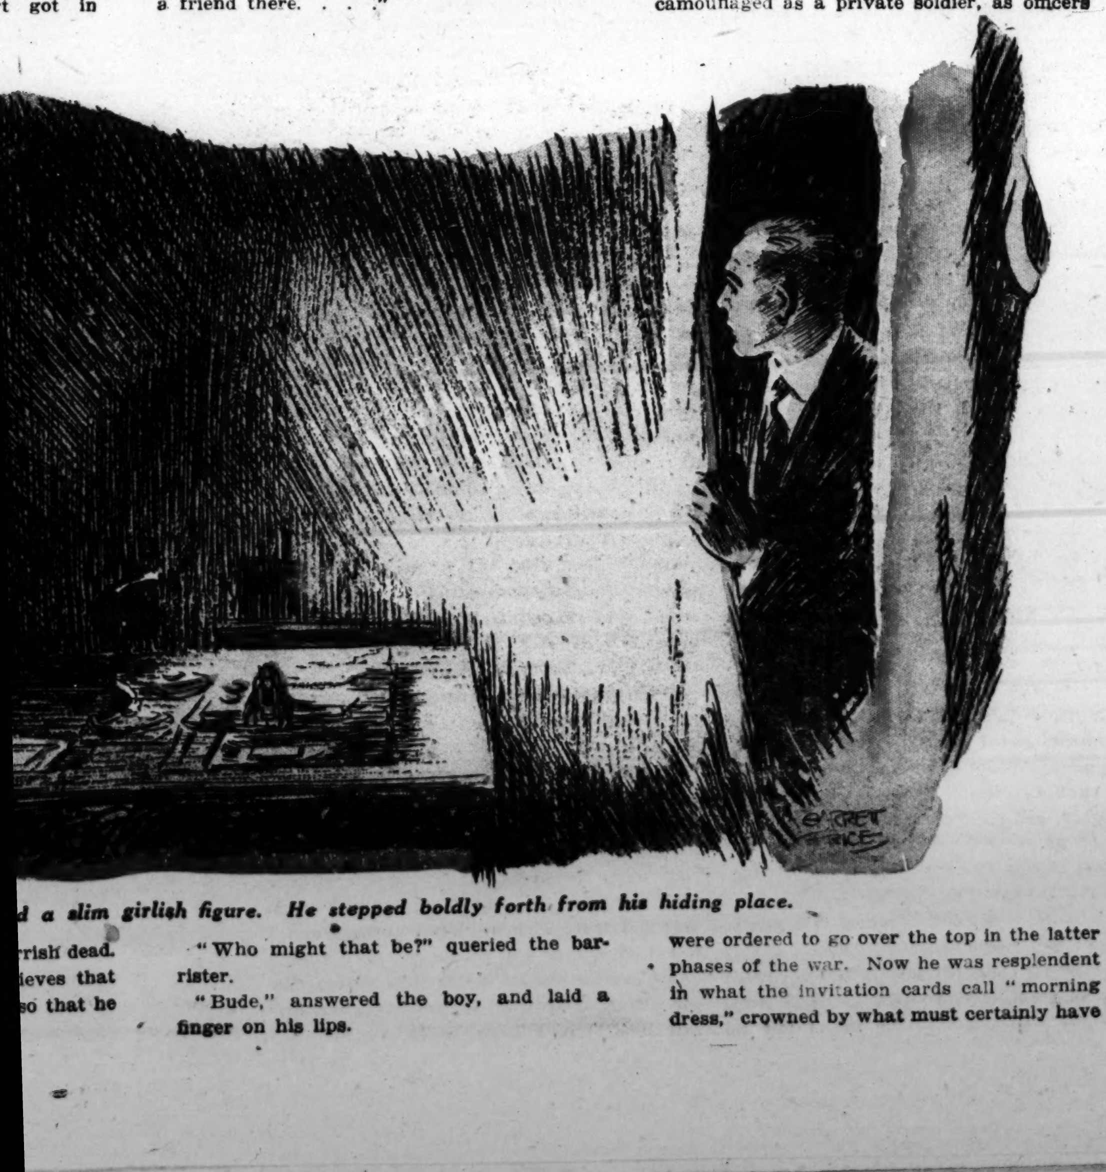
"Good boy!" said Robin. "But, Bruce," he went on, "you'll have to go carefully. My name is mud in that house. You mustn't say you come from me. And if you ask boldly for the letter they won't give it to you. Jeekes might, if he's there and you approach him cautiously. But for Heaven's sake don't try any diplomacy on Manderton . . . that's the Scotland Yard man. He's as wary as a fox and sharp as needles."

Bruce Wright buttoned up his coat with an air of finality.

"Leave it to me," he said. "I know Harkings like my pocket. Besides I've got a friend there. . . ."

"Who might that be?" queried the barrister.

"Bude," answered the boy, and laid a finger on his lips.



d a slim girlish figure. He stepped boldly forth from his hiding place.

"But," he pursued, jerking his head in the direction of the window, "what are we going to do about him out there?"

Robin laughed.

"Him?" he said. "Oh, I'm going to take him out for an airing!"

Robin stepped out into the hall. He returned wearing his hat and overcoat. In his hand were two Yale keys strung on a wisp of pink tape.

"Listen, Bruce," he said. "Give me ten minutes' start to get rid of this jackal. Then clear out. There's a train to Stevenish at 3:23. If you get on the Underground at the Temple you ought to be able to make it easily. Here are the keys of the chambers. I can put you up here tonight, if you like. I'll expect you when I see you . . . with that letter. Savvy?"

The boy stood up.

"You'll have that letter tonight," he answered. "But in the meantime," he waved the blue sheet with its mysterious slots at Robin, "what do you make of this?"

Robin took the sheet of paper from him and replaced it in his cigarette case.

"Perhaps when we have the letter," he replied, "I shall be able to answer that question!"

Then he lit a cigarette, gave the boy his hand, and a minute later Bruce Wright, watching through the chink of the curtain from the window of Robin Greve's chambers, saw a lanky form shuffle quickly across the court and follow Robin round the angle of the house.

Robin strode quickly through the maze of narrow passages and tranquil, echoing courts into the Sabbath stillness of the Strand. An occasional halt at a shop window was sufficient to assure him that the watcher of the Temple was still on his heels. The man, he was interested to see, played his part very unobtrusively, shambling along in nonchalant fashion, mostly hugging the sides of the houses, ready to dart out of sight into a doorway or down a side turning should he by any mischance arrive too close on the heels of his quarry.

As he walked along Robin turned over in his mind the best means for getting rid of his shadow. Should he dive into a tube station and plunge headlong down the steps? He rejected this idea as calculated to let the tracker know that his presence was suspected. Then he reviewed in his mind the various establishments he knew of in London with double entrances, thinking that he might slip in by the one entrance and emerge by the other.

In Pall Mall he came upon Tony Grandell, whom he had last seen playing bridge in the company dugout on the Flesquières Ridge. Then he had been in "battle order," camouflaged as a private soldier, as officers were ordered to go over the top in the latter phases of the war. Now he was resplendent in what the invitation cards call "morning dress," crowned by what must certainly have been the most reluctant top hat in London.

"Hullo, hullo, hullo!" cried Tony, on catching sight of him. "Stand to your kits and so forth! And how is my merry company commander? Robin dear, come and relieve the medieval gloom of lunch with my aunt at Mart's!"

He linked his arm affectionately in Robin's.

Mart's! Robin's brain snatched at the word. Mart's! Most respectable of "family hotels," wedged in between two quiet streets off Piccadilly, with an entrance from both. If ever a man wished to dodge a sleuth, especially a grimy tatterdemalion like the one sidling up Pall Mall behind them. . . .

"Tony, old son," said Robin, "I won't lunch with you even to set the board in a roar at your aunt's luncheon party. But I'll walk up to Mart's with you, for I'm going there myself."

They entered Mart's together and parted in the vestibule, where Tony gravely informed his "dear old scream" that he must fly to his "avuncular luncheon." Robin walked quickly through the hotel and left by the other entrance. The street was almost deserted. Of the man with the dingy neckerchief there was no sign. Robin hurried into Piccadilly and hopped on a bus, which put him down at his club, facing the Green Park.

He had a late lunch there and afterwards took a taxi back to the Temple. The daylight was failing as he crossed the courtyard in front of his chambers. In the center the smoke-blackened plane tree throned it in unchallenged solitude. But as Robin's footsteps echoed across the flags something more substantial than a shadow seemed to melt into the gathering dusk in the corner where the narrow passage ran. Robin stopped to listen at the entrance of his chambers. As he stood there he heard a heavy tread on the stone steps within. He turned to face a solidly built, swarthy looking man who emerged from the building.

He favored Robin with a leisurely, searching stare, then strode heavily across the courtyard to the little passage, where he disappeared from view.

Robin looked after him. The man was a stranger—the occupants of the other chambers were all known to him. With a thoughtful expression on his face Robin entered the house and mounted to his rooms.

. . . .

"D——!" exclaimed Bruce Wright.

He stood in the great porch at Harkings, his finger on the electric bell. No sound came in response to the pressure, nor any one to open the door. Thus he had stood for fully ten minutes, listening in vain for any sound within the house. All was still as death. He began to think that the bell was out of order. He had forgotten Hartley Parrish's insistence on quiet. All bells at Harkings rang, discreetly muted, in the serants' hall.

He stepped out of the porch on to the drive. The weather had improved and under a freshening wind the country was drying up. As he reached the hard gravel he heard footsteps. Bude appeared, his collar turned up, his swallow tails floating in the wind.

"Now be off with you!" he cried as soon as he caught sight of the trim figure in the gray overcoat. "How many more of ye have I to tell there's nothing for you to get here! Go on, get out before I put the dog on you!"

He waved an imperious hand at Bruce.

"Hullo, Bude," said the boy, "you've grown very inhospitable all of a sudden!"

"God bless my soul, if it isn't young Mr. Wright!" exclaimed the butler. "And I thought it was another of those dratted reporters. It's been ring, ring, ring the whole blessed morning, sir, you can believe me, as if they owned the place, wanting to interview me and Mr. Jeekes and Miss Trevert and the Lord knows who else. Lot of interfering busybodies, I call 'em! I'd shut up all noospapers by law if I had my way."

"Is Mr. Jeekes here, Bude?" asked Bruce.

"He's gone off to London in the car, sir. . . . But won't you come in, Mr. Wright? If you wouldn't mind coming in by the side door. I have to keep the front door closed to shut them scribbling fellows out. One of them had the face to ask me to let him into the library to take a photograph. . . ."

He led the way round the side of the house to the glass door in the library corridor.

"This is a sad business, Bude," said Bruce

"Ah, indeed it is, sir," he sighed. "He had his faults, had Mr. Parrish, as well you know, Mr. Wright. But he was an open-handed gentleman, that I will say, and we'll all miss him at Harkings."

They were now in the corridor. Bude jerked his thumb over his shoulder.

"It was in there they found him," he said, in a low voice, "with a hole plumb over the heart." His voice sank to a whisper.

"There's blood on the carpet," he added impressively.

"I should like just to take a peep at the room, Bude," ventured the boy, casting a sidelong glance at the butler.

"Can't be done, sir," said Bude, shaking his head, "orders of Detective Inspector Manderton. The police is very strict, Mr. Wright, sir!"

"There seems to be no one around just now, Bude," the young man wheedled. "There can't be any harm in my just going in for a second? . . ."

"Go in you should, Mr. Wright, sir," said the butler genially, "if I had my way. But the door's locked. And what's more the police have the key."

"Is the detective anywhere about?" asked Bruce.

"No, sir," answered Bude. "He's gone off to town, too! And he don't expect to be back before the inquest. That's for Toosday!"

"But isn't there another key anywhere?" persisted the boy.

"No, sir," said Bude positively, "there isn't but the one. And that's in Mr. Manderton's vest pocket!"

Young Wright wrinkled his brow in perplexity. He was very young, but he had a fine strain of perseverance in him. He was not nearly at the end of his resources, he told himself.

"Well, then," he said suddenly, "I'm going outside to have a look through the window. I remember you can see into the library from the path round the house!"

He darted out, the butler, protesting, lumbering along behind him.

"Mr. Wright," he panted as he ran, "you didn't really ought . . . if any one should come. . . ."

But Bruce Wright was already at the window. The butler found him leaning on the sill, peering with an air of frightened curiosity into the empty room.

"The glazier from Stevenish"—Bude's voice breathed the words hoarsely in Wright's ear—"is coming tomorrow morning to put the window in. He wouldn't come today, him being a chapelgoer and religious. It was there we found poor Mr. Parrish—d'you see, sir, just between the window and the desk! . . ."

But Bruce Wright did not heed him. His eyes were fixed on the big writing desk, on the line of black japanned letter trays set out in orderly array. Outside the short winter afternoon was drawing in fast and the light was failing. Dusky shadows within the library made it difficult to distinguish objects clearly.

A voice close at hand cried out sharply: "Mr. Bude! Mr. Bu-u-ude!"

"They're calling me!" whispered the butler in his ear, with a tug at his sleeve. "Come away, sir!"

But Bruce shook him off. He heard the man's heavy tread on the gravel, then a door slam.

How dark the room was growing, to be sure! Strain his eyes as he might, he could not get a clear view of the contents of the letter trays on the desk. Their high backs hid their contents from his eyes. Even when he hoisted himself on to the window sill he could not get a better view.

He dropped back on to the gravel path and listened. The wind soughed sadly in the bare tree tops; somewhere in the distance a dog barked hoarsely, insistently; otherwise not a sound was to be heard. He cast a cautious glance round the side of the house. The glass door was shut; the lamp in the corridor had not been lit.

Hoisting himself up to the window sill again, he crooked one knee on the rough edge and, thrusting one arm through the broken pane of glass, unbolted the window. Then, steadying himself with one hand, with the other he very gently pushed up the window.

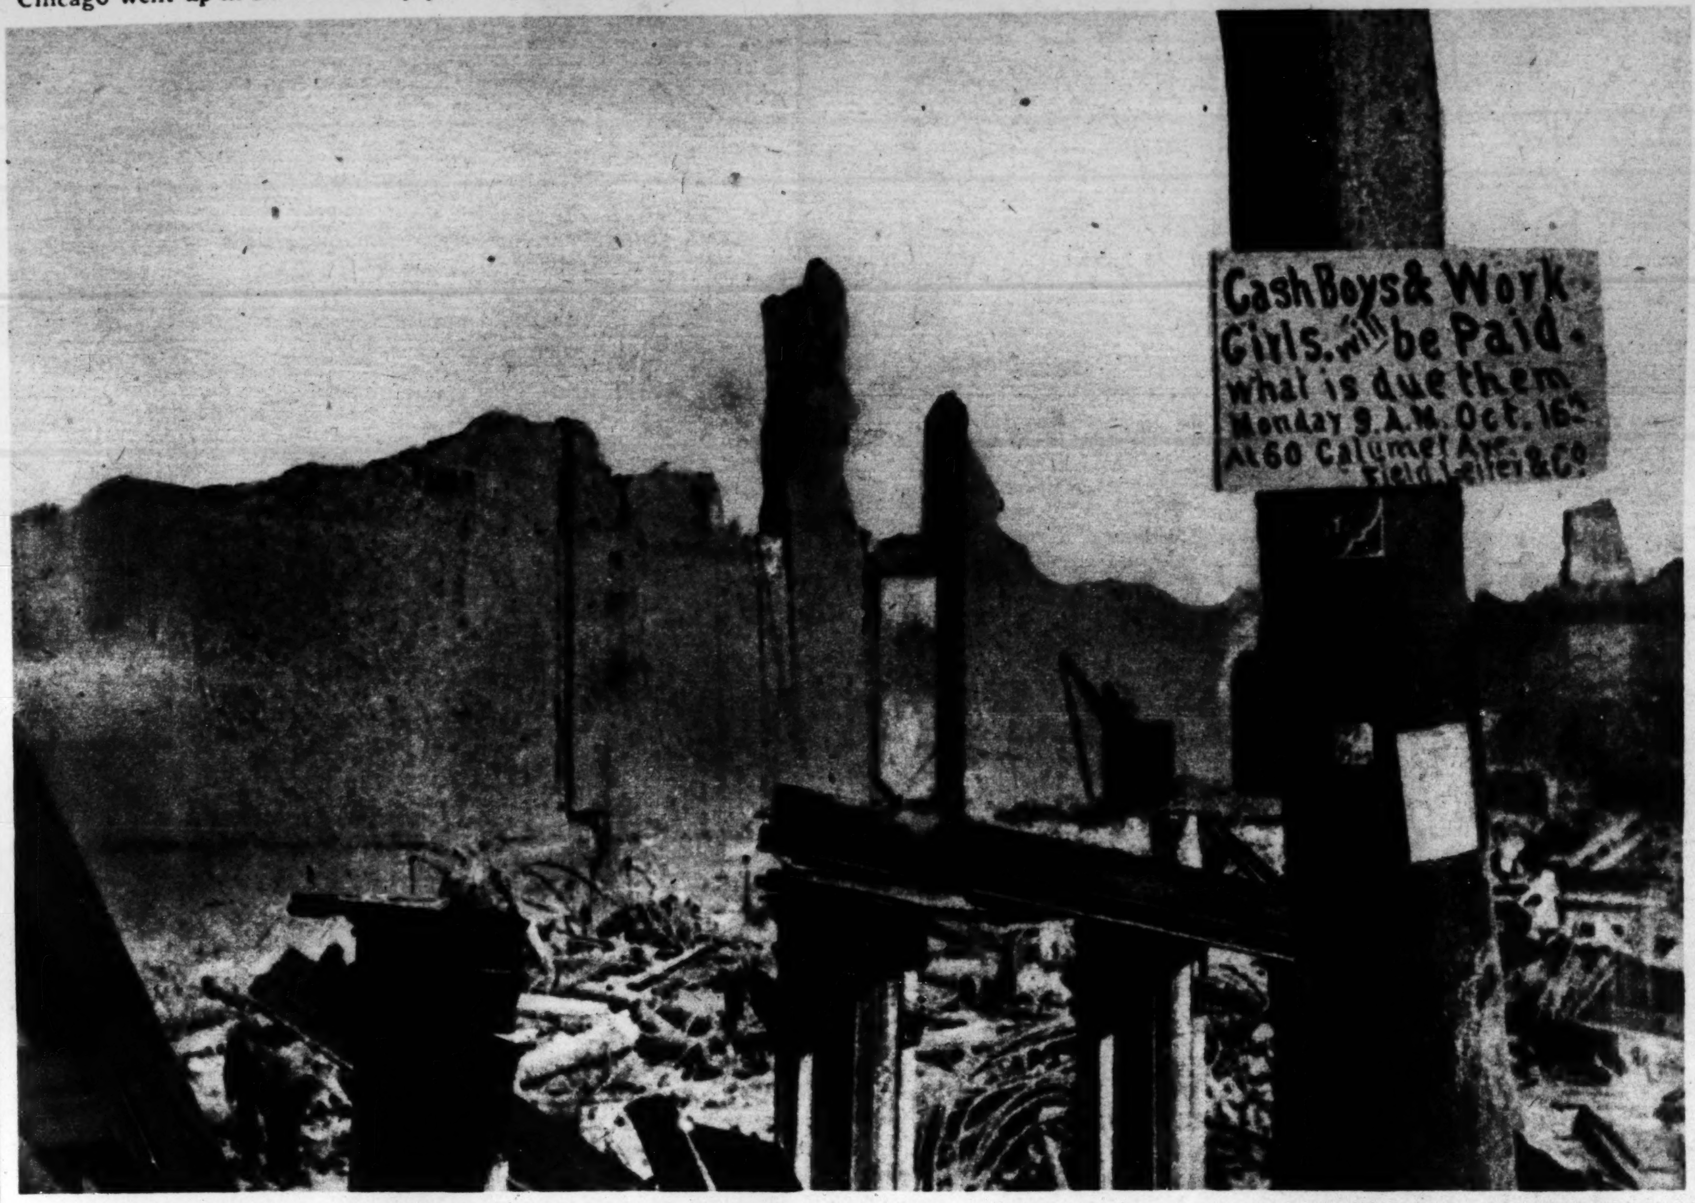
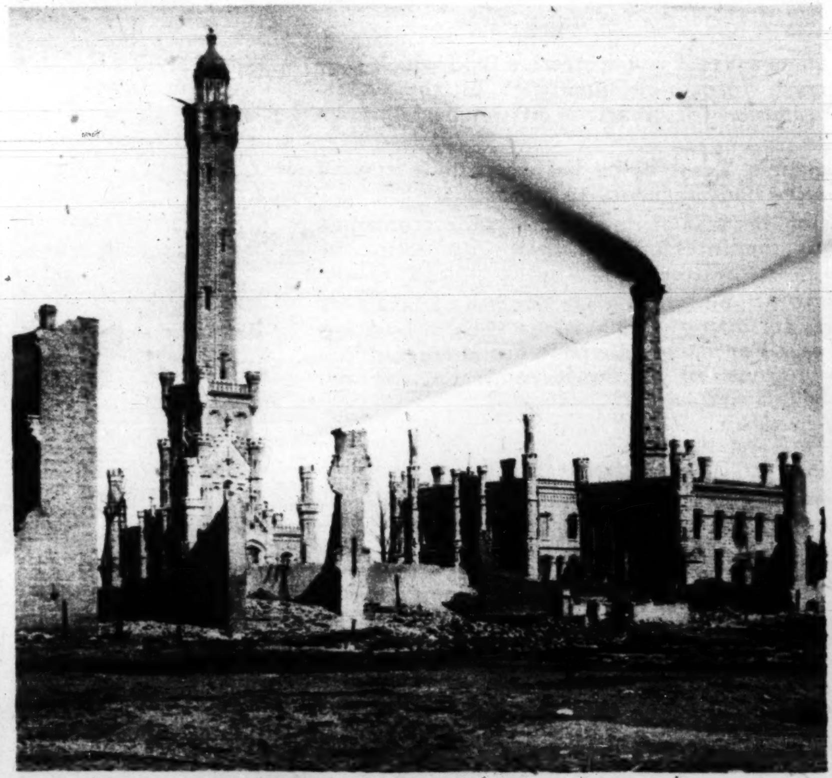
Do You Remember Way Back When------

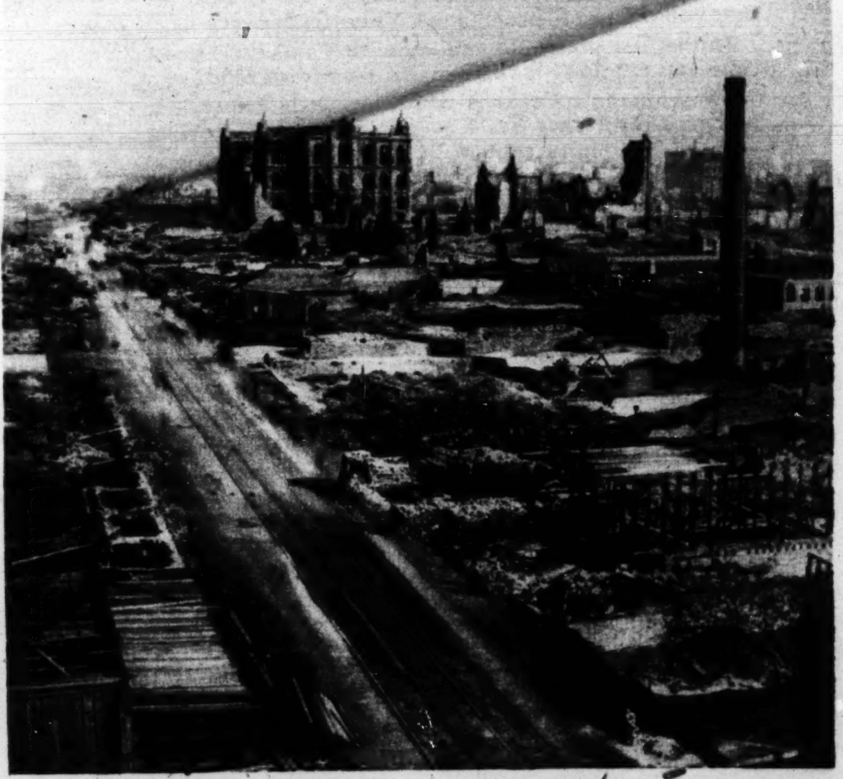
Chicago went up in smoke? Fifty years ago today, according to legend, Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern that started the great fire.



FIELD, LEITER & COMPANY'S STORE, predecessor of Marshall Field & Company, was one of those reduced to ruins by the conflagration. The placard shown in the picture was posted amid the wreckage at State and Washington streets shortly after the fire. The job of cash boy to which the placard refers is now practically extinct in Chicago. The original of this picture hangs in the office of John G. Shedd.



THE CHICAGO AVENUE WATERWORKS survived the flames, although put out of commission, adding to the city's dire plight, when the fire swept to the walls of the plant at 3 o'clock A. M. on Monday, Oct. 10, 1871, the second day of the conflagration. The Lill & Diversey malthouse, just south of the waterworks, was destroyed. Its shattered walls are in the left foreground of the picture. Diversey avenue was named for one of the proprietors.



THE COURTHOUSE—they still called it by that name in those days—was reduced to a gaunt, windowless wreck. It stood in the block bounded by La Salle, Randolph, Clark and Washington streets, as now, and the picture gives a view of it as it appeared looking east down Randolph street from about Market street. Note the tracks for the horse cars and the temporary buildings already springing up in response to Chicago's never-dying "I Will" spirit.

The stars represent 11 factories; the dots represent the 1000 Fleischmann distributing stations, from which the daily delivery of fresh Fleischmann's Yeast is made possible.

Shipped daily by special express from 11 factories.

Delivered daily from 1000 distributing stations by 2000 trucks.

So that you can get it fresh every day

This tiny plant is grown rapidly day and night and delivered to you fresh every morning—

Only two other foods—milk and fresh meat—can boast a delivery system approximate to that of Fleischmann's Yeast. Milk is distributed by thousands of local companies; the extensive delivery of fresh meats is carried on by a large number of packers; the delivery of Fleischmann's Yeast, fresh daily, to all sections of the country is carried on by the one company alone—The Fleischmann Company.

YOU are probably one of the ten millions in this country who are eating Fleischmann's Yeast daily.

Have you ever stopped to realize what it means—that you can get Fleischmann's Yeast fresh every day?

In the first place, did you know that this little yeast cake you eat daily is really a plant—a fresh food?

Fleischmann's Yeast is not made—it is grown. It is a tiny plant that has a wonderful way of growing with such rapidity that in 24 hours it has grown 20 times its own weight.

To get this fresh food to you The Fleischmann Company has built up under one organization an unrivaled system of distribution.

By this system 11 centers throughout the country are kept working at capacity to grow enough fresh yeast daily to meet all needs. From these centers the yeast is shipped daily by special express.

One thousand distributing stations pack the fresh yeast daily into 2000 trucks which deliver to grocers, bakers and delicatessen stores.

The fresh yeast is placed directly in the refrigerators of 200,000 grocers and 30,000 bakers.

The Fleischmann delivery salesman is always there on time. No baker has ever had to delay his baking because of not receiving Fleischmann's Yeast. Even in the ordinary routine of everyday life, the operation of such a system is a gigantic task. Yet the Fleischmann service has shown itself equal to the greatest emergencies.

During the recent Pueblo flood, Fleischmann's Yeast was the first food taken into the city. The Fleischmann salesman was in there with his yeast for the bakers even before doctors and hospital supplies could be rushed from other cities.

Why fresh yeast is now a part of the national daily diet

Fleischmann's Yeast is a corrective food which supplies in fresh form rich quantities of the water-soluble vitamine, for yeast is its richest known source.

Fleischmann's Yeast helps build up body tissues and makes the body resistant to disease.

In addition, because of its freshness, Fleischmann's Yeast helps the intestines in their elimination of poisonous waste matter.

Fleischmann's Yeast has made the use of laxatives unnecessary for many who have long been in bondage to laxatives. For many others it has corrected the various symptoms of rundown condition and restored a health and vigor unknown for years. THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington St., New York.

Emergencies which the wonderful Fleischmann Service has met

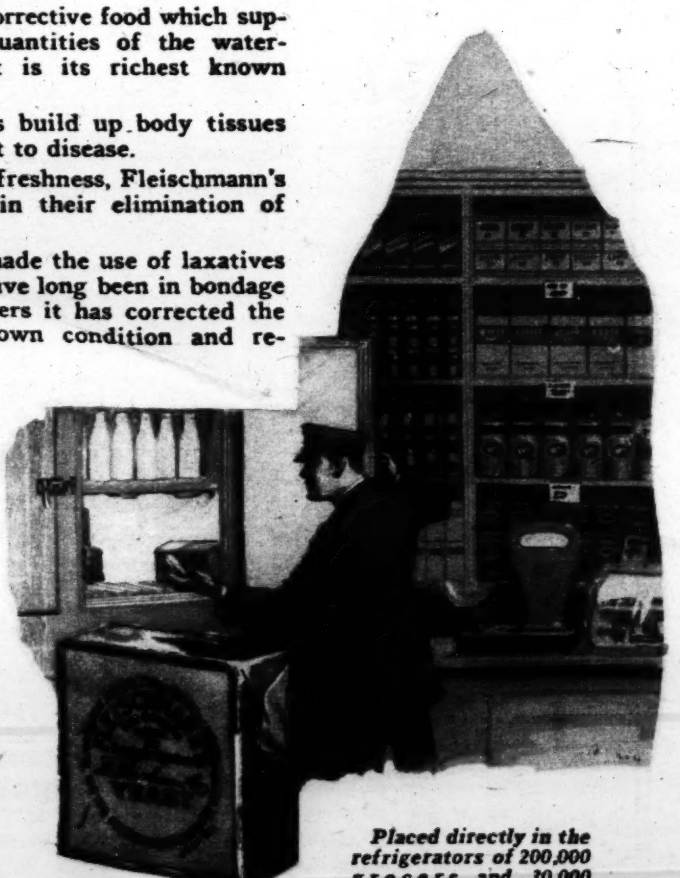
During the disastrous Dayton floods in 1913, when all established means of transportation were destroyed, Fleischmann's Yeast was delivered by automobiles, motorcycles, boats and by men on foot.

When severe snow and sleet paralyzed traffic in Eastern territory in 1914 Fleischmann's Yeast was the only commodity delivered in the city of Boston for 3 days.

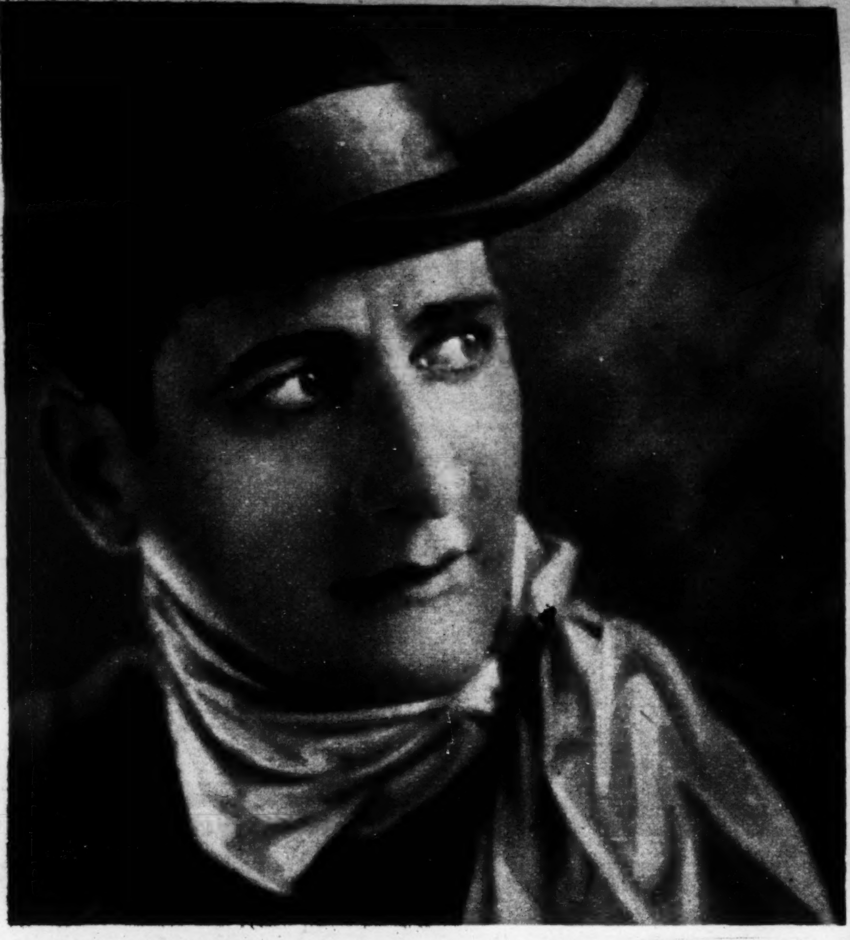
When a tidal wave cut off Mobile from all communications, the Fleischmann's Service sent special messengers with yeast from Cincinnati and secured tugs to move yeast from New Orleans to the stricken city. The bakers were thus enabled to bake bread for the people without any interruption.

In 1917, when one of the most severe storms ever recorded swept the whole country, Fleischmann's Yeast was delivered promptly in special trains, special electric cars, trucks and passenger automobiles from the big Peekskill factory.

Blizzard and sleet completely paralyzed New York in 1920. For two days the only automobile trucks operating in New York were those of The Fleischmann Company. Six and eight horse teams were pressed into service. No shipments were missed at any time, even during the height of the storm.



Placed directly in the refrigerators of 200,000 grocers and 30,000 bakers by Fleischmann delivery salesmen.



LESTER CUNEO is starting out on a new venture. He is to star in a series of eight special five-reel western pictures made by the Doubleday Production company.

Mr. Cuneo is an Italian by birth. He was in pictures before the world war and left them to enter the service. He served as a buck private first and came out as a first lieutenant.

If you must have his measurements, etc., he's 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 178 pounds, and has dark skin, blue eyes, and black hair. He likes to swim, box, ride, shoot and fish. The name of the first picture of his new series is "Blue Blazes."

HELENE CHADWICK is no stranger to you and you have, I believe, a couple pictures of her in your albums. This new one which just landed in the office will, however, undoubtedly delight your hearts. We don't know the monkey's name, but he sure seems a contented ape! Mae Tinee.

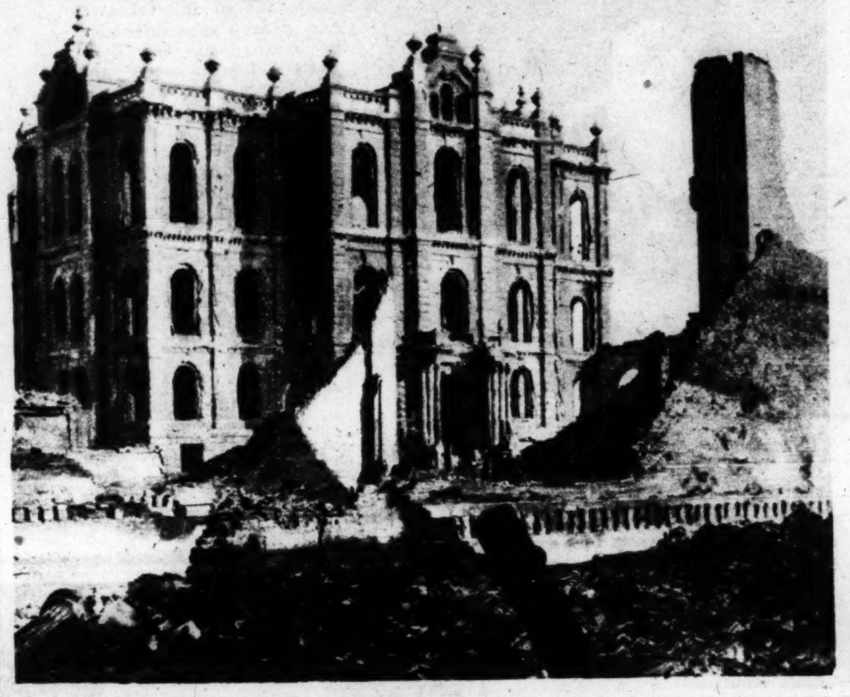
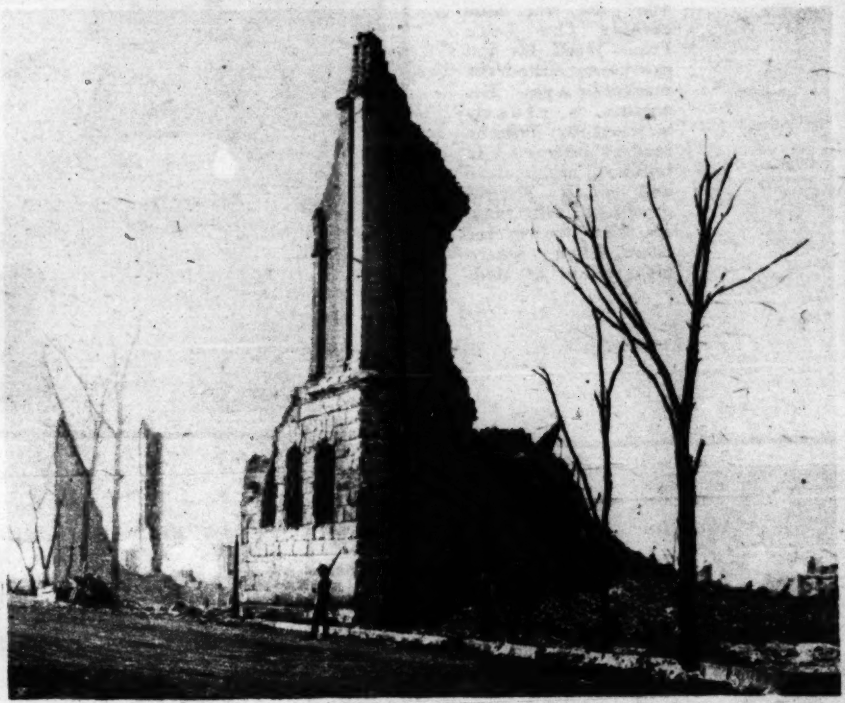
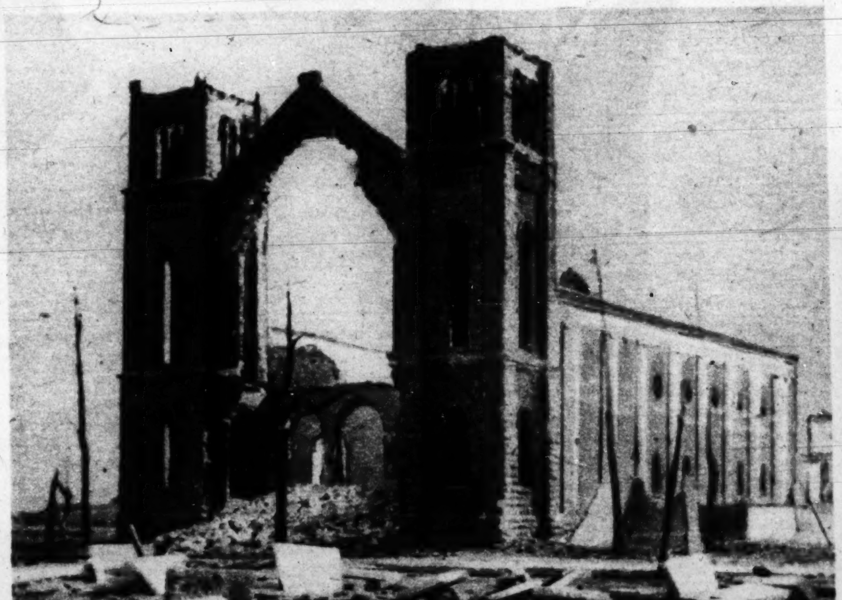
The picture, which, like the others in this issue, was identified by the Chicago Historical society, shows what formerly was Dearborn avenue in the foreground. The debris of many homes is to be seen, and in the background is the ornate tower of the Chicago avenue water works. St. James' church stood on Cass street and the Cathedral on State street.



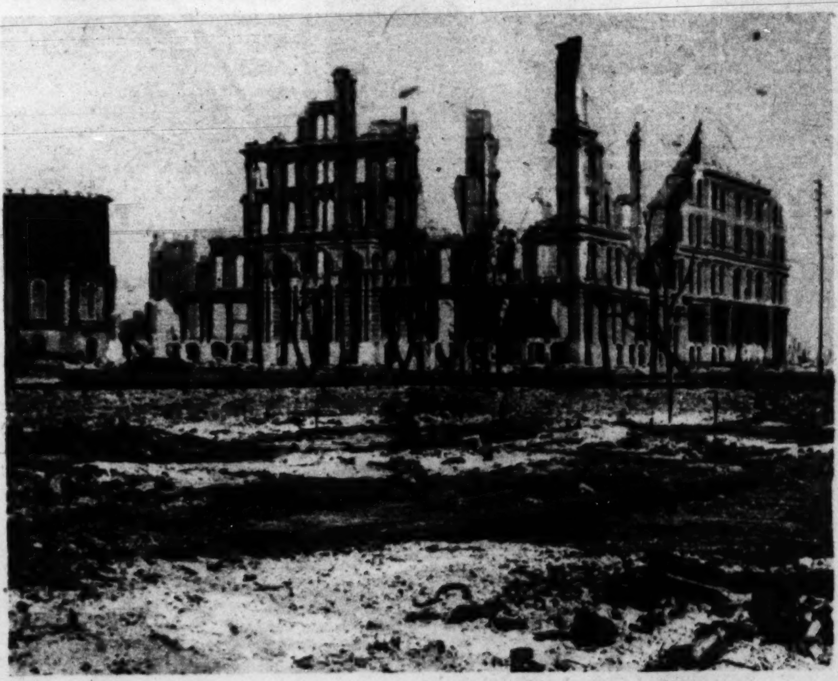
THE WEST END OF THE DESOLATED COURTHOUSE, looking south of east. This stood in the center of the area now occupied by the combined city hall and county building. Notice the dreary waste of wreckage in front of the structure, comprising ruins of a succession of buildings.



ALL THAT WAS LEFT of the Chicago Historical Society's home after the flames had done their work. Here the original draft of Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation was burned when Col. Samuel Stone, secretary, was overcome while trying to save it. The windows face in Ontario street.



THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, at that time on the west side of Wabash avenue between Congress and Van Buren streets, was left a picturesque ruin by the flames. The arch that survived the fire later fell, leaving the two stark towers.



THE GRAND PACIFIC HOTEL, and, at the left, the huge tank or reservoir in which the Chicago city council held its meetings shortly after the fire. The "reservoir lot" was at Adams and La Salle streets and afterward became the nucleus of a conglomerate building in use until 1885. It was called the "old Rookery" and was the site of the present Rookery building.

She Holds the True Secret of a lovely, girlish complexion who has learned how to remove the dead or worn-out scales of scarf skin when they appear. It's a secret anyone may possess. The aged, faded or discolored skin particles may gradually be absorbed, in an entirely safe and rational manner, by the nightly application of Mercolized Wax. In a fortnight or less the underlying skin, youthful and beautiful to behold, has taken the place of the discarded cuticle. Result—

A Complexion That Women Really Envy and Men Really Admire

A complexion quite free from make-up or artificiality in any sense. So little of the old skin is absorbed each day that no inconvenience is caused. Mercolized Wax is applied like cold cream; erased in the morning with soap and water. Splendid for freckles, pimples, moth patches, liver spots, and the like.

Remove the Roots of Superfluous Hair

Get a stick of Phelactine, follow the simple instructions—have the surprise of your life! With your own eyes you see the hair come out—roots and all—quickly, easily, leaving your skin smooth and hairless as a babe's. Phelactine is not to be compared with usual depilatory or electrical methods. New and different. Odorless, non-irritating; so harmless you could eat it.

Fine for Wrinkled or Flabby Faces

Does your face show signs of premature old age? Wrinkles, crowsfeet, furrows, bagginess of cheek or chin? An effective, harmless remedy can be made up in less than a minute by dissolving an ounce of Powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Use as a wash lotion. The effect is "almost magical." Even after the first application a marked improvement is noticed.

Keeps Hair Wavy, Glossy and Beautiful

Liquid Silmerine will keep your hair in wave ever so long, regardless of weather. No more trouble with hair stringing about your face, nor with burnt, uneven ends. The curliness will look and feel so natural you'll never think of doing without Silmerine thereafter. Serves also as a beneficial dressing, keeping the hair lustrous and beautiful. Does not affect color of hair; perfectly harmless.

Mercolized Wax, 85c; Phelactine, $1.00; Powdered Saxolite, 75c; Liquid Silmerine, $1.00; Powdered Tarkroot, $1.00; Parker-Belmont Rose Compact, $1.00; Parker-Belmont Powder Compact, $1.00. Powdered Barriflower, $1.00.

15 TRIBUNE ADVERTISEMENTS THIS IS Nº 11

Why The Tribune has the largest morning daily circulation in America

THE men who preside over the "special desks" in the editorial department of The Tribune have been chosen carefully with the idea of making The Tribune the best source available for correct information on such subjects as finance, markets and real estate. Thousands of readers consider these pages in the light of a daily business journal.

AL CHASE, real estate editor, has been on The Tribune staff for ten years. He became real estate editor on his return from the navy, after the war, succeeding the late Frank Wood. He had previously edited the market page. His column is closely watched by Tribune readers interested in building, architecture and in the general growth of the city. He is a booster for Glen Ellyn, where his home is situated.

ORION A. MATHER, financial editor of The Tribune, joined the staff in 1906 and has been active on the paper since then, except for the period of the war, when he was a lieutenant in the infantry. For years, as copyreader, he handled all The Tribune's financial news and there became interested in finance. He was first appointed assistant financial editor and of recent years has been financial editor. His father named him after a constellation, but his friends preferred to honor an illustrious Puritan by calling him "Cotton" Mather.

STERLING B. PARKINSON is known to Tribune readers as The Investor's Guide, having taken over this department on the death of C. W. Emerson in July. He had previously been assistant financial editor and income tax expert. His service on The Tribune was interrupted by military duty on the Mexican border and with the Rainbow Division in France as lieutenant of artillery. More than 107,000 letters have been received by The Investor's Guide asking for advise about securities.

J. L. JENKINS is an automobile editor who lives on the roads of the middle west. Most of his summer has been spent in his car, and his stories have been wired to The Tribune from scores of towns in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan. He edits the automobile news from the standpoint of an automobile owner and user.

CHARLES D. MICHAELS, commercial editor of The Tribune, has been handling market news for Chicago newpapers for more than forty years. There is probably no man in Chicago who keeps so closely in touch with the news of grains, oils, finance, the stock market, the live stock market, the weather, crops, the car situation, railroads, and the business of the country in general.

Read The Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday as well as Sunday

It's Easy to Get Thin to Music
—first lesson FREE, to prove it

4625 INDIANA AVENUE
CHICAGO

August 14, 1921

Wallace, Chicago:
Dear Sir:—

Having reduced by your wonderful music method in only eight weeks' time, it is but fair to tell you what you have done for me.

I reduced sixty pounds. My friends pass me on the street without recognizing who it is. I feel better. I appear at least ten years younger,

Gratefully,
(Mrs.) Grace Horchler

Read the above; published by permission.

MY reduction course on personally dictated records—to music—reduces any figure to normal, in surprisingly short time. This effective and enjoyable means of reducing is open to any man or woman who has a phonograph, and will give me 12 to 20 minutes daily, for a few weeks, at home.

Food Does Not Cause Fat

Some of the stoutest people eat less than a child of ten. The secret of real reduction is organizing your system, to use all of your food for blood, bone and sinew, and eliminating all waste. There is then nothing left from which Nature can make fat. That is why my course gets such instant results, and never fails to bring with them a joyous state of health. You'll see and feel the improvement with the very first lesson!

My Method Lets You Eat

No thoughtful woman will seek a normal figure, supple limbs, and a buoyant state of health through such unnatural means as stinting and starving the system. My way of getting thin leaves remaining flesh firm; the skin smooth; the eyes clear and bright.

Now read a letter from Mrs. Horchler dated just three weeks after her first one:

4625 INDIANA AVENUE
CHICAGO

Wallace, Chicago: September 4, 1921

Dear Sir:—When I wrote your course had reduced me from 234 lbs. to 174 lbs. I felt that was all I could ask. But I kept on with the lessons and am now down to 160 lbs., close to correct weight for my height.

Gratefully, (Mrs.) Grace Horchler.

Ten or fifteen pounds reduction is nothing. But I wish to emphasize that my method is just as sure in the case of the woman who is 50, 60, even 70 lbs. too heavy.

I Repeat Once More My FREE Offer:

Accept my five-day offer now. I stand ready to prove my course can reduce you—before you pay a penny. Try it five days—that's all I ask! I will send you, free and prepaid, plainly wrapped, a full-size, double-faced record on which I have dictated your first lesson. Fill in the coupon now, with lead pencil. Mail it today.

I HAVE REDUCED hundreds of Chicagoans; thousands residing elsewhere. I have scores of letters to prove every claim I make. Can anyone who really wants to get thin turn this page without tearing out the coupon?

Wallace

WALLACE 178 W. Jackson Blvd.
Chicago, Ills

Please send record for first reducing lesson, free and prepaid. I will either enroll, or return your record at the end of a five-day trial. This does not obligate me in any way.

To protect your skin, one cream— to cleanse it, a very different cream

For daytime use—the cream that will not reappear in a shine

YOU must protect your skin from wind, cold and dust, or it will protect itself by developing a tough, florid surface.

Wind whips the natural moisture out of the skin, drying it so that tiny scales appear. Cold makes it harsh and rough. Dust bores deep into the pores, dulling and blemishing the complexion and forming blackheads.

Always apply Pond's Vanishing Cream before you go out. It is based on an ingredient famous for its softening effect on the skin. The cream disappears at once, affording your skin an invisible protection. There is not a drop of oil in Pond's Vanishing Cream to reappear and make your face shiny. No matter how much you are out of doors, it will keep your skin smooth and soft.

At night—the cleansing cream made with oil

Cleanse your skin thoroughly every night if you wish it to retain its clearness and freshness. Only a cream made with oil can really cleanse the skin of the dust and dirt that bore too deep for ordinary washing to reach. At night, after washing your face, smooth Pond's Cold Cream into the pores. It contains just enough oil to work well into the pores and cleanse them thoroughly. When this dirt is allowed to remain in the pores, the skin becomes dull and blemishes and blackheads appear.

To stimulate the play of blood beneath your skin that keeps you young looking, slap the face very gently, very persistently, with finger tips dipped generously into Pond's Cold Cream.

Start using these two creams today. They are both too delicate in texture to clog the pores and they will not encourage the growth of hair. In both jars and tubes at any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Company, New York.

MORE FISHERMEN'S EVIDENCE

WILLIAM F. LANGE of 1503 Cornelia avenue had a record day at Lac du Flambeau, Wis., on August 26 when he landed these two muskies, weighing respectively 14 and 22 pounds. MRS. PARKE BROWN of 5315 Kenmore avenue was a proud woman when she landed this ten and one-half pound muskellunge at Plum Lake, Wis., on July 11.

Is your skin pale and sallow?

How you can rouse it

If your skin is pale and sallow, it shows clearly the need of a more stimulating treatment than you are giving it. A pale, sallow skin means inactive blood vessels — pores that do not throw off quickly enough the waste matter that accumulates.

Don't let this condition become chronic. To give your skin the soft, clear color every healthy skin should have, follow once a week this special treatment:

Just before retiring, fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head with a heavy bath towel, so that no steam can escape. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin with an upward and outward motion. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

The other six nights of the week cleanse your skin thoroughly in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water.

The first time you use this treatment, it will leave your skin with a slightly drawn, tight feeling. Do not regard this as a disadvantage—it is an indication that the treatment is doing you good, for it means that your skin is responding in the right way to a more stimulating kind of cleansing. After a few nights this drawn sensation will disappear, and your skin will gain such a soft, clear color, you will realize how much it has needed the treatment.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter, and begin tonight this special steam treatment. A 25-cent cake of Woodbury's lasts for a month or six weeks. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

That Freshly-manicured look, always

Merely Bathe the Finger-tips and once each Week touch the Nails with Glazo

That freshly-manicured look you admire so much no longer means tedious moments every day with buffer, powder, or paste.

Well-groomed women have adopted a newer, simpler way. Once a week they merely bathe their finger-tips in warm, soapy water and touch each nail with Glazo Liquid Nail Polish.

The result is a soft, natural glow which will last a week. Nothing can dim its warm lustre, and its beauty is renewed whenever the hands are washed.

A Dainty Cream for the Cuticle

For that final touch of refinement—a healthful cuticle—dip your orange stick in Glazo Cuticle Massage when shaping the cuticle. Massage this delicate, antiseptic cream into the cuticle and leave it overnight. If the cuticle is inflamed or broken, there's magic in a Hot Glazo Cuticle Treatment.

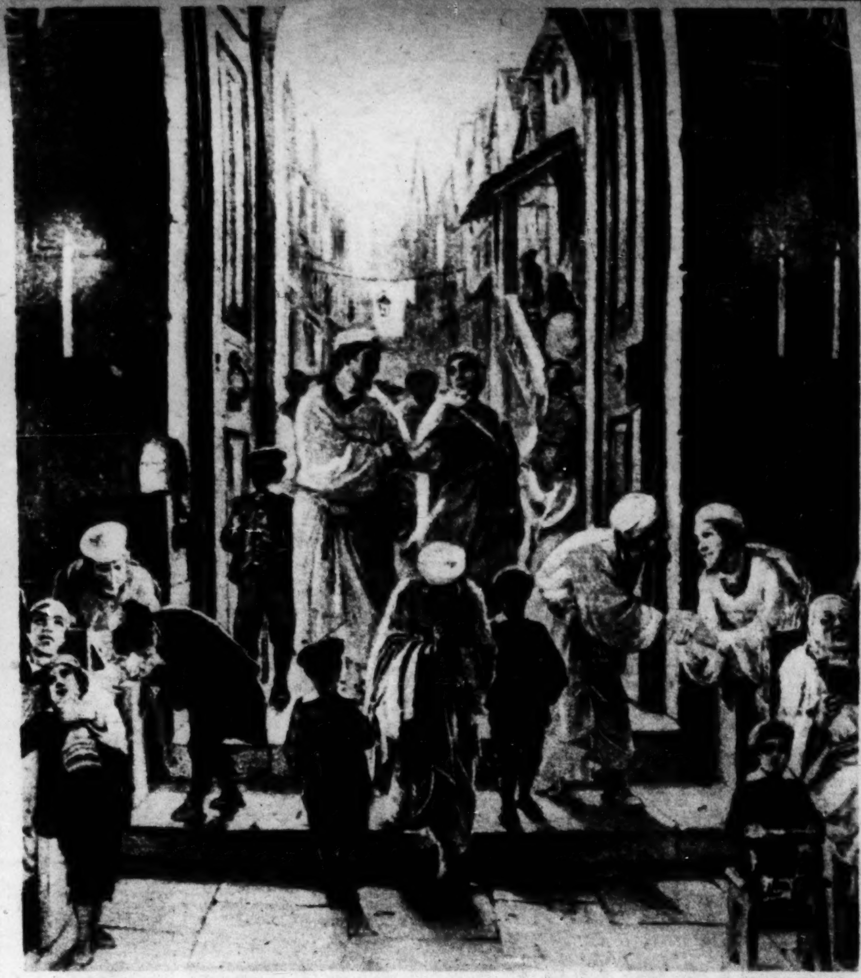
SAMMY STRIPES you mignt call him, but to the folks at home he is just plain Zebra. To the ancients he was known as the hippotigris. Originally there were four species in his family, but one is extinct and a second nearly so. The species generally seen in the zoos is known as Burchell's zebra, called the quagga by the Boers. The few zebras left are protected by law in South Africa. Zebra flesh is considered excellent food. (TRIBUNE photo.)



"THE EVENING OF THE DAY OF ATONEMENT," as pictured by M. Oppenheim, shows an interesting phase of Yom Kippur, the great Jewish fast day, which will be observed from sundown on Tuesday, Oct. 11, to sundown Oct. 12. The Day of Atonement is one of the cycle of holidays instituted by Moses and is venerated by Jews as the most holy day of the year. In the picture the worshipers are just entering the synagogue to pray.

PARIS DOTES ON DETAIL

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—The other day a business woman, just back from Paris, wore to her office a pair of slippers with red heels. The result was a decreased efficiency in her office force. The stenographer wore down an eraser on the mistakes in copy. The office boy took her frock to the printer's and her manuscript to the dyeing and cleaning establishment. Her partner was so engrossed in making witticisms upon the novelty that he forgot an important business engagement.

In Paris the situation would have been directly reversed. There, had she worn black heels, the efficiency expert might have had to be summoned. For Paris, according to the report of the heroine of this incident, as well as of other returned pilgrims, has concentrated not upon the light fantastic toe but upon the bright fantastic heel. The Parisienne is wearing red heels to breakfast, dinner, and supper.

Little Red Walking Heels—It is but one indication of a mood reflected in the autumn imuortations from the shrine of fashion. This mood is to concentrate upon accessories and upon minor details of the costume rather than upon the costume itself. The changes in the silhouette are so trifling that they fail to interest any save the technician. The average woman is bound to depart from representative collections of autumn models with the reflection, "What's the matter with my last year's duvetyn?"

Here is a scrambled impression of the late modes: Long, bloused waist lines; longer skirts (here at least is a refreshing change); numerous draperies, chiefly of Greek inspiration; many irregularities of skirt hem; an infinite number of moody panels and tunics; a bewildering variety of sleeves, and a display of girdles so vast that the frail mortal min dreels before this far flung battle line.

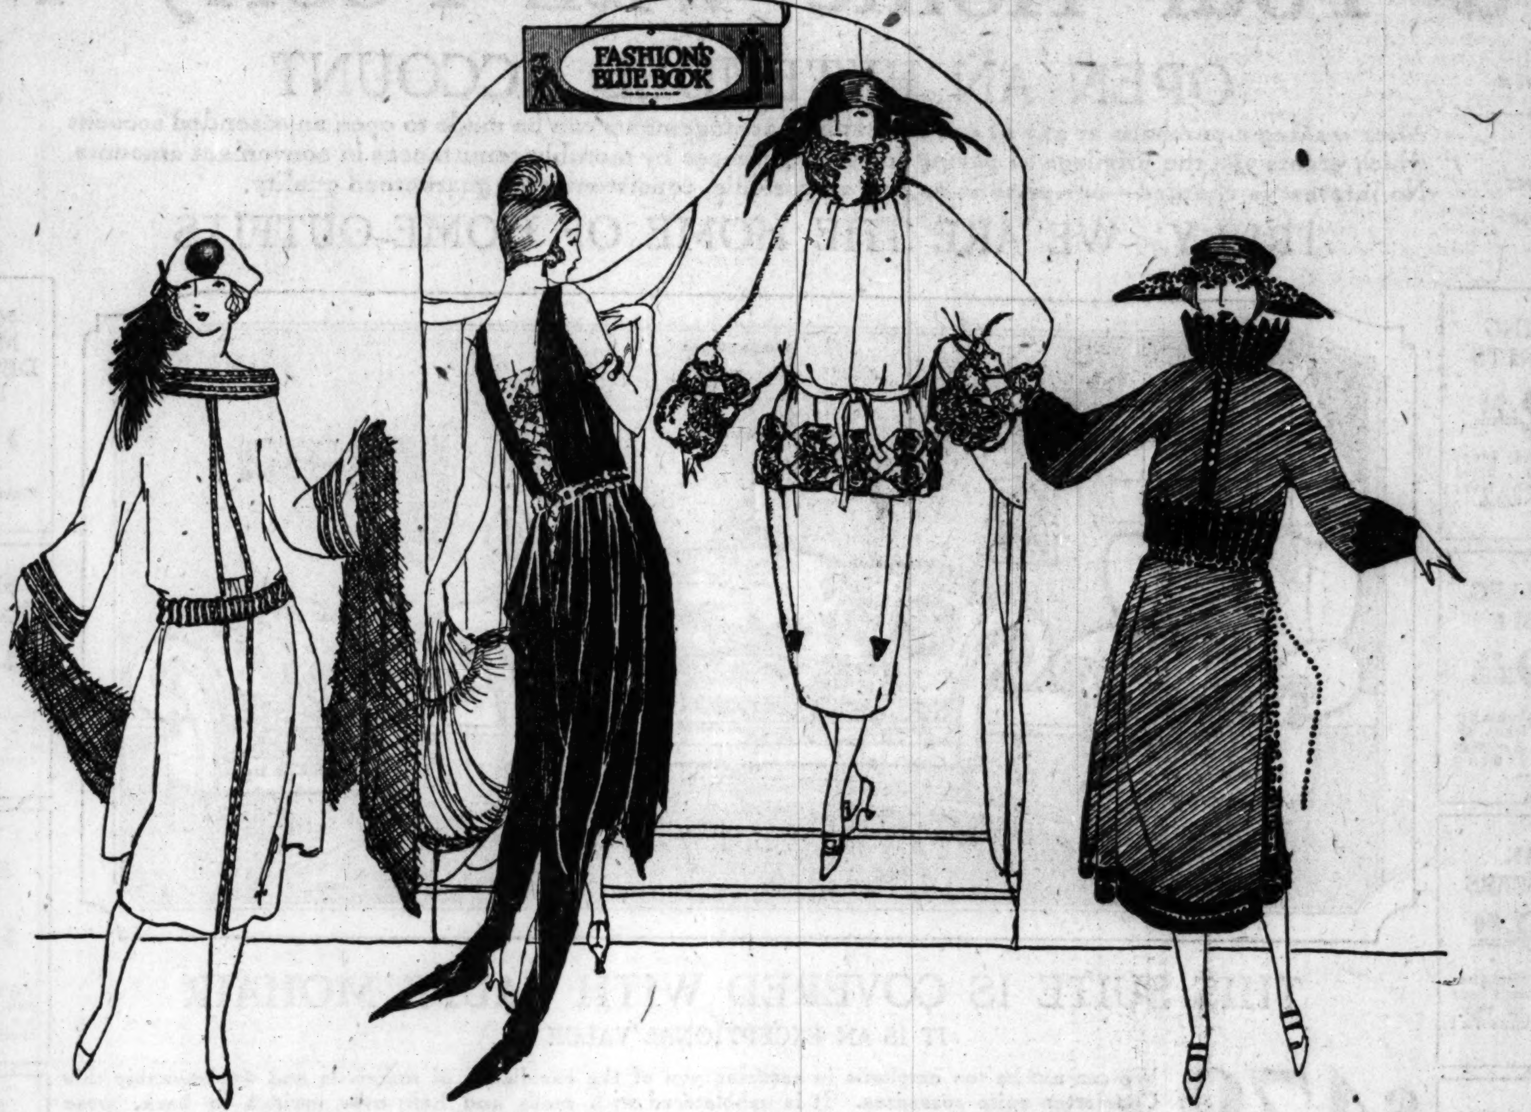
The girdle, in fact, shares with the twinkling red heels the honor of engrossing Paris. Over there, according to account, every woman is belted like an earl. Her favorite selection is the cut steel girdle, and this is appearing here in New York not only in connection with the frock but as a separate accessory.

This idea is not a brand new one. It was started, perhaps, by a dress of Jenny's remembered as one of the features of the spring openings. In this frock the girdle was formed of small steel motifs on a double chain, and this interpretation leads in an autumn which has concentrated upon the metal girdle. Copies of this accessory are to be purchased now for several dollars and are warranted to act as a tonic upon any last year's dress.

Then, also sold separately, is the cut steel girdle without any benefit of chain. This bit of perforated metal, usually terminating in front in a diamond shaped piece, looks a bit like the leftover of a perfectly good suit of armor. But it, as well as the girdle which weaves fine metal threads into a tissue, is an extremely reviving touch to any frock.

Along with the metal belts go the ribbon ones interpolated by plaques of silver or steel or bronze. These are often set with colored stones, a fashion which joins with the flowing sleeves and the long waist line to recall some chorus of medieval folk in grand opera.

One of such accessories which I noted the other day varied its effect by substituting narrow cords of the Chinese red chiffon of its sleeves for the accustomed ribbon. About five of these cords were held in place by medallions of silver, and the touch that it gave the black crepe frock on which it occurred almost reconciled one to the monotony of the silhouette.



Before leaving this theme of the plaque, too, one must not forget the one large ornamental specimen which Lanvin anchors directly at the front of some of her frocks. This is attached to ribbons tying in the back and is extremely striking in effect.

But to attempt becoming a biographer of the girdles of this autumn is to possess an unwarranted self-confidence. Their name is legion, and they have used everything but broom straws and breakfast foods in their preparation. For example, this accessory was supplied on one smart black crepe de Chine frock by plaiting together shiny black straw. Another was achieved by motifs of celluloid. For daytime frocks leather is often selected. Thus Drecoll belts a stunning black crepe Marocain trimmed with white ratine with red leather, and other of the Paris creators plait glossy black leather into two inch wide cinctures for serge and crepe dresses. Strands of beads, often held together by metal plaques, are another avenue of the girdle holiday maker, and the jet chains ending in front in a large ornament—from which depends, most likely, a torrent of fringe—is a familiar finish for the elaborate evening gown.

Nor are these fanciful belts and girdles confined to frocks alone. Often they appear on the suits and on the coats. The latter digression is noted in a black velvet coat from overseas which uses a metal girdle on its black velvet surface.

We illustrate one form of the girdle on the imported evening gown of black georgette second from the left. Here the double strand at the waist line is provided by turquoise beads repeated again as medallions on the rhinestone studded inset back and front. This frock with its two trains and its uneven skirt hem is one of the most dignified of the black evening frocks seen this autumn.

TO bead or not to bead—the issue of this soliloquy need not be confusing when four models from Paris decide so strongly in the affirmative. The first to give its weight of authority is the Lanvin frock of gray crepe at the left. This is trimmed with silver braid set with steel beads. Not less unhesitating is the evening dress of black georgette, girdled with a double strand of turquoise beads repeated among the rhinestones of the inset. Third, a suit of black zibeline with slight mixture of green says through the medium of green-slynx accompanied by steel nail heads that Patou is no more faltering in decision. Last, a black tricotine from Jenny declares that even black braid so smartly applied would lose something without that contribution of red beads.

Speaking of evening clothes, the more one sees of them the less one sees. Some of these new models as brought from overseas are really not much more than separate skirts. Held only by one shoulder strap, as is often the case, one wonders by what magic pact they are kept in position. Often these low cut frocks are attended by a cape of net or lace. But, after all, these capes are not executive when it comes to covering, and they stress rather than divert from the meagerness of the corsage.

Gold tissue is much liked for evening frocks and is frequently seen in combination with draperies of colored chiffon or mousseline. Fuchsia chiffon, for example, is often chosen by Miler as the veiling for these dazzling metal tissue dresses. Gold lame, too, is so profuse that one thinks of the field of the cloth of gold and other bits of pageantry of bygone centuries. This, too, is frequently draped with chiffon or mousseline or net.

Madeleine et Madeleine, for example, employ gray mousseline for the one sleeve of a gold lame frock. This sleeve, by the way, dips to the floor like the wing of some giant bird. But, alas and alas! the result of the postscript of propriety is only to draw attention to the fact that the gown itself has forsaken all a gown's old sense of duty. It seeks not to shelter but to adorn.

Velve, the fabric beloved of portrait painters, is used more than ever for evening gowns, and even on the gold brocade and metal tissue frocks it is not unusual to find the addition of a velvet train or trains. Sapphire blue velvet has been widely exploited lately, and certainly for the woman with dazzling blonde tresses—native or acquired—nothing is more fortunate.

Glowing Venetian red and green are two other colors noted frequently in the evening models. Of course satin never loses its group of devoted followers, and some of the satin frocks from Paris should swell this allegiance. One of such persuasive models is from the house of Drecoll. Made of white satin trimmed with jet, it presents a noteworthy idea by lining its train with black satin.

Frocks may come and frocks may go, but the bead stays on forever. Testimony to its doggedness is furnished by the three remaining costumes on this page. At the left Lanvin designs a gray crepe with trimming of silver braid studded with steel beads. At the extreme right Jenny provides a black tricotine with arresting new touches of black braid and red beads. And last, Patou is seen in a suit of black zibeline with the tiniest mixture of green hair. This is trimmed with a square of slynx dyed green and set around with steel nail heads. This combination of beads and fur is witnessed on a number of the suit models from the Paris creators.

CHAS. A. STEVENS & BROS.

"Variety is the Motto of this Seasons Suits"

The silhouette of the new suit is temperamental—in one suit it's long, in another it flares, in still another it blouses, and some show a box effect.

Colors

A list of the colors outrivals those of the Rainbow. There is Marmot, Tortoise Shell, Byzantine, Sphinx, Volney Red and Moroccain, as well as many others with weird names.

Materials

The materials, too, are refreshingly named, Panvelaine, Moussyne, Wondora, Gerone, and of course Duvet de Laine, Duvetyn and Caracul Cloth—while the fur trimmings are well known—Opossum, Wolf, Nutria, Caracul, Monkey, Lamb, Squirrel and Beaver.

Even better known is the superb tailoring of Stevens Suits—a workmanship that neglects no detail and pays particular attention to exactness of fit.

Autumn Frocks are Controlled by the Sleeves

Yes, the sleeve sets the mode of the new frocks. Straight, wide kimono sleeves, long flowing sleeves that reach nearly to the ground have beautiful bead trimming or bands of oriental embroidery.

All the new colors are too many to mention, but they are lovely. Some are gay, some are brilliant, some are somber, but all are becoming. There are the exquisite new fuchsia shades, the varying blues, Sorrento, sapphire, and the gleaming Reds, Vionnet, Ruby, Magenta and Mallard.

Soft fabrics, especially the crepes, Canton, Morocco, Roshanara and Jacquard are developed in charming street and afternoon models. Of course, lace and velvet, metal cloths and chiffons come into their own, in the evening dresses. Wool Jersey, Tricotine, Homespun and Piquetine confine their interests to stunning street models.

The Black Hat is Still Most Irresistible

Lacquered Satin, Satin Antique and the always rich black Velvets vie with each other for favor in the new Chapeaux. One importation of rich black satin antique is trimmed with marvelous trailing feathers. Other models equally attractive are bewilderingly trimmed with black lace.

Food and Beauty

by Antoinette Donnelly

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Want Bright Eyes and Clear Skin? Look to Your Diet

I SUPPOSE when you look in the mirror on a discouraging morning the last thing you think of attributing the sallow coloring, lusterless eyes, and inanimate expression to is the food you've been eating for a while back.

Food is more than something to fill a yawning chasm. I remember hearing a singer—back from Europe after years of living in Paris—say: "The French women have better color and are distinctly healthier in every way than the American women. You don't hear the everlasting complaining of sickness and operations among women there that you do here, because the French woman looks upon food as something to build the body toward health and beauty."

How true these comparative statements are I do not know, but the point is that food is important to your looks and your health.

Food Must Be Well Chewed.

So, for today, let's enumerate a few items of food facts to profit by:

Thorough mastication of food means chewing it to the point of involuntary swallowing. You do not have to count the chews nor chew until you feel you haven't another chew left in you. You do not have to make eating a hardship. It simply means to give up the habit of forcing food down unchewed.

Coarse and hard foods, like crusts, toast, and hard biscuits, hard fruits, fibrous vegetables, and nuts require chewing and are, therefore, important in a hygienic diet. They exercise the jaws and improve the condition of the tooth sockets and the teeth, and produce the flow of saliva and gastric juice. The savages have perfect teeth as long as they live on coarse foods. But immediately they change to soft foods, their teeth begin to show imperfections.

A certain amount of cellulose or roughage is necessary in a healthy diet. This is contained in largest measures in fibrous fruits and vegetables, such as lettuce, celery, spinach, asparagus, cabbage, cauliflower, corn, beets, onions, parsnips, figs, prunes, and other fruits with their skins and seeds [especially apples]; cereals such as rolled or cut oats or wheat and bran in any of its various forms [bread, muffins, or crackers]. These rough foods make bulk and stimulate the contraction of the muscular fibers of the intestines that push the contents on their onward course and provide for the elimination of waste.

Too much concentrated foods and not enough natural foods cause so many bad complexions.

Eat less starchy foods, white breads, greasy meats, pastries, ice creams, chocolate eclairs, and cream puffs. Eat more vegetables and fruits and bran breads and good soups.

Water Cure for Many Ills.

Bright eyes, a clear complexion, and an elastic step advertise a good fresh air diet, a good digestion, and clean intestines. Constipation is usually caused by irregular and improper eating, eating too much starchy foods, insufficient exercise and lack of sufficient water drinking.

I am a great believer in water as an internal cleanser. It is a good drink and a most excellent habit, as many an anti-prohibitionist has learned to his great surprise. It cleanses the stomach and makes it ready for food. It helps keep the bowels clean and gives a good flow to the blood.

An old family doctor used to say: "Water internally, eternally, and externally and there would be little work for the doctor."

To Keep the Skin Clear.

Not drinking enough water is a common sin. Every portion of the body, to be kept in a state of good health, requires fresh water. Its use is needed to keep the blood pressure and the heart in normal condition. As a lavage it is necessary to keep clean and free from impurities the mucous membrane lining the digestive canal and the kidneys. To keep the skin clean and healthy its use internally is as necessary as its use externally.

The bowels must be emptied every day. Pills, purgatives, and patent medicines should be avoided, because the habit eventually prohibits natural functioning.

The best regulators of the bowels are water and food.

I lay emphasis upon this subject because I know constipation does impair working efficiency. It dulls the eyes, the skin, and the brain.

Foods Rich in Acids.

The fibrous vegetables referred to and foods rich in vegetable acids, such as lemons, oranges, tomatoes, apples, cider, and other fruits and fruit juices, are of great assistance in overcoming the trouble. The fruit juices should be taken early in the morning or late at night, and fruits should be eaten liberally at meals. Vegetable salads served with olive oil are particularly good, because the oil is laxative.

Then drink water. Drink from six to eight glasses a day. Make this water consumption a daily habit, or part of your day's work, if need be.

Do not be afraid it will make you fat. That is a silly old tale with no foundation, probably started by some one who preferred stronger drink. It will not fatten. Nor will it make you thin. It just keeps you clean and healthy by keeping your organs flushed and clear of accumulated matter.

Beauty Answers

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

RED HANDS: THE BEST THING for the hands I know is the nightly application of equal parts glycerin and camphor. The camphor whitens, and the glycerin softens the skin. I have had many readers testify to the value of this formula.

MOTHER: THERE'S NO DOUBT that a mother can do worlds toward making a beautiful young woman out of a baby girl. The habit of thumb sucking you should correct, unless you want the child to grow up with a homely mouth. The habit thrusts the teeth out and deforms the lower part of the face. The scanty eyebrows and eyelashes may be trained to fuller growth with the use of a tiny camel's hair brush dipped in vaseline, and applied daily.

LORAINE: AN OFFENSIVE breath may come from the teeth, tonsils, nose, or stomach. Keep them clean. Eat less food. Exercise more, especially in the open air. Guard against constipation.

THE GIRL WHO MARRIES.

THERE was an air of excitement about Dorothy as she joined us at lunch yesterday. She greeted us hurriedly, and literally flopped into her place at the table. Marion was in the midst of a funny story about one of her brothers, and Dorothy had a hard time to keep from interrupting her. She hadn't heard the beginning of it and wasn't as interested as the rest of us.

When Marion finally finished I turned to Dorothy, and, to give her an opening, asked what had kept her from joining us at the usual time—we were half way through with our lunch when she'd come in.

"O, you'd never guess!" she exclaimed. Then she went on breathlessly, "Miss Rend, the girl who relieves me for lunch, went out as usual for her lunch today at 11:30, and when she came back, only a minute or two after 12:30, she announced to the office in general that she had just been married. Well, you can imagine the excitement that caused. Of course, I had to wait to hear all about it. That's why I'm late."

"Well, that was exciting," Ann agreed. "Is she going to stay on working or will she give up her job to keep house for her husband?"

"She intends to keep right on with her job," Dorothy replied. "That is, if the firm will keep her. Otherwise, she'll have to look for a new one, as she must work for awhile."

"There isn't any doubt that the firm will let her stay on, is there?" Marion wanted to know.

"Yes, there is," Dorothy told her. "I'm not sure just what the objection is, but you know there aren't any married women in our office. This is the first time since I've been there that one of the girls has been married without giving up the job on her own account. They may keep her after she's married, but our office manager never hires a married woman."

"That doesn't seem quite fair to me," said Marion. "I know several married women who simply have to work in order to get along at all, and I have three or four friends who married within the last couple of years and stayed right on at their jobs, because if they didn't they would have had to stay unmarried."

"Miss Rend told me that she had to keep her job," said Dorothy. "She's the sole support of her mother, and as her new husband is only earning about $40 a week she couldn't put that extra burden on him. Her mother wanted them to wait until the boy was earning more money, but they decided otherwise. Business conditions right now are so bad that they could see no prospect of a better job for the boy. So they decided to take a chance on matrimony as they were."

"I don't like the idea of women keeping their jobs after they're married," said Ann. "As far as a woman is concerned, marriage and business are two distinct careers, and you can't live both successfully."

"That's right, Ann," said Marion. "While I think it's unreasonable for a business house to bar married women from their force, I do think it's a mistake for a married woman whose husband is able to support her comfortably to go in definitely for a business career. I'm not speaking of women who continue to use after marriage some natural artistic gift or a talent that's been carefully cultivated—that's a different proposition. But there are a lot of married women who simply stay on in ordinary commercial jobs simply to shirk the obligations and responsibilities of their marriage. And, incidentally, they keep deserving people out of good jobs."

"I know," said Dorothy, "that there are a number of married women holding good jobs, whose husbands are well able to provide for them and their families, and they are simply too selfish to give up the extra income they've established. But that isn't Miss Rend's case, I'm sure. She intends to work only long enough to save a little nest egg for her mother. I think she's perfectly right."

As Ann got up from the table she walked over and patted Dorothy on the shoulder. "If you told me tomorrow that you were about to be married under similar circumstances I think I'd be tempted to say, 'Go ahead, dear,' for it's better to be married, even if you have to work, than never to be married at all."

As we left the table Marion and I couldn't help exchanging a glance of amusement at Ann's turn-about-face. Her fine ideas and principles, always will crumple up when applied to Dorothy or to any one else she loves.

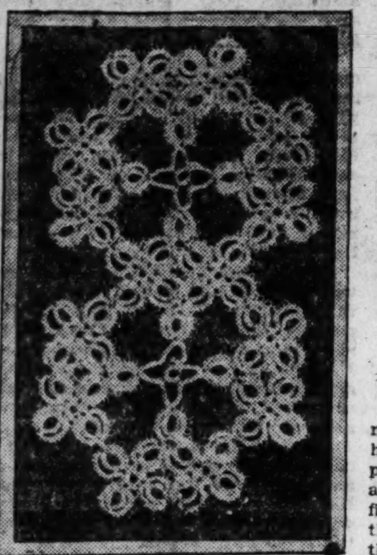
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

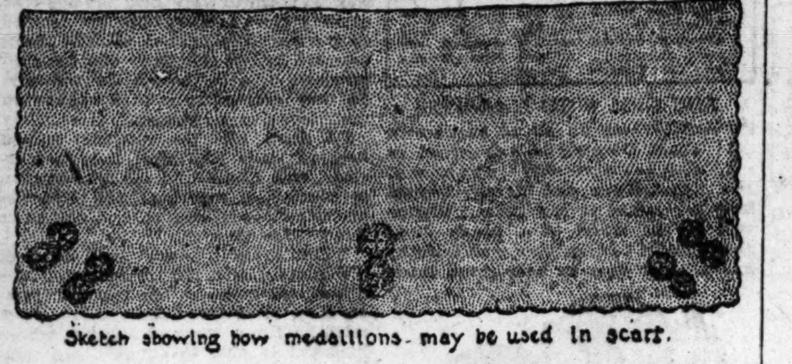
BY CLOTILDE

AN INSERTION OF TATTING.

TATTING is fascinating work to watch, and doubtless many women find it just as fascinating to do. A beautiful, lacy insertion is shown here, suitable for almost any purpose where insertion is used.

To make the insertion: Begin at center. R. 3p, 3 ds, between, close. Ch. 5 ds. R. 8 ds, close. Ch. 4p, 2 ds, between, join p, of last r. Make p, ch. 4p, 2 ds, between, join base of same r. Ch. 5 ds, join p, of center r. Repeat from * to *, 3 times. Cut and tie thread. Second row—Each square as follows: R. 4p, 2 ds, between, close. Ch. 3 ds, join 1st p, of center r. Ch. 4p, 2 ds, between. R 8 ds, join same p, 8 ds, close. Ch. 4p, 2 ds, between, join same p,. Repeat from * to *, 3 times, joining each bud to last by 1st p, of ch. counting from nearest to center r. Cut and tie thread. Make 8 sqs. and join together and to center sqs. are required for second motif. Repeat as required.





Sketch showing how medallions may be used in scarf.

Following are the meanings of the abbreviations used:

Double stitch (ds), two half stitches made with the shuttle forming one stitch.

Ring (r), a number of double stitches made with shuttle thread only, drawn into a ring.

Chain (ch), a cord made with the ball thread on the shuttle thread, not drawn into a ring.

Directions for roll tatting:

With thread in order for a chain, make 1 ds, small p, and 1 ds, for finger hold and joining. With short thread, pass the shuttle over the ball thread and back under it, close to the left forefinger. Continue this, winding the ball thread on the shuttle thread. Keep thread tight and push up the stitches under the left thumb often. One roll counts as one stitch. With one set of rolls made, push up tightly; if at all loose, roll the first end between thumb and finger, from you, hold tight, and make 1 ds. All picots are small, with 1 ds before and after.

A WEEK OF LONELINESS.

SWEETHEART: My diary says it is only one week since I left you but it seems impossible that all these eons of hours could come in one week.

Are you sure you are quite well? I keep imagining new combinations of misfortunes that might happen, and when I wake in the night and trun to listen to your breathing I clasp only empty air, and then I am desolate when I realise that loved form is many, many hundred miles away.

I am never going to let you be so far away again. Dearest, were there ever two people in this world happier than we when together? Do you remember what an eternity of time elapsed between the morning train and the one that brought me home at night to the dearest, sweetest, loveliest wife that any man ever had—and here is a whole week of those nights without one night taking me home.

My own darling—my queen, my precious—please, please take ever so good care of your bonnie self, and it won't be long now till I shall come home and take care of my honey bunch myself. I send a thousand kisses and love galore. Yours, CARL.

Eat Raisins—"The Iron Food for Vitality"

Raisin Pie

Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

3 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
2 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon corn starch
1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with 1 cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch, which has been mixed with 1 cup cold water. Boil 3 minutes; add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

All measurements for these recipes are level.

Stewed Raisins

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron this way

Cover Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75% natural fruit sugar.

Cranberries Again
The New Crop of Fresh
Crisp Fruit Now Selling.

Nature's Appetizer!

This delicious and healthful fruit should be on the table every day.

Buy cranberries for the most appetizing—most economical sauce, jelly, pies, puddings and ices.

Buy them for preserving—the price is reasonable.

Try these recipes:

Cranberry Jelly

Cook until soft the desired quantity of cranberries with 1½ pints of water for each two quarts of berries. Strain the juice through a jelly bag.

Measure the juice and heat it to the boiling point. Add one cup of sugar for every two cups of juice; stir until the sugar is dissolved; boil briskly for five minutes; skim and pour into glass tumblers, porcelain or crockery molds.

Cranberry Sauce

One quart cranberries, two cups boiling water, 1½ to 2 cups sugar. Boil sugar and water together for five minutes; skim; add the cranberries and boil without stirring (five minutes is usually sufficient) until all the skins are broken. Remove from the fire when the popping stops.

Cranberry Pie

Have ready a partly baked pastry shell. Pour in sauce when cold, made by the above sauce recipe, put strips of pastry over the top, and finish baking in a moderate oven.

Cook cranberries in porcelain-lined, enameled or aluminum vessels—never in tin.

To be sure of a selection of the choicest, cultivated varieties—ask for EATMOR CRANBERRIES.

The Landing of Columbus at San Salvador

October 12th 1492

The Founding of the General Furniture Co.

May 16th 1892

The tremendous changes that have taken place on the western continent since the arrival of Columbus have exceeded any other period of development in the world's history. Chicago's Greatest Chain of Furniture Stores, organized and brought to its present standing by the GENERAL FURNITURE CO. in the short time of 29 years, is one of the most astounding achievements in modern business building. The people of Chicago have made this success possible by their generous patronage, and their patronage has been consistent because they have found it profitable and have been able to effect greater savings here than at other furniture houses. The GENERAL'S free savings bank account plan gives every customer a FREE deposit with the Chicago City Bank & Trust Co. equal to 10% of the total amount purchased. f limestone graded from moderne to rustic or coarse in texs used for the facing of these ls, all the stone being left with the finish as it comes from the saws, with the exception of window sills, grade course, coping and the trim constituting the pilasters and ance features.

This house is intended to be built a lot 100 feet in width by the al depth of 150 feet or more, but d be built on a lot having a width 0 feet. The overall size of house feet wide by 23 feet deep from t to back.

The plot plan shows the suggested ngement on a 100 foot lot having comparatively flat contour with ht rise from front to rear of propy, such as are found in most dists around Chicago and many other western cities.

The house is set back 40 feet from perty line, giving an ample well t lawn in front. This lawn is not up by walk in center, the approach entrance being by walk at the left, along the narrow walk formed by of the cement automobile tracks the lawn at right. At the side of perty, along both of these apaches, there are wide borders nted with flowering shrubs and rdy perennials arranged for seasonal om. Connecting both approaches is cross walk, in back of which rises a w grass terrace, and the stone steps ading to front entrance. This terce is inclosed with a low clipped edge of box.

The walk at right also leads to the lawn in front of inclosed porch or sun room and across that lawn to the long, grassy walk at rear, inclosed with shrubbery of a naturalistic planting.

Directly in rear of house is another carefully leveled and closely clipped lawn, around which the ground rises slightly to the natural contour of property by low terraces, with a broad flight of stone steps leading to a little flower garden at rear.

This lawn space is encircled by walk on top of these terraces and inclosed at sides by a double row of slender evergreen trees of moderate height. These walks terminate in square pergolas, which are placed at either end of the cross walk through flower garden, connecting the informal grassy walk at right side with kitchen garden on left.

A limestone foundation and bird bath form the center feature of the flower garden.

The service yard at right side of house is inclosed with moderately high stone wall of rough sawed varied texture limestone in contrast with house. This wall is pierced above breast height with openings that are filled in with panels of white painted fencing and the small garage is built in and made a part of this wall and, having a flat roof, is treated with a pergola effect, making it both inconspicuous and an interesting part of the composition.

The handsome paneled and deeply recessed front door opens into an entrance hall floored with thin slabs of deep buff limestone. At the back of the hall main stairs rise to the second floor and lead down to garden entrance placed only one step above the lawn.

To the left of the hall is a large living room, from which two French doors lead to an inclosed porch along left side of the house. There is a delightfully large fireplace of English Tudor design set flush in the side wall of the living room.

To the right of the hall is the dining room, moderate in size, having a corner fireplace of unusual design. From the dining room French doors lead to a breakfast room or enclosed dining porch. There is an ample pantry and a conveniently arranged kitchen with service stairs and side entrance from the service yard.

In the second story there is a master bedroom en suite with dressing room, bath, and sleeping porch; two other fair sized bedrooms, bath, sewing room, and maid's room. From off the larger of these bedrooms is another sleeping porch.

The roof of the house is flat, and from the second story the main stairway rises to roof level in a roofhouse covering the stair hall portion of the second story. From this doors open on to the roof, which could be of fireproof construction, paved with red quarry tile, and thus serve the very delightful purpose of roof garden, making it available for dancing and other summer entertainments. In the building as designed, however, the roof is covered with painted heavy canvas duck, like the deck of a boat, which is laid over the usual watertight roofing.

The hipped roof of roofhouse, which is also faced with stone, is covered with red Spanish roofing tile, giving an interesting touch of color.

Sulphur Clears Rough, Red Skin

Face, Neck and Arms Easily Made Smooth, Says Specialist

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

The Shoes to Buy for Fall

When you select your footwear this season, will you buy the ordinary shoe and risk comfort and health; or will you change to sensible, efficient shoes that are good looking?

There's happiness in a good pair of shoes and as much damnation in a bad pair of shoes as in anything else of the same size except a vial of poison. The good shoe comforts your feet, eases your mind, invigorates your body, beautifies your disposition. The bad shoe can give you a nervous headache, a backache, a knee ache, besides many a foot ache; and the ultimate consequences may be serious enough to require long medical treatment.

Send for Cantilever booklet. Mail orders filled.

Keep well and you will look well. Use good judgment when you decide on the type of shoes you will wear this fall. Give more thought to shoes than to any other article of your new apparel, because they can do you the most harm or the most good. Let us show you and demonstrate the Cantilever Shoe, which has made so many women happy and will do as much for you. Its flexible arch, natural lines, offer you comfort, strength and ease. Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

Poslam

nothing better for pimples

The sensitive skin of a young girl or boy! How every little disturbance—even that extra ice-cream soda—has its immediate effect in the form of a crop of pimples. But the tender skin should respond just as quickly to a touch of Poslam applied at bedtime or occasionally during the day.

Its persistent use, with good thorough cleansings with Poslam Soap, should keep the skin in a condition of which any girl may well be proud. Not only the "sub-deb" but her big sister as well can profit by this treatment. (18)

(A Business Editorial)

SLEEP

Scarcely one-third of us know what complete rest means, for when we do go to bed at night it is to spend a good share of the night twisting and turning in the vain endeavor to find a restful position in a bed that doesn't fit. Strange it is, how people with enough money to buy good clothes and good food and everything, will skimp along, at what cost heaven only knows, for years and years with a bed that makes night hideous, when a reasonable investment in good springs and mattresses would provide a welcome at bedtime.

How many miserables are fighting insomnia and the "willies" these fine nights on bed springs, so called, and mattresses that would serve as miniature golf links! To wake! To wake! No, no, to turn and twist all night, and then at dawn to lie still awake! And all, perhaps, to save the price of many things less necessary.

Rest is cheap, but short-sighted people hate to pay the price until they enter a sanitarium, and here the price makes no difference if they can only get well.

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of each pattern you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (wrap coin carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Note: Clotilde patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE. They are perfect in fit, up to date in style, and the easiest of all patterns to use.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

How to Use the Patterns

SERGE, tricotine, taffeta, or satin —or any desired wash material—would make up attractively by pattern No. 1162. It consists of a separate waist with set-in sleeves and a straight, gathered skirt, finished at the normal waistline.

Taffeta makes a very pretty dress to wear at home afternoons. By using this pattern and having the collar, vest, and pocket laps of some contrasting color and material one may turn out a decidedly smart dress. Challis, with the contrasting parts made of satin, would also be good looking and quite a little less expensive than silk.

The sleeves show the fashionable looseness at the lower edge, and there are many attractive ways of finishing them.

An opening is cut in the left side of the skirt, and the waist fastens at the left side of the front. The pattern is easy to follow and should not be difficult for women who make their own dresses.

No. 1143 is a jumper dress, so much worn by both grown women and young folks. It does not lose its popularity, and one will not make any mistake to include one or more in one's wardrobe.

It is especially good for school wear, made of serge, tricotine, challis or similar material, worn over washable blouses.

A pretty finish is given to the dress by the two narrow belts that start and finish at each side of the front. The bottom of the skirt is finished with a deep hem, and the armholes and neck of the dress are bound.

No. 1012 is a one piece slip-on dress. A lightweight twill, tricotine, or serge would make up well by it, or it would lend itself equally well to any of the silks or wash materials. It is a design that will be especially becoming to a slender figure.

Gray, brown, or blue Canton crêpe would be smart looking. The pockets may be omitted if desired. The side sections of the skirt are extended out beyond the edges of the waist, gathered and brought back to give a becoming fullness on the sides.

The pattern shows two different ways to finish the neck. In both cases the front is cut down the middle to a perforation showing the end of the opening, and in one case the fronts are faced and joined to a collar that extends across the back. This is a pretty and becoming way. In the other way the neck and opening are finished with a binding, and the opening held together at the neckline with any preferred fastening.

If the collar and facing are preferred, the under part of the collar should be joined to the front neck edges, having the seam come on the wrong side of the dress. The outside collar section is joined in the same manner to the front facings, the seams pressed open, then the facing and collar section are laid on the right side of the dress, with the wrong side of the seams showing. Pin carefully to the collar and fronts, match the seams, then stitch around the edge and turn right side out. Hem the lower edge of the collar over the neck seam, turn in the edges of the facing, and blindstitch lightly to the dress so the stitches will not be visible on the right side.

Knows He Loves Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: Several months ago I became acquainted with a man who took a liking for me. Whenever I meet him he greet me friendly. I know he loves me because he has proved it many times. The only trouble is he has never asked me to go out with him. Kindly advise me what to do, as I love this man. ADELE."

New, Adele, dear, are you not presuming just a little? When young men love young ladies they usually take them about and provide them entertainment, don't they? Of course, these are not the most affluent times and perhaps the youth has not the money to spend. It costs quite a lot out of the average youth's pay envelope to entertain. But they manage it somehow by personal sacrifices when they are sincerely in love and set out to win a girl's heart.

Say You're Sorry.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 and was going out with a young man of 19. One night when we were out he did something and I, misunderstanding him, got angry and told him I did not want to see him any more. He said all right and went away. I met him some time after and we both spoke. When I got home I was sorry I did not stop and talk.

How would you advise me to get back with him, as I think it is my place to talk first. "LONELY."

If it was a misunderstanding and the quarrel was your fault, next time you see him just stop and tell him you are sorry you were hasty and that you feel you owe him an apology. I think it is so foolish to let misunderstandings develop into breaches of friendship just for lack of the word of making up.

One of my twin brothers slept with his mother; the other slept in his own bed. One night Henry, the one who slept with his mother, was changed to George's bed while asleep, as George was sick. During the night Henry awoke, and finding himself in his brother's bed, called out, "Mamma, is I Henry, or is I George?" G. E.

Harold's parents had just recently moved to town, and one of his little friends invited him to a party. Harold went but did not enjoy himself. The games seemed so silly, and the girls were always giggling, and Harold was not sure that he was not the subject of their mirth. He endured it for a while, but finally slipped from the room, expecting to leave unnoticed.

But just as he was opening the door, the little host's mother saw him and asked, "Why, what's the matter, Harold?"

To which he replied, "Aw, there's nothing the matter with Harold, but he are going home." B. R. E.

My cousin, Robert, frequently spends the day with us and quite often an afternoon. Mother generally has some cake, pie, cookies, or pastry of some kind in the pantry, and as soon as he arrives, the first thing is to give him something to eat.

Mother was busy recently when he came, and for quite a while was almost unconscious that he was present, as he is quiet and has but little to say to any one.

After waiting patiently for something to eat, he said, "Ain't you got nussen so I can have sumpin." F. P.

Robert was a good natured child—too much so at times. He was easily imposed upon by his playmates and overreluctant to take his own part in any way more than by argument.

Among those who sensed Robert's meekness and imposed upon it was a boy cousin who often visited at Robert's house, together with his parents.

One day, just before this cousin and his parents were to call, Robert was advised by his mother to stand up for himself and not allow the other boy to bully him. She remembered that the other mother always failed to reprimand her son.

Shortly after the visitors had arrived both mothers were startled by an avalanche of noise, screams for help mingled with scuffling, and the thuds of firsts on flesh. When the mothers arrived at the scene of battle Robert had his cousin on the ground and was beating him.

His mother, for example to the other mother, said: "Why, Robert, I am surprised. Haven't I taught you better than to fight, and especially with company?"

But Robert was not old enough to appreciate either the irony of his mother's words or the circumstances from the adult standpoint. All indignation, his cheeks crimson from the rebuke as well as the exertion, he cried out: "I only did what you told me to do, mother!" B. R. E.

Her mother later found that a quarantine had been put up. M. O.

Where are the attics with trunks full of clothes?

Velvets and broadcloth, satins and linens —the fabrics like new, the styles passé?

A PROMINENT society woman was heard to say the other day—"The coming generation will never have the fun of masquerading in our discarded frocks—we wear them out these days!"

And she voiced the attitude of the modern, busy woman of today.

A few years ago a style lasted but a single year, and keeping well dressed meant discarding your wardrobe each season for newer modes.

Today, if a woman is careful in choosing her clothes, she may wear them fashionably while the materials last.

And the reason for this change? Woman herself!

She has adopted an independent attitude towards dress. She is no longer under the thumb of a few designers who say "it's in today—tomorrow it's out."

She is doing the dictating herself. "Smart styles," she demands, "but clothes which will remain in good taste until I wear them out."

And that is just what you are getting in Wooltex Tailor-mades and Wooltex Knockabouts. No bizarre or "one-season" style ever passes the Wooltex Style Studios. Each coat or suit bearing the signature of the Wooltex Tailors is absolutely an assured style. Carefully tailored of the finest serges, tricotines, tweeds, homespuns and Wooltex Sportspuns, there are coats and suits for every occasion on which a coat or suit may be worn.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE GIRL DECIDES.

FAR north on the Pacific coast toward the Alaska country lies a tiny hamlet at the mouth of a turbulent mountain stream that forces its noisy way down the valley to the sea.

Here had lived for many years a gigantic Scandinavian with his Indian wife, four stalwart sons, and a daughter named Elma. The girl had developed into a beautiful young woman, tall and graceful, with a great mane of golden hair, which tumbled down her shoulders in masses of rippling sunshine, and with her father's sea blue eyes, that seemed to mirror the quiet green of the great mountain slopes and the diaphanous mists that swept in wide spreading festoons across the face of the mountains.

One day there arrived a party of prospectors, bound on a trip up the valley. Among them were two young men—recent graduates in engineering from an eastern university.

On the first morning after arrival these two had gone for a stroll along one of the rough mountain paths and met Elma busily engaged in picking berries. Courteously raising their caps, they requested permission to assist in the berry picking, and before long all were merrily laughing at some slight mishaps caused by their bungling attempts to climb the slippery rocks.

Accompanying Elma back to the village, they were invited to dine. Some hours later they reluctantly tore themselves away and started to find their party.

After walking along for some time in silence, Gordon, the taller and older of the two turned to his companion and said, "Ted, that is the only girl I can ever marry."

"But," said Ted, "that is the way I feel about her myself, and you remember our solemn compact that nothing, not even a woman, should ever come between us."

"Well," said Gordon, "here is my proposal. We shall say nothing to Elma before starting on the trip, and on return we shall propose together and abide by her decision."

This was agreed to.

On arrival back at the hamlet a cablegram was found requiring the immediate departure of Ted by the boat then leaving. This left Gordon in a quandary, but, meeting Elma that evening, he was surprised when she expressed relief at Ted's departure.

"Why, how is that?" said Gordon.

"O," said Elma, with a shy glance, "I was afraid he was going to propose to me, and I had vowed I would never marry a man shorter than myself."

"Why," said Gordon, "I am tall."

"But do you love me?" said Elma.

With his voice shaking with emotion, Gordon tried to tell her some small part of the love that possessed him.

"Then," said Elma, "I shall marry you."

After a rapturous embrace, Gordon's conscience bothered him.

"Dearest," he said, "this isn't quite fair to Ted, as we promised to propose together."

"Silly," said Elma. "You didn't propose. I did."

However, a few days later a telegram from Ted informed Gordon that he had met an old sweetheart and realized that she was his soul mate, so they were all suited and lived happily ever after.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

By Mary Brush Williams.

THE SUNDAY MORNING DRESS PARADE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—We are getting on into the season when the costumes begin to appear which we have seen at the openings. One can begin to tell what is going to "take." Jenny has always been the Harold Bell Wright of her profession, and I believe that as a best seller she now leads all the rest.

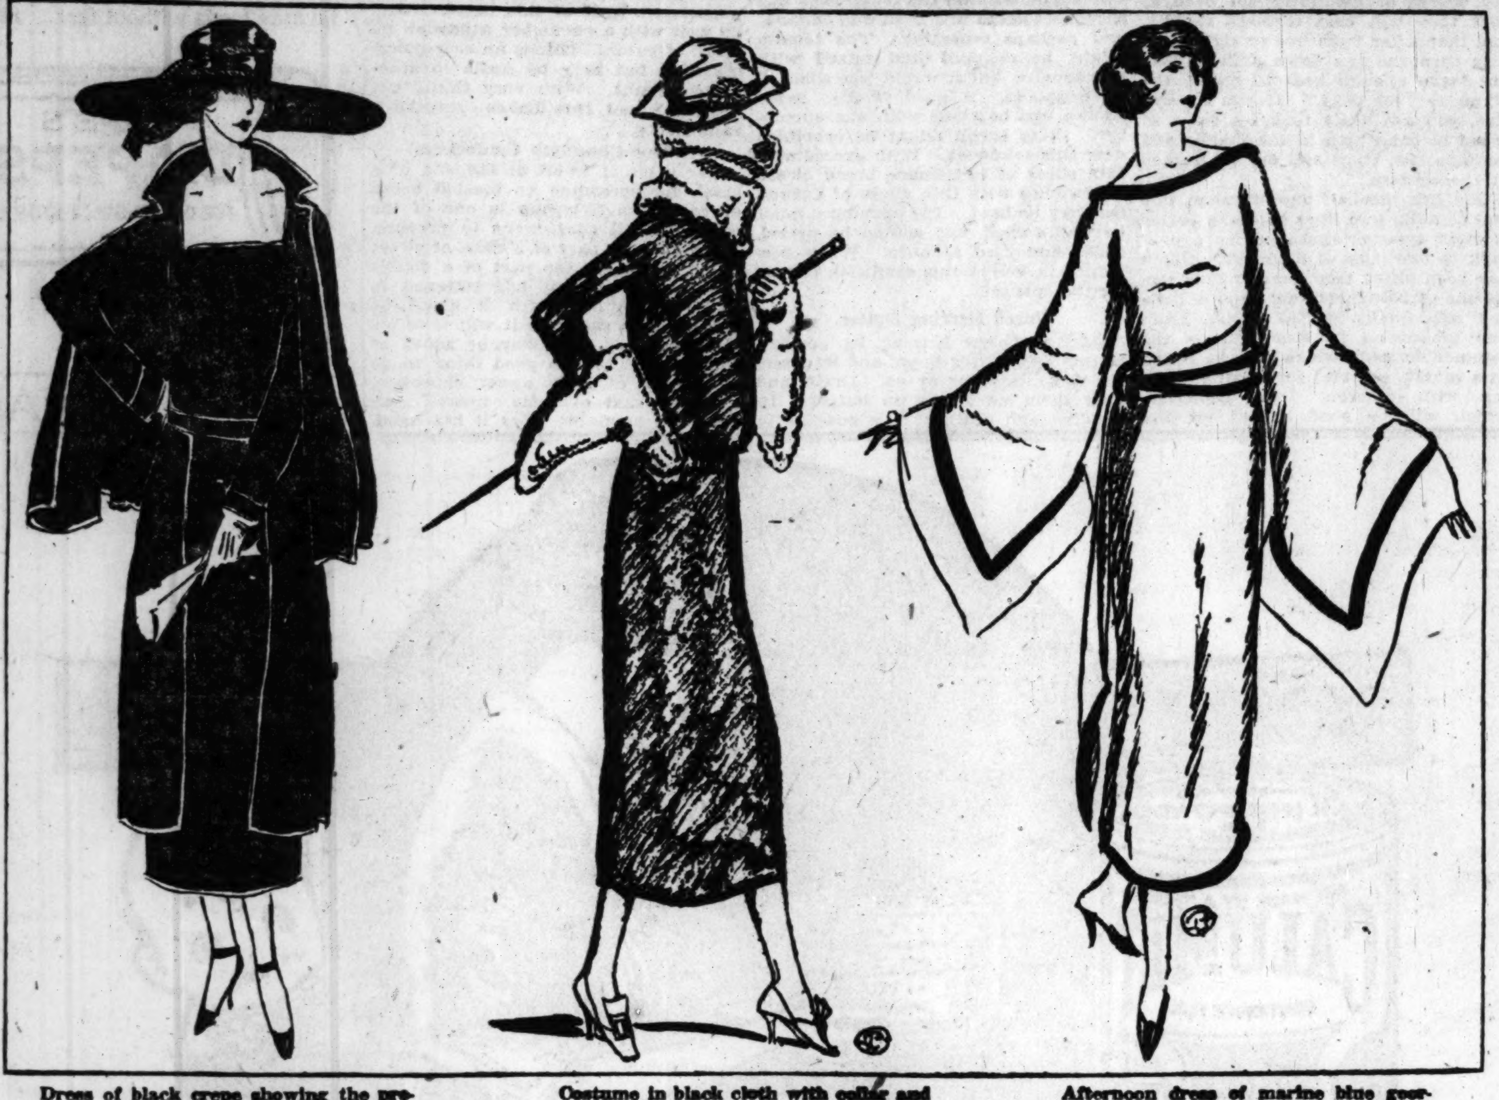
In a walk in the Bois last Sunday morning I saw such a lot of her things. And such a lot of her mannikins! Is it the French way of advertising, or do they just naturally appear there in their own right—and their own clothes? I think if they had their way they would be home tidying the house and making ready for their young men in the evening. And I know that it is the custom in the big houses to supply the clothes with which the girls appear outside the shop.

Some one tells me that the girl who got the prize for being the most beautiful of any in all of France is a mannikin at Jenny's. There is another, tall, haughty, with "beaucoup de [illegible]," as the French say, who could make her stand any place.

One of the items most conspicuously "taking" are the little capes attached to coats and dresses, and usually detachable at will. I saw any number of them in the Sunday morning parade. And at Callot's this morning I saw one as a brief wrap or annex to a charming dress.

It was in moleskin, and folded across the front like a straight lined jacket, while in the back it went off into butterfly wings. The dress was of a [illegible] gray.

One of the more or less representative capes is illustrated in the accompanying model. This one is on a dress by Jenny. I was going to say that in general they were on short coats. But in general they are everywhere. This one is of black crêpe, with a half inch piping at every seam of white crêpe de chine.



Dress of black crepe showing the prevailing cape movement. Jenny.

Costume in black cloth with collar and cuffs in gray caracul. Jenny.

Afternoon dress of marine blue georgette with bands of brown fur. Jenny.

Did you get the impression that black was going out of style? Certainly the dressmakers did. They tried to kill it. But they failed. Now the fear is that the women will never relinquish it, since they have found how cheap and how becoming it is. This year models are being shown in colors and women are ordering them in black.

The dress of the model has two side panels shorter than the skirt, and this is a departure, for you know that usually they are what carry the sense of length. The belt is on the geographical site of the waistline, and the skirt is not as long as dictated by the current mode, but as long as the mien average of what the wearers will so far stand for.

Big hats are an important phase of the "mode actuelle." Reboux is turning out some lovely ones, of which the accompanying is representative. You mustn't have much of anything on them. This is black and decorated merely in a band edged with white.

The second figure shows a popular silhouette of the moment. To be totally without dimensions except for length and to blouse a little at the waistline—that is all there is to it. As I sat at Callot's this morning it seemed to me everything in the house bloused and had long floating sleeves. We walked along the rue Du Bac this afternoon, and I saw a silk sweater for 38 francs which I wished to buy, until my friend rescued me. "It has short sleeves!" she cried, as if she were saying that it was filled with poison. By which I gather that they are out of style.

This friend is named Mrs. Jefferson Davis; she is the sister-in-law of Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, and she could not come to spend the week-end with me because she was going to spend it with the Duchesse du Tallyrand at the chateau in the country. She is awfully pretty herself and she got some awfully pretty things at Callot's—long lined, and black and low-belted.

In one of her Jenny's things her silhouette is practically the same as this. It is of black cloth which is soft in texture, and is belted with a link ceinture of jet. The feature to which it owes its distinction is the high choker of a collar like a muff and long gauntlet gloves of gray caracul. The little hat which accompanies it is of brown felt, ribbon bound.

I remember describing a silhouette a week or two ago that covers the third model. It is one of the outlines of the day. If I repeat myself, so do the dresses—you see them in twos and threes and tens on the boulevards now. This is the long pillowslip of a silhouette to which enormous flowing sleeves are appended.

The particular model happens to be of blue crêpe georgette trimmed with bands of brown fur, and cuffs outside the band of fur in red chiffon. The belt is edged with the fur and lined with the red.

The Man in the Chair.

My brother-in-law is a dentist. Whenever I am shopping I run up to his office for a few moments.

One morning while downtown I remembered that my brother had an appointment with the dentist that morning, and thought I would go up and wait for him. I went into the office and saw a man in the chair with a light pompadour like brother's. He had the rubber over his mouth and I tiptoed over to him and kissed him on the forehead.

My brother-in-law, who had been working at the other end of the room, turned around and gave me an awful look. I looked again at the man in the chair and found he was a perfect stranger.

P. H. M.

Assistance.

My chum was asked to play a violin solo at a church minstrel show, and asked me to go on the platform with her and turn her music for her. She stood in front of the music rack, and I stood behind it, where I could not see the music, but turned the sheets at a signal from her, given by raising her eyes.

In reaching to turn one of the sheets I accidentally struck the rack with my hand and knocked the music off. It fell on the floor, and I hastily picked it up and put it back on the rack. My chum bravely played on without a waver, but kept signaling to me with her eyes. I turned the sheet, she signaled again, and I, thinking I had mistaken the previous signal, turned back. She signaled again, and I again turned the sheet, then turned one more. Finally in desperation I leaned over to look at the notes, and saw that I had placed the sheets in the rack upside down!

I turned them up straight, amid shrieks of laughter from the audience which almost drowned my chum's really beautiful solo, of which, in spite of all difficulties, she had not missed a note. I hope that was my most embarrassing moment and always will be, as I would hate to think there might be others like it in store for me.

The Collector Collects.

I was in a new job, collecting personal accounts for a retail store. One account I noted was four months old and not a cent had been paid on it. I called twice a week and finally every day to get a small payment, frequently as little as 10 cents, until the account was paid up. A few days later the buyer returned from the east, and to my surprise I found I had worried the account out of his wife during his absence. However, I was complimented on my persistency.

H. B.

What She Most Dreaded.

When I was about 15 I was extremely bashful, and my chief endeavor in life was to avoid the notice of young men. One evening father brought a friend home to supper, a young man with mischievous eyes and a deep, bass voice. He was not long in discovering and trying to frustrate my efforts at self-effacement, but I kept my eyes glued to the table cloth during supper, and only opened my mouth to put something into it.

When the meal was over and the family scattered to cooler quarters on the moon lighted porch and lawn, I lingered behind a moment, then followed in the direction I had seen daddy take. His big easy chair stood at the end of the porch where the vines were thickest. I could just make out the outline of a big masculine figure seated in it, and I leaned over and put my arm round his neck and my cheek down on his, murmuring:

"Daddy, is this you?"

"My name's John!" was the startling reply in the deep, bass voice of the visiting young man.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

AFTERNOON REFRESHMENTS.

A GREAT number of people have had the experience of going to "a tea" at which no tea was served. The punch bowl and the coffee urn were among the refreshments present, but neither tea ball nor pot. A great number of people plan giving "a tea," while the last thing they are planning to make is tea. What they give is what used to be called "a high tea," perhaps because a cup of tea has become a daily institution with many people, though never will it come to be with us the daily institution it is in England, where the lawyer, doctor, rich man, poor man, and shopkeeper, as well as the homekeeper, have, in some corner or closet, the makings for tea and the equipment for serving it.

Nowadays there is a never ending hunt for novelties in things to eat at some nearly late hour of the afternoon, things that will inspire gayety or be gay of themselves. In particular are hostesses anxious to have some suitable and novel refreshment for the bridge party.

The Water Service.

From observation at afternoon parties, at church suppers, and such places, I would suggest as a real novelty a glass of water. There are no end of people who would like that first, or care for nothing else, if they could but have that. And how it is needed among a people who rarely take their quota of cold water a day, a quota so vitally necessary to long life and freedom from ills!

With present day possibilities in equipment there is hardly anything that can be served more attractively than water from the enameled thermos carafe, on the tray to match. A hostess might well economize a few times on cakes and sandwiches for the sake of acquiring this item, or several of them.

A little candy is nice to nibble on after other refreshments, and both for immediate comfort and for future well being there is nothing so good after candy as a few sips of water.

For the Sake of Those Who Diet.

In our world of today there is perhaps no more socially significant service of food than that for the tea, and the closely related occasions. Small portions of fat and flour and flavoring, no matter how thin and dainty, I would reject for health's sake, and for the sake of not tempting that large majority in every company who are "reducing." So universal is this recreation of reducing that even children, virile men children of 12 or so, brag about the number of pounds they have dropped off in a given period.

Spurred by calls for help, ideas about how to vary the afternoon collection of refreshments—how to make it prettier, different, easier to do—have been simmering in my head for some time, ideas which I hope will gratify in some measure those who have asked for some new thing, evidently believing there could be some new thing under the sun in refreshments, or perhaps hoping against hope.

Types of Butters.

First, then, it has occurred to me that we might have more types of butters for our simple breads, perhaps each in small balls, than have ever been served. There would first be plain balls of sweet butter, then some could be sweet like the cinnamon butter or any of the butter icings made up, as this may be, into a bonbon-like portion. Others could be like the fish butters—mixtures of fish pounded to a paste with butter. Ground sweet pepper mixed with butter is always good on bread.

These butters might be served in platter-like fashion from one large plate. Along with them might be served some fine stiff mayonnaise, for there are people who would rather have this on their bread than any other piquant thing in the world. Some green leaves might garnish the dish or be used as a foundation. Bowl-like leaves of head lettuce or even of green cabbage might be used for the different sorts of butters.

For light refreshment occasions the bonbon or relish dish of many compartments has gained in popularity and uses.

Spicy Butter.

Cream four tablespoons of sweet butter, and then cream into it one-half cup of confectioner's sugar, soften with two level teaspoons of cinnamon and a scant half teaspoon of cloves. After these are creamed together, grate a little nutmeg over the whole, and work it in.

This butter may be used for innumerable things. It may be used for an icing on inexpensive cakes, and can be manipulated with great ease in pipings. It may be chilled and used as a hard sauce. It may be made up into balls and served as suggested to be spread on hot little tea cakes or muffins or even on slices of hot egg breads, making each slice a sort of coffee cake.

One-Egg Bread or Tea Cake.

A good deal of skill is required to bake a one-egg bread, sweetened, of course, in an ideal sheet, and in putting it together two tablespoons too much of flour may make it too stiff, and give it a tight drawn crust instead of a lax one. Therefore, old recipes never told exactly the amount of flour to use.

Perhaps the best way to bake these breads in a sheet is to put them into a 500 degree or genuinely hot oven so that they will heat through rapidly, and then after from five to eight minutes turn the gas down a good deal, but leave enough heat to brown the bread or "tea cake." If you reverse this, you are likely to get a sheet of bread or cake high in the middle and perhaps low, tight and dry or burned at the corners.

One egg, one-half cup of sugar, one cup of milk, and flour to make batter of right type, or three-fourths cup of milk to two cups of flour, with which has been sifted from two to four teaspoons of baking powder, and a little salt and finally melted butter, from one tablespoon to four—this is the common formula which may be baked as a muffin, steamed for a batter pudding with different fruit additions, which will be good heated up and served with almost any pudding sauce.

Cucumber Sandwiches.

Cucumbers and mayonnaise, with toasted egg bread, make a most palatable sandwich and one pleasant to set one's teeth into. Perhaps it is best to make it an open sandwich, spreading mayonnaise on the toast; then add slices of tomato and then mayonnaise, and perhaps repeating. The tomato might be chopped and mixed with mayonnaise, but it would lose some of its crispness. A good many sandwiches can be made with one cucumber. Crisp bacon might be crumbled over this sandwich. With exceedingly thin slices of homemade bread closed sandwiches with thin slices of cucumber may be used. The cucumber must be well chilled, and should be peeled, sliced and used at once. When perfection is sought this sandwich is that for the epicure.

Cured Herring Butter.

Scald boneless herring by pouring boiling water over them, and let stand for three minutes or so. Drain and heat them up gently in butter. In scalding and heating it is possible to stiffen the fish, and this must not be done if good results are hoped for. The idea of both things is to freshen the herring from anything of staleness it may have.

Crumb the herring or pound it fine and mix with creamed butter, to which may be added a few drops of onion juice and a suspicion of cayenne pepper. A little of this butter would go well with a cucumber sandwich instead of bacon. This is an economical material, but may be made to seem quite elegant. With very thinly cut oatmeal bread this makes exceptional sandwiches.

A Hot Chocolate Confection.

For a bit of sweet at the end of a meal, for spreading on toasted bread or cake, the following is one of the easiest of all confections to prepare. Put a cake or part of a cake of sweet chocolate in the top part of a double boiler, and when it has softened to liquid stage mix with it about as much brown sugar as it will take up. Some chopped nuts may be added or some fruit. It is a good thing to do with bars of stale sweet chocolate, although that of some makes can never be palatable after it has aged.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

This is the twenty-fourth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

LAUNDRY WORK AT HOME.

THE subject of laundry is a vexatious one, both for the city and the country housewife. In the city steam laundries have become high in price and good laundresses are few and far between. And the necessary restrictions of city life, such as drying in the basement, or if outdoors in an air only too full of city soot and dirt, give the clothes a gray tinge which nothing short of a monthly bleach will cure.

If you are doing your own housework try to do a little washing every day as you finish the morning dishes. This puts the bulk out of the way and leaves only the worst pieces to be soaked and boiled every week. This plan works equally well even if you have a laundress come every week, for by rinsing out the colored things your silk lingerie and stockings, the napkins, perhaps, and the baby's woolens you make it possible for her to finish the washing and ironing all in one day and do a few hard jobs, like washing up the kitchen floor, besides.

Soft Water.

The first thing of importance about washing is the quality of the water. Hard water not only takes a great deal more soap but forms a scum which adheres to the clothes and is hard to rinse out. This scum is pure waste soap, as it is made up of the insoluble lime soap thrown off. Hard water may be softened by boiling, but this is a tedious and expensive fashion if one must use gas. So the usual way to soften the water is with borax, ammonia, or washing soda.

Borax is rather more expensive than the other two, but it has the advantage of being absolutely harmless, whereas ammonia affects colors and, if too strong, woolens also, and soda solutions in time weaken the goods and make woolens harsh. Always use borax for blankets and baby woolens. For the usual laundry, however, sheets, tablecloths, etc., make up a water softener and keep it in the laundry. Dissolve one pound of washing soda in one quart of boiling water and then use about a cupful in your washing tub or in the proportion of two tablespoons to a gallon.

This should be sufficient to loosen the dirt as well as soften the water. Do not use any other washing powders, as you do not know how strong the alkali is in them nor its effect on the clothes.

Soaking Clothes.

For the heavy, hard washing a soaking over night helps the work, and by putting them in the solution mentioned above and soaping the clothes where they are dirtiest your work will be lessened in the morning. When you start to wash add both the water softener and ammonia at the rate of a tablespoon to a gallon of water.

If you are washing silks or colored clothes omit the ammonia. For materials which are soft and pliant, like window curtains, scrim, chiffon, bath towels, etc., the work is minimized to almost nothing if you make up a solution of soap flakes in boiling water. See that the soap is thoroughly dissolved, mix well in your tub, and put the soiled clothes in for half an hour. At the end of that time souse up and down vigorously, wringing and kneading, in place of rubbing. Usually even the dirtiest window curtains will need no scrubbing on the board or the use of any more soap.

It is preferable to use soap flakes on wool and flannels. It is always simple to use your own left over pieces of laundry soap and toilet soap by shaving them up and pouring boiling water over them.

Soaps.

There are many cheap soaps on the market; but they turn out to be wasteful. They are usually full of water, and disappear like magic when the washing is begun. It is better to buy the more expensive standard brands of washing soaps than to try to economize on the unknown cheap makes. Always use a neutral mild soap for woolens and a strong soap for white goods.

The best soap is an olive oil or sesame oil soap—which is all they are made of now. Its one drawback is that it does not lather so freely, but it is more economical than any other and contains but little stearine.

Temperature.

Dirt usually has in it animal or grease properties and albumen which is rendered insoluble by heating to a comparatively low temperature. So the first requirement is soaking in tepid water containing a weak alkali to loosen the dirt. Albumen, blood, and meat stains are difficult to treat if they are first subjected to hot water.

If this question of temperature is important with cottons and linens, it is doubly so with flannels; for the animal fiber has an immediate reaction to either extremely hot or cold water or to any decided change in temperature. Wool felts in cold water and shrinks in hot. The same thing happens if wool is changed from hot to cold water. Therefore, all wool should be washed at an even temperature never above 90 degrees and even less. The rinsing waters should be of the same temperature, and the drying must be away from heat which would cause the wool to steam.

Colored Clothes.

Colored clothes should be washed in as cool water as is practicable for removing the dirt and grease. No colored clothes should be boiled or scalded or allowed to freeze while wet. They should be ironed while damp, but not too damp nor with too hot an iron. To set colors in materials which you fear will run, you must do something more than throw in a handful of salt, which has become the accustomed tradition. You must make up a strong hot solution of salt, and put the cotton or linen in it, letting it stand until cool. Use one cup of salt to two quarts of water.

Or you can use sugar of lead one tablespoon to one gallon. This is effective for everything but blue. One half cup of vinegar to a gallon of water is also effective for reds and pinks. Alum may be used on delicate colors such as embroideries.

Boiling.

In preparing your wash, separate the white and colored clothes. If there are special spots—such as fruit, grass green, blood, etc.—treat them first according to the directions previously given. If the clothes are extremely dirty, soak them over night, wash in the morning, and if you wish to whiten them by boiling in place of a bleach, put them in lukewarm water to which a soap solution has been added, soap the clothes well, and cover the boiler tightly so it holds the steam.

Stir occasionally and let boil for fifteen minutes. All stains should have been taken out first, as stains which are boiled in can come out only by using a strong solution of eau de Javelle. The first rinsing water after boiling should never be cold as it sets the loosened up matters. Also it should be soft water. If you have nothing but hard water, soften this first rinsing water with borax or ammonia. Never boil anything but cottons or linens, and never boil colored clothes.

Your Birthday Jewel and Flower

by DORIS BLAKE

Born on Monday, fair of face;
Born on Tuesday, full of grace;
Born on Wednesday, child of woe;
Born on Thursday, far to go;
Born on Friday, loving and giving;
Born on Saturday, work hard for your living;
Born on Sunday, blithe, bonny, and gay;
Yea, Sunday's child has the luckiest day.

ANOTHER interpretation of birthdays is: Born on Monday, jealous; on Tuesday, honest; Wednesday, quick tempered; Thursday, mild; Friday, talkative; Saturday, hot headed; Sunday, parsimonious.

A child born on New Year's day will all through life have his own way.

A child born on Easter morn will never know want or care.

A child born on a saint's day should be called after the saint for luck.

A child born on Palm Sunday will have occult power.

Born in January, laborious; born in February, a great love for money; born in March, honest and good looking; in April, sickly but a great traveler; in May, handsome and amiable; in June, warm hearted and fond of children; in July, fat and constant; in August, ambitious and courageous; in September, strong and prudent; in October, wicked and inconstant; in November, gay deceiver; in December, amorous in private life and devoted to public affairs.

There is a pretty myth in flower land that when a baby is born a flower opens up its petals and gives forth a little perfume to the newborn child. For each month a separate flower is appointed:

January	Snowdorp	Consolation.
February	Primrose	Early Youth.
March	Violets	Modesty.
April	Daisy	Innocence.
May	Hawthorne	Hope.
June	Wildrose	Simplicity.
July	Lily	Purity.
August	Poppy	Consoling sleep.
September	Morning Glory	Contentment.
October	Hops	Joy.
November	Chrysanthem'm	Cheerfulness.
December	Holl	Foresight.

And then in jewel land there is for every month a certain jewel dedicated to babes born in that month.

The garnet is dedicated to January born to insure constancy, fidelity, and true friendship.

February: The amethyst will provide those born in February with sincerity, peace of mind, freedom from care, and trouble.

March: Those born in March should wear a bloodstone to provide them wisdom with which to battle the world.

April: Diamonds, the emblem of innocence and happiness, should be worn by April born to save them from bitter tears and vain repentance.

May: If you would be a loved and happy mate, wear the emerald if May is your birth month.

June: The agate, which will command health, wealth, and happiness for you.

July: To remain free from love's doubts and anxieties wear the glowing ruby.

August: To insure conjugal felicity wear a sardonyx.

September: A sapphire for the September born to keep the mind free from trouble and obsessions.

October: To cure the woes of October's child, the opal is the gem to wear.

November: The topaz, amber hue, is emblematic of true friendship and sweethearts.

December: The turquoise will crown your efforts with success.

Varied Activities of Women

Germany has a housewives' labor union.

Short haired women are banned in Norway.

As far back as 1853 China had women soldiers.

Women are forbidden entrance to the Asiatic town of Malwatchi, on the borders of Russia.

The women of Burma are confirmed smokers of cheroots.

Russia has more than 2,000,000 excess females over males.

Have You a Velocipede?

"I am a constant reader of your corner and am writing to you in hope some one can help me.

"I have a boy 5 years old, left a cripple from infantile paralysis, and would like to get a velocipede for him.

"It will have to be one with springs and ball bearings, as he cannot have one which will be hard to pedal.

"MRS. C."

If your storeroom harbors a velocipede your own boy has outgrown, may not Mrs. C.'s little crippled son have it?

For Ex-Service Men.

"I am coming to you again. Are there any more bead trimming or unused beads, bead looms, bead needles, or bead books offered? If so, please do send them to me for use of the ex-service men who are still in the hospitals. Silk pieces and rags for rugs are also needed. Could you only know the good these things do, every man would be supplied with the materials he could use. MRS. J. L. M."

Father Out of Work.

"We are helping a family of five—the father has had no work for seven months and is becoming despondent because of his inability to provide for his family. We have provided their coal for the winter and will pay for the milk for the babies, but cannot undertake to provide clothing for them. If any one has anything in the way of clothes that three little boys—9 months, 2, and 6 years—could use, we would be glad to repair and alter them and pay postage. Any assistance would be greatly appreciated. MRS. C. J. R."

This family deserves help. If any one has any clothing for children, no longer needed, I shall be pleased to hear from them and see to it that Mrs. R. receives it.

Needs Winter Clothing.

"I wonder if there is someone among your many readers who has winter clothing for a 14 year old girl, also for her mother. This is not for myself but for a family I am interested in. I will call for anything offered and repair or make over. MRS. F. E."

I'll be happy to send the name of this applicant to anyone who desires to offer help.

Offers Accountancy Journals.

"I have three years of the Journal of Accountancy and some booklets issued on municipal offices and organizations which I would be glad to pass on to some student in accountancy.

"A. B. D."

Would Like a Bird Cage.

"Do you think it possible I could obtain, through your column, an unused bird cage? I have a promise of a bird, but cannot just now get a cage. I would appreciate it so much if I could get one. M. C."

I think we can find a bird cage for the pet you are promised.

Butterick Designs 2988 2807

Butterick Design 3179

Paris—and for 50c to $10 less than any clothes you made ever cost!

PARIS CLOTHES!—clothes of tantalizing, elusive charm—Paris itself, with a new economy never possible before!

Imagine being able to embody in clothes you make at home the very atmosphere of Paris, of creating frocks with real Parisian finesse, of tailoring into your suits Paris' own perfection of line! And then imagine actually being able to save so much money that your pattern pays for itself and much more in every case!

"Miraculous" you say. Yes, and the most important part is that you—yes, you—can achieve these wonders because of a marvelous new invention enclosed with every new Butterick pattern—the Deltor!—a patented picture guide that means ease of making, Paris, the greatest sewing economy ever known!

The DELTOR

Saves You 50c to $10 on Materials Alone

1 THE first thing that the Deltor does is to give you an individual layout chart (yes, an individual chart—not just a general chart but one for your exact size and for each suitable width of material). You lay out your pattern the expert's way. You use ¼ to 1⅜ yards less material—a saving of 50c to $10 on material for every frock.

2 THE Deltor saves you time. Everything the Parisian originator would do if he were making your very own frock, is clearly shown by simple pictures and words. Should your dress embody the irregular hem, the bizarre new sleeves, the Italian neck line, the Deltor shows you just how to achieve the correct effect.

3 AND finally you have every last little touch that makes for smartness—ideas for finish that could originate in but one place—Paris. You so instinctively follow the simple explanations that your finished frock must be successful, must be Paris.

SEE the newest Parisian fashions at the Butterick pattern counter. Select the styles that you like best—for the Deltor simplifies the making of the most intricate gowns, suggests the correct fabrics, and saves you 50c to $10 because it specifies less material than would be possible without the Deltor's layout chart.

FOR FASHIONS
Paris clothes for every winter occasion—style that the Deltor will interpret for you.

THE FAIR'S 46th Anniversary Sale

LOOKING back down the long lane of time, filled with many jagged rocks of experience; realizing that thru it all we have come to the climax of another anniversary more learned and stronger, to carry our principle, "Trade at The Fair and Save Money," into the future with a more intelligent strength of conviction, we enter the Forty-Sixth Year of our existence with courage and confidence that this shall be the best of those gone by and the worst of those to come.

SINCE Forty-Six Years—each succeeding year bringing forth new notes of harmony and success—The Fair has given to its patrons values—bargains—unequaled, and in many cases unprecedented. Trained, intelligent minds closely and intimately scrutinize the markets of the world, keeping delicate, sensitive fingers on the pulse of business, opportunely striking tremendous bargains with the one object in view—to give the buying public the best values their money can buy. Forty-six years have made us quite expert; forty-six years have taught us many ways, devious and varied, to adroitly purchase and to sell with the principle ever present, of saving money for the American housewife.

During Anniversary Week—the musical novelty of the age. Violins played by electricity. DON'T MISS IT.
On the Main Floor.

ABOUT MAIL AND PHONE ORDERS

In accordance with our policy of extending all possible accommodations to our customers, for those who find it inconvenient to visit the store in person tomorrow we will fill mail orders on all letters bearing Monday's post mark, provided the merchandise lasts throughout the day. WE CAN TAKE NO TELEPHONE ORDERS

Our new Moving Stairway, with a carrying capacity of 75,000 people daily, the most modern in Chicago, is now running from the First to the Seventh Floor—up and down.

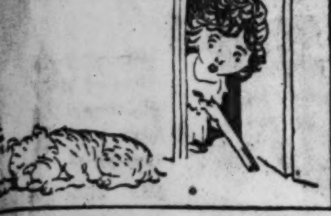
Merely Canine Efforts.

I was a bachelor girl, living in a two room shack on a piece of land I was homesteading in Montana. My nearest neighbor lived one mile away.

One night I had retired as usual about 10 o'clock and near 12 o'clock was aroused by the awfullest snoring coming from my other room. I was thoroughly frightened. As there was no one near to call upon, I knew I had to depend upon myself.



I took my shotgun from the wall, and with shaking knees made for the kitchen. What was my relief to find my neighbor's brindle bulldog stretched out sound asleep and snoring on my kitchen floor. E. W.

Turn About's Fair Play.

One warm summer night all transoms in the hotel run by my husband and me were open. Upon going upstairs late that night we were greeted by a long drawn out snore from room 1. Just as it died away the second note was struck by the party in room 2, and then came the echo, loud and fearless, from room 7. They kept perfect time and snored in such perfect harmony that we had a concert. Heads were sticking out from all adjoining rooms, to find out the cause of the commotion.

The next morning early two young men in room 1 were loudly whistling and singing. Our second player of the night before gruffly called out:

"Can't you fools in there keep still? You're keeping us all awake."

The young men retorted, "Well, you kept us awake all night and now it's our turn," and kept on singing.

At breakfast that morning much hilarity was had over the concert of the night before. D. H.

Under His Ear.

Yes, my husband snores like a planing mill, but I have not been able to convince him of it.

A few nights ago I determined to do something to counteract this nocturnal nuisance, so I secreted an old automobile horn under my pillow and awaited developments. I had not long to wait. Reaching under my pillow, I squeezed the bulb and honked the horn under his ear. He jumped nearly out of bed and I supposed I had wakened him; he stopped snoring for a minute, but settled down again soon and began snoring in a higher key.

"Honk! honk!" went the horn. Again he jumped, turned partly, and after missing two or three beats resumed his snoring.

In desperation I squeezed the bulb three times in succession. He roused himself and in a sleepy, injured tone exclaimed: "For heaven's sake, Julia! You snore so loud I can't get to sleep!" MRS. L.

Slept Like a Log.

This incident happened while camping with three buddies.

The first day had been a hard one. We had a long automobile ride, made camp, gathered wood, and cooked, so that at 9 o'clock I was ready to roll in.

I slept like a log all night, but on awakening was surprised to find myself about 100 yards from camp, in a corn field.

The gang did not appreciate my music, and removed the cause—me, cot, and all. F. J.

The Fall of Empire in Motion-Picture

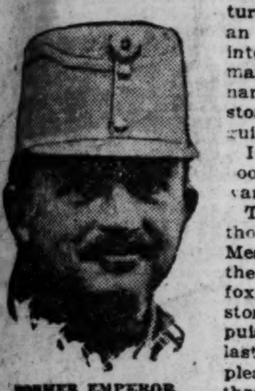
MY MEMOIRS, by Prince Ludwig Windischgraetz; translated by Constance Vesey: octavo, pp. 356; no index. Houghton-Mifflin company, Boston.

God in heaven! They have a special genius for delay.
(On the Austrians.) GEN. VON HINDENBURG.

By Eye Witness.

WOULDST thou learn, then, how empires fall—and why?

'Tis an ancient and familiar tale, fraught with desolation, but in his book Prince Windischgraetz brings it home to the present with terrific force. This man, who barely missed being an adventurer but whom the prickings of an acute conscience developed into a patriot-statesman, is a master of excited and exciting narrative. Mournful as his story is, it likewise is distinguished by unflagging vivacity.



FORMER EMPEROR CHARLES.

It is, perhaps, the honestest book that has come out of the war.

The old story—older than those ruins that sentinel the Mesopotamian plain where now the reptiles bask by day and the foxes bark at night! The old story again of a once proud and puissant people gone languid at last in all save the pursuit of pleasure and their realm shot through and through with the curse of caste.

The pillars of their state rock—and they are luxuriating in hates racial and religious.

Their provinces, which are their life because they are at once hinterland and granary, fall away—and they are solely intent upon the maneuverings of factions which set the immediate success of party above the salvation of the fatherland. They dally and delay. They toy with duty, shrug their shoulders at doom, chattering much and laughing a little about it. Crying, too. Their monarch wept.

Those are the large outlines of the story Prince Windischgraetz tells with copious and damning detail.

Ordered from Throne by Phone.

Then upon this people comes debacle.

Greek drama could not be more implacable, nor melodrama more audacious, than was the instant of the beginning of the end—an instant which this Hungarian magnate was one of five persons to witness.

It is an autumn night of 1918 in the palace of Schönbrunn, the lovely pleasure seat of the Hapsburgs outside their capital. But that park can be very dreary in a November twilight. Andrassy, loyal to the end, and Windischgraetz, young, loyal, resourceful, have been hastily summoned from the foreign office to the palace. The Archduke Max had been their chauffeur from the west station, for even servants had fled the sinking ship.

The emperor-king is listening at the telephone. Only his wife is with him when the archduke and the two ministers enter the study, which is the so-called Gobelin room. In it stands the writing table once used by Napoleon.

On that table stands the telephone at which the last of the Catholic and apostolic majesties is listening.

What more entrancing than these coincidences, these half-ironies of history! Napoleon was avenged for l'aiglon. Austria had reduced his son to a nullity. Now Michael Karolyi's people telephone the heir of the eaglet's jailers to get out.

Charles is now listening, now talking excitedly, to Budapest, which is in revolution. He "beckons violently" to Andrassy and Windischgraetz "to come nearer and look sharp." He tells them that the revolutionary junta is "asking me to abdicate—to renounce the Hungarian throne for myself and my heirs. What shall I do—what answer am I to give?"

Echoing Footfalls—and the End.

Windischgraetz claps his hand over the receiver. Violent conversation between the monarch's two friends in the study and the junta in the Hungarian capital ensues. It comes to nothing. It is the end. Generals, courtiers, props and pillars and parasites all have vanished to their remote estates or have joined the revolution in Hungary. Vienna, too, is on the edge of revolt. To his kingdom Charles cannot go; in his empire he must wait alone. Speaking now of the emperor-king as his (the Hungarian) sovereign solely, and of the state of affairs in the kingdom of Hungary, Windischgraetz says with reticent pathos:

"There was no longer a single place where the king could have spent the night in peace and safety in his own realm. . . . We passed through the vast State apartments, through the long corridors. We went down the wide staircase; no one met us. Our footsteps echoed in the empty rooms."

A Statesman's Solemn Warnings.

Such is the book, vivid and actual, and far more than that. It is statesmanlike admonition in panorama, the fall of empire in motion-picture.

But vivacious as it is, pitilessly revealing as it is, it remains always the book of a statesman and never a collection of the always savory and usually mendacious tidbits of palace gossip. It rustles with the whispers of intrigues and the soft-stepping of courtiers. It echoes the bark of the light artillery in the Carpathian passes and the thunder of the big guns on the Isonzo heights, and it bears again to an accustomed ear the long, moaning roar of street mobs voicing protest and revolt—a sound, reader, chilling the heart while it fires the soul, and never to be forgot. A fearsome sound.

This prince long prophesied that voice, long maneuvered to still it with honest measures of amelioration. He prophesied, he worked, he implored in vain.

He knew everybody, knew conditions, and had a great stake in the right solution of the problems, upon the right solution of which the saving of the realm hung. He knew how far-reaching and fundamental must be the measures of salvation, and he knew the little things, the petty, that ceased to be little and petty when you took them as the signs and symptoms of a degeneracy that had rotted the fabric of empire.

Stealing the Monarch's Coffee.

He, as director of food control, knew how many kilograms of real coffee he was sending the royal household, and when he swallowed the bellywash the king offered him he knew that thieving was going on in the palaces. He knew who were the ruthless usurers and profiteers and what they did, and once he cried out that it would have required a "special anti-corruption minister to contend against them." In crisis after crisis he saw monarch and people befooling themselves with grandiose ceremonial and festival when there was most pressing work to be done and decisions to be made. Everywhere that there was not bustle and costly pleasure there was bitter misery and discontent.

He saw Gen. Boehm at the front and heard him say: "I dislike shaved mustaches, a detestable custom." The prince adds dryly: "Characteristic that the commander of an army, who comes for the first time to visit a corps which has been under fire without intermission for six months, can find nothing else to say."

He heard the "court flunkeys," as he calls them, notify Andrassy in a moment of crisis that he must come to an urgent audience with the king in Hungarian full dress. Andrassy replies: "I have something more important to do now than dress myself up." He had. For the foundations of the monarchy were quaking.

Officers Strip Off Ribbons.

The prince knew that the dabbling and the discussions by the ministerial council and others over the bestowal of privy councilorships, honors, distinctions, and such like trumpery had become so foolish and meaningless, and the awards so unjust, that at the front self-respecting men, from general to youngest cadet, were discarding their ribbons of their own accord. Windischgraetz was one of them.

He knew that Burian was irresponsible, that Wekerle was a soft handed optimist with a flat refrain, "All will come right! Everything will be seen to," that Karolyi was playing a game, at once subtle and desperate, of personal ambition. He used to watch Wekerle as he "screwed holes in the air with a large, fat, acrobatic index finger when speaking, and the more sinuous the curve the more he insisted that in policy the straight road is best."

There are scores of such treasures of blended descrip-

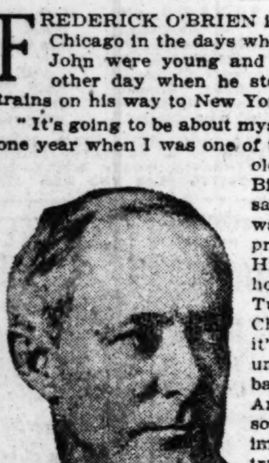
FREDERICK O'BRIEN is going to write a novel about Chicago in the days when Hinky Dink and Bathhouse John were young and eager souls. He said so the other day when he stopped off in Chicago between trains on his way to New York.

"It's going to be about myself and what I did during that one year when I was one of the drifters. It'll be about the old Pacific Garden mission and Billy Sunday's conversion. I saw him stand on his head and wave his feet in the air in the praise of God. It'll be about Hinky Dink's place and Bathhouse's days as a rubber in a Turkish bath. It'll be about a Chicago which is no more. And it'll be about a trip to California under the wheels and the way back with a bunch of tramps. And it will all be true. There's something in me that makes it impossible for me not to write truth."



FREDERICK O'BRIEN.

"So the Mystic Isles is all true?" I asked—that being the question which seems to wreck most readers.

"Yes. If it were not so, I could not have written it."

". . . And are the Polynesian women so beautiful, then?"

"Beautiful? Yes; in their native atmosphere. They are completely right; brown, as they should be in the sun, with skin that glistens, and with a natural grace. They are beautiful to look at, but not to touch, to make love to. They have no soul. I have never made love to a South sea islander in my life—few white men do. The natives think that white men and women are sick because they are so pale, and certainly a white man or woman among them does look unhealthy. As for real beauty, I think that the beautiful American woman is the most beautiful woman in the world, and after her, perhaps, the French woman."

. . . "No, I did not write a book about Samoa, as I had planned. I just loafed in the sunlight and talked to natives who had known Stevenson. I have had an intimate association with the Stevenson legend. The first place I lived in San Francisco was his studio. I found out all I could about him in Hawaii. In Tahiti and the Marquesas I followed his trail. And in Samoa I lived for a while in his house. I have talked with every one who knew him intimately, although, of course, he was gone himself before I reached him."

. . . "The books about the South seas? The trouble is that the tourist never can feel the charm of the islands. The South seas is a state of mind. You must forget all of your ideas of ordinary living. You must be willing to eat bad food (in the cities) and go without your fundamental comforts. You must go alone—not in twos, or threes, or groups. You must want loneliness. If you do, you will see loveliness. I write at least ten letters a day urging people not to go to the South seas. If you want health, you will probably not find it. If you want a job where you can live on nothing a week, you will find neither the job nor the possibility of living on nothing a week. If you want thrills, you will not find them. No tourist can ever know the South seas."

. . . "New York? A month, perhaps two; to Sausalito for a while; and then back to Samoa, where I have built a little house and where I shall live in the sunshine."

"A Couple of Honest Tramps."

[My chief, Miss Butcher—always so kind that she never lets me know that I work for her—sends the following:]

Dear Mr. Eye: This is such a funny picture of Stephen Graham and Vachel Lindsay that I wish we could use it. It's fresh from them and hasn't been used anywhere before. The writing on it is Stephen Graham's. He is visiting Vachel Lindsay in Springfield, but he will be here in Chicago this week with Mrs. William Vaughan Moody and be one of the guests of the Midland Authors at their dinner on Saturday night, so he has a certain appeal aside from his—to me—good literary work. He is a much finer artist than most American readers know, and a protagonist for the under dog—the Russian peasant, the immigrant, the Negro, the private in the guards.

VACHEL LINDSAY.

STEPHEN GRAHAM.

"A couple of honest tramps," wrote Mr. Graham in a big bold hand when he signed this picture on behalf of himself and his host, Mr. Lindsay.

A Man Worth Knowing Better. Few Such.

Stephen Graham is an English author of whom we in America know too little, although nearly all his books have been published here by the Macmillans. He may seem a tilter at windmills, a literary Robin Hood spiritually, but actually he is an ardent champion of the under dog, whether he be the immigrant, the Russian peasant, the American Negro, or the private in the guards. His books are all passionately protagonistic in the sense that whole-souled devotion to any cause which a man feels is right is protagonistic.

Naive U. S. Heroines Seldom Seen in Paris

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—[Special.]—The fate of the French play in America is usually kindly. The fate of the American play in Paris is usually disastrous. A quick deduction would be that we are more elastic in our taste. The reverse is true. We are quite unelastic. We like none but American plays and see none but American plays. We buy, produce, and successfully sell French plays, but not before they have been so devastatingly Americanized that their own authors would not recognize them. Our purveyors of theatrical entertainment are adepts in a form of literary mutilation called "adaptation."

The word "adaptation" covers many processes, from the introduction of "Baby" and "Blue" songs into the scores of Viennese operettas to the larding of the crisp and concise original of "Blue Beard's Eighth Wife" with wordy Broadway witticisms.

The French know no such mechanics. An American play in Paris is translated, no more. It comes to the boulevards as Yankee as it left Broadway. "Peg de Mon Coeur" [the first word, translated into English, is Peg, and you may guess the rest] is playing on the boulevards now and is provoking some amazed comment. "How naive are our American friends," says one French critic, baffled by the marvelous innocence of Hartley Manners' heroine, "that they can find so much joy in this childlike amusement." Judging us by our exported plays, the Frenchman judges us callow and uncouth. The clear eyed virgin, of course, does not interest the French mind as exclusively as it charms ours.

Problems of Piety in "Thank You."

Returning lately to Broadway with a mind somewhat warped, no doubt, by contact with debasing foreign influences, I found a percentage of truth in the foreign estimate of us. It may be the corrupt influence of Paris, but I have to admit that Winchell Smith's "Thank You," for instance—the blushing new success of the Longacre theater—seems terribly, almost indecently, pure. I venture—and you must pardon me a European sophistication of which Mr. Winchell Smith and some of his colleagues will doubtless cure me in a fortnight—surely, I venture again, there is something almost indecent in the glamorous, undefiled decency of all the adults in Mr. Smith's play. I have always thought a fig leaf a most corrupt emblem. It seems extravagant that it should float, a guild banner, at full mast over the majority of our theaters.

WINCHELL SMITH.
[Schwarz Photo.]

Under its flowing folds Mr. Winchell Smith labors in the Longacre to inculcate in us the truth that we'll be happier when we're better.

The final curtain of "Thank You," his and Tom Cushing's new play, falls on so conclusive a demonstration of the rewards of pure, sweet goodness that I am sure that none of us that were there last Monday night will ever again let a day go by without its five minutes of thought for mother, grandmother, and Harold Bell Wright.

In "Thank You" Mr. Smith discusses the problems of piety in the modern life. Piety, in the person of the Rev. David Lee, hero of Mr. Smith's homiletic, is outrageously mistreated by the sneer, the snicker, and the snort, personified in the vestrymen of the Church of St. Mark's in Dedham, Conn.

The reverend's piety goes through one of those Broadway stage New England winters, despised and unrewarded.

The matter of the unreward makes Mr. Smith's most resonant scenes. When the wealthy New Yorker turns up at the end of the second act and bitterly denounces Dedham for starving its pastor on $800 a year the feeling thrilled through the audience that Mr. Smith had hit another bullseye. Indeed, when Actor Frank Monroe vociferated:

"But the Christians right here in America are the damnedest heathens of the lot."

That better half of the audience whose noses proclaimed them Christianity's shrewdest critics rose en masse and cheered.

A large number of characters whom only Mr. Smith could make relevant to his play are involved in the year of Dedham life which he portrays.

There is a Paris niece of the reverend who is played in very nice clothes by Edith King.

Regardless of expense, there are also a nice rich boy and his nice rich pa.

And, of course, the vestrymen are Mr. Smith's meat, the very marrow of the success which doubtless will overwhelm John Golden, the lucky producer, with another inexplicable record run.

The vestrymen run the whole gamut of funny clothes and New England accents. If you appreciated the farm hand in Cohan's "Vagabond," the quaint provincials of "Turn to the Right," or any others of the deathless school of gol durn comics, you cannot be disappointed by a visit to the Longacre.

They are all there.

The Play of the Week.

The week was saved by a play that is all of great.

When I left the National theater Wednesday night—and I hated to leave—Carol Kennicott, with her modish hat askew over tearful eyes, was leaving Gopher Prairie to solve, if possible, the meaning of her desperate cry: "I'm going some place that's fit to live in."

The Gopher Prairie, which was first libeled in Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street," and must now suffer the further indignities of the fine play that Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford have made therefrom, knows itself as a remarkably fine place to live in, with running water and seven miles of cement sidewalk. It has not the giftie gie'n it to see itself as poor, aspiring Carol saw it.

I have not read the Sinclair Lewis novel. If I am to judge by the axiom that good novels make bad plays, the novel must be pretty bad. For the play is very, very good, with one scene in its well planned succession of good scenes so perfect that your waning faith that words and acting are, after all, miracles is instantly revived.

It is the crux of the play, this one scene, and may as well be told at once. Will Kennicott, the young doctor of Gopher Prairie, as ordinary neighbor loving, town boosting mortal as you and I, and his wife, Carol, a sensitive dreamer, are undressing and quarreling.

The snubbing of her ideals which the young wife has suffered from unsympathetic Gopher Prairie is turning into doubt of her husband in Carol's embittered mind. The doctor's idea's are good sleep and good breakfasts.

To the pitifully ridiculous accompaniment of the nightly toothbrush and wool pajamas the clash of the two ideals develops—to the point where the exasperated Carol accuses her patient spouse of the mental cowardices which are the town vice.

Then the telephone bell rings. The doctor is called out into a blizzard to make his way over a washed-out road to the scene of an accident, and takes his task with the heroic stoicism which, we are told, is the common quality of all country doctors.

The wife accepts this answer to her charge of cowardice, acknowledges her libel, and scurries to make hot coffee.

The scene has that final perfection of good theater writing—it is fair. You know the woman is right, but you also know that the man is not wrong. Out of it there develops logically and swiftly the final acts. There can be none but a tragic solution to Carol's dilemma in "Main Street."

Having failed to see the last act, I cannot swear that there is not a happy ending. I can only hope there isn't.

I hope that there was no ending. The very best and the very worst plays have no endings.

The last curtain of "Main Street" must inevitably fall with the problem of how this unpoised world is to contain both poets and brokers without accident still unsolved, and it must give you that supreme enjoyment of the theater—the thrill of afterthought, which is to the good play what the aftertaste is to good wine.

The acting is worthy the piece. Alma Tell, who always concealed about her an indication that she was about to become an acting personage, reveals the personage in several moments of breath taking beauty. It is a beauty of sincerity which concedes nothing to her beauty of person.

McKay Morris, the doctor, works stealthily and masterfully at the building up of a person which, at the end of the play, is, in his hands, an epitome and a large symbol, as the writers intended it should be, of that commonplace hero, the husband. And the remainder of the cast can be tearfully thanked for that they resisted that impulse—it must have been an almost irresistible one—to make of the inhabitants of Gopher Prairie a stageful of hick comics.

"Main Street" is one play in town in which beards and Sears & Roebuck clothes are not all of the acting.

"Lilies of the Field"

Women in herds have something of the qualities of anything else—cows, elephants, gnus, or men—in herds. They are uniform, nervous, messy, and not a little bit dull. Mr. William Hurlbut's "Lilies of the Field" in the Klaw theater is a somewhat incoherent dramatization of a feminine mob.

It might be possible for a gallant critic to pardon Mr. Hurlbut the indifferent generosity with which he lavishes ladies on his cast. But it is quite

Mr. De Lamarter Is Thanked for a New Musical Idea

By Edward Moore

ERIC DE LAMARTER has evolved an idea in the way of a new form of musical entertainment. At this distance it looks like a real one, one of the best to have appeared in the last half dozen years.

ERIC DE LAMARTER

In the fewest possible terms, it involves the formation of what is now being called the Chicago Solo orchestra. This is an organization small in numbers by the side of a modern symphony orchestra, but with a wealth of possibilities that the symphony orchestra cannot undertake.

Twenty-three instruments will make up the organization. Fourteen will be strings, one each of the woodwinds will be called upon; there will be two horns, one trumpet, one trombone, and one general percussion player. All will be members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Upon occasion a piano, a harp, or a celesta can be added for extra effects.

The history of the idea is interesting. Those in touch with orchestral matters know that the cost of a symphony orchestra today is startling compared to what it was only a few years ago. The salaries paid to symphony players have gone straight up into the air; hall rents have nearly doubled; railroad fares have ascended until the cost of moving an orchestra from one city to the next is by no means to be approached in a frivolous or light minded attitude.

With orchestral managers racking their brains to keep down all except the most necessary expenses of their organizations, the outlook was not always bright for new compositions. It was a case where nineteen out of twenty composers would have thrown up their hands, retired to the mourners' bench, and spent the next few years in adding their voices to a lachrymose dirge with a burden to the general effect that the American composer has no chance and the foreigner gets all the rewards. Judging by the communications that reach this desk, nineteen out of twenty American composers have already done so.

Did Mr. De Lamarter join the wailers? He did not. He worked out the idea of the solo orchestra.

The difficulty with the idea, as he admits, is that, being new, it will not be well understood. Perhaps the best way is to back into it by telling what it is not.

It is not a small orchestra in the general sense of the term. That is, it will not play music written for a full sized organization; such a course would have thin and unsatisfactory results. Neither is it a chamber music organization; it is far more flexible, colorful, and sonorous than that.

The Chicago Solo orchestra will play music that is written for an orchestra of that size, and there is quite a mass of it. Mr. De Lamarter has some of his own; Leo Sowerby has promised some novelties; David Stanley Smith has completed a whole symphony in the format; European composers have done a number of things. Besides all these, there is an enormous mass of classical music, written at the time when orchestras and halls were small. A great deal of it is never heard nowadays because the big orchestras and big halls cannot make it sound as it was intended.

The new orchestra has great possibilities. Economically it can take music into places that cannot afford the larger organizations; artistically it can bring a new kind of music into hearing. What is lost in sheer weight of tone will be compensated in increased delicacy and flexibility.

The plan has the hearty indorsement of Frederick Stock, conductor, and Frederick J. Wessels, manager of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, of which Mr. De Lamarter is assistant conductor. Several concerts will be heard during the winter in some of the loop theaters, and a spring tour is being organized.

Mr. De Lamarter invites aspiring

Our Great Indoor Pastime: Keep the Showmen Guessing

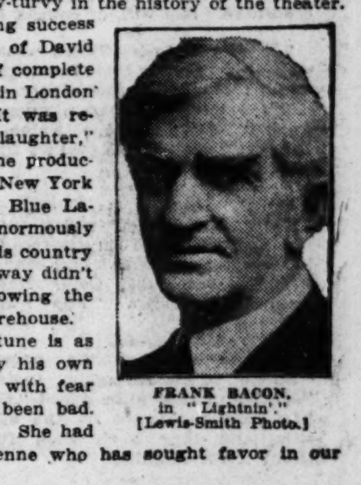
By Sheppard Butler.

THEATRICAL producers are the world's greatest gamblers. They have to be, for in the world of business theirs is a unique position, not to say predicament. They have no premises to guide them. Years of experience mean little or nothing. The best they can do is guess.

If you are a manufacturer and propose, say, a new kind of soap, you know in advance just about what you can do. The merit of the article is predetermined by what goes into it. And you may be reasonably sure that with a little advertising you can drum up a little trade, and that with a great deal of advertising your patronage will be approximately as large as you can handle. Successful merchandising is largely a matter of knowing one's market.

But the investor in plays never knows his market. Of all mortals that inhabit this earth, those who attend the theaters are the most inscrutable. The public likes this entertainment and does not like that one, and its verdict is certain and irrevocable, but no man can say in advance what it will be. You would suppose that a lifetime devoted to the selection and staging of plays would bring wisdom; yet the veterans among the producers are continually putting their money into failures and turning their backs upon undertakings which in other hands have proved thumping successes. It is the outstanding phenomenon of stageland, and the showman's motto is: "You never can tell."

Never was this more strikingly exemplified than in the present season, looked upon everywhere as the most topsy-turvy in the history of the theater. If any name is synonymous with unerring success on the stage, it is, you would say, that of David Belasco. Yet the cables told last week of complete disaster to his play, "Timothy," produced in London with Cyril Maude in its leading rôle. It was received, say the reports, "with derisive laughter," and the verdict of the critics was that the production was "almost unbelievably poor." In New York a like calamity has just befallen "The Blue Lagoon," a spectacular affair which was enormously popular in England and was brought to this country with every prospect of prosperity. Broadway didn't like it, and after an incredibly brief showing the costly production has been sent to the storehouse.



FRANK BACON,
in "Lightnin'."
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

On the other hand, the smile of fortune is as whimsical as its frown. Morris Gest, by his own confession, brought "Afgar" to Chicago with fear and trembling. Business elsewhere had been bad. Mlle. Delysia, the star, was apprehensive. She had met Mlle. Irene Bordoni, another Parisienne who has sought favor in our midst, and the Bordoni had warned her:

"Stay away from Chicago. It is cold. They were indifferent to me when I played there in 'As You Were.' [We didn't show any great enthusiasm, if you remember.] They understand nothing from Paris, and they will not understand you."

Well, "Afgar" has proved to be what they call an overnight triumph. The Studebaker is thronged at every performance, and the audiences, far from being cold, are wildly enthusiastic. Mr. Gest was wrong, and so was Mlle. Bordoni.

Again, much worriment is felt by the managers as to which theater shall be assigned their entertainments in Chicago. Randolph street and its environs are the precincts most sought after. Other locations are looked upon as handicaps, and banishment thither has been a frequent omen of failure.

But here, too, all the rules and precedents are being violated. The least accessible of the downtown playhouses houses the town's greatest success. At the faraway Blackstone, they say, Frank Bacon and "Lightnin'" have not played to a single unsold seat on any night since their arrival in Chicago.

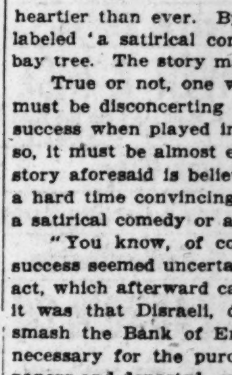
The Gentle Art of Kidding Plays into Popularity.

And so it goes. The public does as it jolly well pleases, and seldom can anything be done to guide its likes and dislikes. Still, they sometimes manage a bit of maneuvering. One device which has found favor in recent seasons is that of kidding a play into popularity.

The origin of "The Tavern," of course, is familiar—an outrageous melodrama by an amateur which Mr. Cohan molded nearer to his heart's desire by making it the whimsical thing it was when we saw it at the Grand. But do you know the legend which clings to "The Bad Man," the Porter Emerson Browne comedy through which Mr. Blinn romps so gloriously at the Princess?

I do not vouch for the tale, and I have not heard it in Chicago. Alexander Woollcott, who writes pieces for the papers in the east, is my authority, and he narrates it thus:

"Here was a blood-curdling melodrama of the Mexican border intended to give you gooseflesh. However, when it was tried out in the provinces the audiences, instead of quaking as desired, gave way to immoderate laughter. Whereupon the crafty Holbrook Blinn, gathering the agitated company about him, announced that as far as he was concerned the melodrama had been turned into a comedy and would be so played by him from that moment until the crack of doom. That night he was as good as his word and the laughter was heartier than ever. By the time the piece reached Broadway it was proudly labeled 'a satirical comedy' and as such flourished all year like the green bay tree. The story may be true."



MISS LEAH PECK

True or not, one wonders what Mr. Browne, the author, thinks of it. It must be disconcerting to write a play in a serious vein and have it prove a success when played in a mood of laughter. And even if you have not done so, it must be almost equally disconcerting to have folks think you did. The story aforesaid is believed, by some, and Mr. Browne probably would have a hard time convincing the believers that he intended "The Bad Man" to be a satirical comedy or anything like it.

"You know, of course, what happened to "Disraeli" in Chicago. Its success seemed uncertain when George Arliss first played it here, and its third act, which afterward came to be famous, left its audiences uninterested. Here it was that Disraeli, desperately bidding for the Suez canal, threatened to smash the Bank of England unless its president would advance the money necessary for the purchase. In the original version the banker signed the papers and departed, saying: "It is a fearful thing for any man to have such power as you have." And nobody seemed excited.

Then, one day, somebody did some tinkering. That night the banker left the stage in silence and the ingénue of the cast piped up:

"O, Mr. Disraeli, I didn't know you had such power."

"I haven't, my dear," Disraeli replied, quietly, "but he doesn't know that."

The twist made all the difference. There was thundering applause, and the play's success was assured. So much will a timely afterthought do for an ailing drama.

Here and There in the Theaters.

Illustrious names in the varieties this week—perhaps a belated manifestation of the "vaudeville war" which was predicted when the Shuberts entered the field last month.

To the Apollo comes Miss Alexandra Carlisle, the English actress who was best known in this country for her performances of "The Country Cousin" and "The Mollusc" until she got into the political limelight by helping nominate Calvin Coolidge for vice president at the Coliseum. She will play Lawrence Rising's little Pullman car comedy, "It Can Be Done," which was first acted here by Holbrook Blinn in his repertory venture at the Princess some years ago. With her in the skit will be Harry Corson Clarke, a veteran of the theater, who is noted as a globe trotter, having circled the world no less than four times in an amazing variety of plays.

At the Majestic Miss Dorothy Jardon, one of the Chicago opera's prima donnas of last year, will lift up her voice in song, and at the Palace the ceremonies will be dominated by Miss Mary Boland, the alluring player whom you will remember as John Drew's leading woman in several plays at Powers.'

William Gillette will return to the stage soon in a play of his own writing, which he calls "The Dream Maker," and which he has taken from a story by Howard L. Morton. The scenes are laid in an American summer resort, and the action is reported to be alternately humorous and sad. The actor has not been behind the footlights since he finished with Barrie's "Dear Brutus" two years ago.

Mr. Ziegfeld's beneficence in announcing a reduced scale of prices for the "Follies" finds an echo in the views of William Harris Jr. anent the taxes which have been placed of late on the playgoer's pocketbook. Says Mr. Harris: "High prices are hurting the theater—hurting more than the managers realize. I meet a great many people who are not of the theater, and I talk to them. I hear what they think. And I hear from them all that they and their employés—and that is the big thing—have come to feel that $5 is the most they will pay for two seats for any play. And, since all other commodities are coming down, why not theater tickets?"

"Midnight Rounders" prospers at the Garrick, and therefore it is likely that we shall not see the "Greenwich Village Follies" at that playhouse on Oct. 31, as originally planned. If Mr. Cantor overstays his appointed time, as he thinks he will, the Greenwich Village show may be routed into another theater.

Willard Mack, author of "Kick In," "Tiger Rose," and what not, has been rusticating up near Calgary, but he has not been idle. He has on his desk three new plays—"The Maple Leaf Man," something about the northwest mounted police, which is to have a tryout in Los Angeles this month; "Sunny-san," dramatized from the manuscript of a new novel by Onoto Watanna, and a third as yet unnamed. "Sunny-san" is the first work to be produced by the author of "A Japanese Nightingale" in five years. It will be published in the spring in New York.

"Pomander Walk," Louis N. Parker's famous comedy of five little houses on the Thames, is to be fixed up as a musical entertainment. Hugo Felix is writing the music.

Miss Irene Castle will return to the variety stage next month, after an absence of six years in the movies and elsewhere. She will, of course, dance.

"Kiki," the Andre Picard comedy in which Miss Lenore Ulric is said to have found the greatest rôle of her career, has been revived in Paris, where they knew it years ago. Mlle. Spinelly has the part played in this country by Miss Ulric.

O. P. Heggie is through with "Happy Go Lucky," which they did not patronize well on the road, and has begun rehearsing a new comedy by Frank Mandel and Oscar Hammerstein, the younger. "Pop" is the name of it.

They've changed the name of "Mecca" in London again. Instead of "Ali Shar" it is to be called "Cairo." The censor objected to the original title, and they have been fussing about it for months.

Lowell Sherman's hurried trip to New York following the much discussed Arbuckle party at the other end of the continent was, it transpires, purely a matter of business. The actor, whom you remember in "The Tavern," is to play one of the principal rôles in "The Reckoning," the Marjorie Chase play which Eugene Walter is rewriting and which will have a new title, probably "Cash on Account." Sherman is through with the movies for the present, they say.

"Town Gossip," Ned Wayburn's first venture as a producer on his own account, stranded in Boston last week, and the Actors' Equity had to step in with funds to pay what the actors owed and get them back to New York. Wayburn, it is said, is going back to his work as a stage director.

"The Bat," according to its sponsors, holds a unique record in New York. The play, they say, has been reviewed at least twice by every critic in the city.

"The Speckled Band," most gruesome of the Sherlock Holmes thrillers, has been revived in London, and, they say, the Britishers like it better than ever.

E. M. Newman, the picture talker, begins his season at Orchestra hall this week, discussing "Alaska" on Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon. . . . The Theater Guild of Chicago will inaugurate its year's work tonight by presenting Rutherford Mayne's "The Turn of the Road" at the Chicago Hebrew institute. . . . The newly organized French theater of Chicago announces the return from Paris of Mme. Mercedes Devries-Schmit with many plays, new and old, for its use during the year. The first—De Flers nad De Caillavet's "L'Amour Veille," played in this country under the title "Love Watches"—will be acted in Kimball hall on Oct. 18.

From this morning's New York Times:

The Shuberts, it appears, are going in for best sellers. With "Main Street" off their hands, they will turn attention to "The Sheik," one of the most popular novels of the day.

William Harris is said to have ambitious plans for Fay Bainter, and that actress will be seen either in a Shakespearean play or in one of the classic comedies when her season's tour in "East Is West" is ended.

"Chickens," instead of "The Little White House," is the name of the musical comedy that the authors of "Irene" have written. It will open in Washington Saturday night.

Miss Elsie Janis is rehearsing her revue—a production not dissimilar to her soldier show of a few seasons ago.

Walter Hampden, now well established as a Shakespearean star, began his tour at Northampton yesterday—and, thanks to Smith college, with two houses sold out in advance, Mr. Hampden has mapped out a terrific tour—south to New Orleans, west to the coast, and even a dip into western Canada.

"Artists' Life," by Samuel Merwin and Peggy Wood, will come to New York for a cast change, and probably will be a Broadway attraction in another three weeks. It is a tale of the Paris studios, with Miss Wood as an American girl in their midst.

GALLI-CURCI created the biggest sensation the world has ever known right here at the Auditorium Theatre.

She electrified Chicago and thrilled the whole world. Not since that date has any artist created such a sensation in taking a city by storm until ALICE DELYSIA arrived, in "Afgar" with Lupino Lane, at the Studebaker.

Did You Ever Read Such Criticisms?

"Naughty, but nice. Delysia is a ravishing figure of gold and ivory, and her audacity knows no bounds."—SHEPPARD BUTLER, Chicago Tribune.

"Delysia makes love to you where you sit—and makes your wife like it. And Lupino Lane is like a young and English Fred Stone."—ASHTON STEVENS, Chicago Herald-Examiner.

"Delysia is a glorious creature with all the talents one finds in the theatre. The costumal riches of 'Afgar' beggar description. There is imagination in every line; every fold charms the eye."—O. L. HALL, Chicago Journal.

"Delysia takes city by storm in 'Afgar'. Deserves long run."—Chicago Evening American.

"Alice Delysia is delicious in a new audacity. Sensuous thrills are assured the followers of 'Afgar.' Hit last night at Studebaker was sensational."—AMY LESLIE, Chicago News.

"Afgar," with Alice Delysia and Lupino Lane, is the greatest musical comedy sensation we have ever produced. With Paul Poiret's costuming creations, the latest from Paris, it is thrillingly beautiful and gorgeously artistic. Alice Delysia, Lupino Lane and "Afgar" are bound to be your dinner-table conversation.

By Mae Tinée.

It may be in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
Some time, some day we'll understand.
—Old Hymn.

If you go to see this picture, let me tell you that you are about to witness much suffering. And the pain is not endured by a lot of low lifes whose villainy might perhaps merit it. Most of the anguish falls to the lot of the beautiful Miss Clayton, whose mother appears from out the spirit world and directs her in the way she should go. It proves a rough and stony road for the daughter.

The plot is not at all an involved one. Its inner workings need not be revealed unto you—so many of you object so strenuously to being told a thing or two now and then. Just to get you all excited, though, I'm going to be nasty and let leak out the fact that Miss Clayton as the beautiful Mrs. Geoffrey Southerne is thought dead by the husband she adores, who later marries another woman. The real Mrs. Southerne, understand, is still living. Worse, she knows of this second marriage.

(Now guess you wish I'd go ahead and tell you what, if anything, happens to the second wife! Nothing doing! See the picture for yourselves.)

The one person in the cast of whom I am sure you're fond is Miss Clayton. Sometimes we like Charles Meredith—sometimes we don't. As for myself this time—we don't.

Earl Schenck, in the rôle of a weak but beloved brother, is likable; Fontaine La Rue as the appearing and disappearing mother, is fine, and, while Charles French hasn't a great deal to do, he does his little well. Spottiswoode Aitken gives me the willies!

"Beyond" has the advantages of careful technical supervision. Whether it makes a hit with you, however, depends entirely on you yourselves—and you, my dears—well, my dears—I confess the more I know you the less I know about you!

CLOSEUPS

"Brittle" is the name of the play in which May Marsh will appear on the speaking stage. It is said to be a quaint conceit that provides great opportunity for that "saddest face on the screen" to bring its pathos home to "legitimate" audiences.

Cecil de Mille, by way of relaxation, has been doing a little bear hunting.

Byron Hawley, the young automobile man who rejoices in the fact that he is Wanda Hawley's husband, gave a birthday party recently to his blonde wife. Nobody seems to know just which birthday the party celebrated.

Speaking of birthday parties, May Allison—recently married to Robert Ellis—entertained at a birthday party for her niece from Birmingham, Ala. Most of the small Hollywood sons and daughters of famous people were there, including William Wallace Reid Jr., Marshall Neilan Jr., and Mary Pickford the second—Lottie Pickford's daughter.

It is prophesied that Enid Bennett will return to the screen as soon as she is able to leave that small new daughter of hers. The daughter's name is Enid Bennett Niblo, and she was born in Los Angeles several weeks ago.

William Jennings Bryan has a daughter who is a moving picture director. Rumor has it that dad, having looked upon her work and thought it good, has decided that he will take a flyer in a film before long. They say he wants to do a reformation subject! Well, our feelings have been hurt so much it's not possible to hurt them any more.

Dustin Farnum, who has been having a busy season as commodore of the Los Angeles Yacht club, is back with the Fox company.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

P. J. K.: Personal reply follows. You seem in a hurry, though, so I hasten to tell you that at the present moment I know of no demand for "a man to jump from an airship with a parachute and come down head first hanging by my toes." We'll bear you in mind, however, and our prayers will be yours if you land the job. T'wakkum!

I HOO NOSE: You've been reading Freud—that's what you've been doing! Only a psycho-analyst would deduct from Rod La Rocque's expression in "Life" that he was bearing up under the disappointment of not receiving the part of Julie Desheyers in "The Four Horsemen." "You're pretty deep, I'll say—but I'm crazy about the words you use."

LORRAINE L.: Glad to have heard from you. We can't print the picture this Sunday, but we'll try to soon. Address Lillian Gish, in care of Griffith, Mamaroneck, N. Y. Yes, Miss Hawley is lovely. Write again some time. Please?

G. S.: Well, now I ask you! What did you think of "Camille"?

FLORENCE: "Shame of Society" is the name of Thomas Walsh's first independent production.

THE WHITE DUKE: You meant duck, didn't you? Yes, I'll say you're clever. No, you're all wrong. Wasn't in a picture some months ago. You say you are neither writing a scenario nor do you think you would make a good movie actor. You interest us strangely!

M[illegible]E.: Perhaps if you'd tell Ethel Clayton how much you object to "these leading men who act as though they were born in Alaska or had ice water in their veins in place of blood" she'd hustle forth and get her a flaming Spaniard or Mexican or Moor or something of the sort. Miss Clayton is a widow. The first part of your question was answered in last Sunday's paper.

The New Plays

OPENING TONIGHT.

Illinois—George White's "Scandals," edition of 1921, the third of the series and, they say, the most sumptuous of these characteristic revues. The long list of entertainers includes Ann Pennington, Aunt Jemima, Lou Holtz, Olive Vaughn, Lester Allen, George Le Maire, George Bickel, White himself, and many others.

Auditorium—"Frolics of 1921," an entertainment especially staged by Ernie Young, a local impresario, for the annual performances sponsored by the Policemen's Benefit association.

IMPENDING JOYS.

Oct. 16.—At the Olympic, Barney Bernard in "Two Blocks Away," a new comedy by Aaron Hoffman. Edna Hibbard, Alice Endres, John Rutherford, and various others will be in the cast.

Oct. 16—At the La Salle, William Courtenay and Miss Lola Fisher in the Roi Cooper Megrue comedy called "Honors Are Even." The cast includes Paul Kelly, Horace Sinclair, Eleanor Woodruff, and Mabel Stanton.

Oct. 17—At the Playhouse, Zona Gale's "Miss Lulu Bett," with Miss Carroll McComas as its chief player.

Oct. 24—At the Cort, Miss Francine Larrimore in "Nice People," a comedy by Rachel Crothers.

Nov. 13—At the Princess, Miss Madge Kennedy in "Cornered."

MY FAVORITE on Stage and Screen

Who is your favorite actor or actress on screen or stage, and why? Take your pen in hand, name your favorite, and tell why in 100 words or less, writing on one side of the paper only. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published. No manuscripts returned. Address "Actors," The Tribune, Chicago.

To Jane Cowl.

She's a wee bit o' Irish
With soft twilight eyes,
And hair like the dusk o' the night.

Lips like the rose
That blooms crimson in June,
Throat that is velvet and white.

And holds such a voice
That the sweet beauty of it—
Like the wee winds that sing in the dawn.

Holds my heart willing captive
Within its soft meshes
Of laughter, O wee Colleen-bawn.

For the heart o' her laughs
Through her voice like soft bird notes,
Borne on the dawn winds to me.

And the heart o' me, hearing,
Goes bravely to singing
And smiling through fair Jane Machree.

It's Romance They Want.

Herbert Rawlinson is my favorite screen actor because he has a sincere and sympathetic personality and a dramatic ability that gives life and romance to every character he portrays. Mr. Rawlinson's "Passersby" was wonderful. His work in the Flynn series made these true stories as fine and interesting as any romance. And, after all, it is romance we seek when we would forget our own worries for one short hour. Here is hoping we will see Mr. Rawlinson often in pictures and as a star. N M. P.

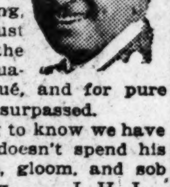
The Essence of Youth.

Richard Barthelmess is my favorite movie artist. For one thing, he is attractive without being effeminately good looking. He is the essence of youth, and he casts a romantic youthful glamour about every rôle he's given. Most fortunate of all, he is keenly sensitive; he never overacts. He plays a rôle of sentiment without becoming sentimental or maudlin. His producer has given him some severe trials in this respect, but whether he be a Mexican bandit, a beach comber, a rustic lover, or any number of other things, he always acquits himself well. M. E. G.

Versatile.

Mary Pickford is my favorite actress of the screen. I admire her for her versatility. She has some of the humility and artistic wistfulness that make Lillian Gish so unusual, with the intensity of Constance Talmadge and the personal charm of Norma—and that radiant smile all her own. Somehow, I always go away from her pictures—alas, they're all too few—cheered up, lifted, and happy. I. L. S.

Here's to Doug!



Douglas Fairbanks gives me more pleasure than any other actor. His acting is delightful, and although it is not what is known as "emotional," it has decidedly a moving quality.

His plays are always brisk, clean, exciting, and funny, with just the right touch of the extravagant. The situations are never risqué, and for pure fun his plays are unsurpassed.

It is most gratifying to know we have among us one who doesn't spend his time picturing crime, gloom, and sob stuff. Here's to Doug. J. H. J.

MISS ANN ANDREWS
In "The Champion"—Cort
[Hill Photo.]

She Was "Irene."

Do you remember that happy little fairylike creature who played "Irene"? She seemed to have such a good time as she danced, sang and flirted. She was so funny and dear with her brogue and her working girl's clothes. And when she donned her "Alice blue gown"—then she was perfect. I think that Helen Shipman as Irene O'Dare completely captivated every one who saw her. A. A. K.

This advertisement is made from memoranda given to the manager by one of the guests.

Memorandum No. 3—

"The Monterey made a particular appeal to me because of its unusual freedom from hotel atmosphere. There is no ballroom, no roof garden, no cafe, no public lounging rooms.

"It is essentially a home where every comfort and convenience is for the exclusive use of resident guests and their friends."

In points of location, service appointments, furnishings, quietness and clientele there is none better. In the matter of price there is none fairer.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Regard, Sirs, The Poise of an Ancient Family

By Mme. X.

DID you ever hear of the Croy family of Belgium? It is a princely stock and one of the most ancient and aristocratic of Europe. In the fiercely democratic light of day which beats upon would seem to the average American high and low the Croy family still shines with a luster that has a quite special charm to the student of humanity.

One of the chief bulwarks of the family tradition is a poise which, if one is a real Croy, nothing can disturb. In the vernacular, "you can't knock a Croy off his or her perch."

It is the custom of the sons of Croy when they marry to give to each bride who enters the house of Croy a bracelet with these words set in diamonds: "Du Calme." These are a constant reminder—for the bride is supposed to wear this bracelet even more devotedly than she does the wedding ring—of what is expected of every member of the family. A genuine Croy never is flustered, never is excited, never is angry, never exaggerates, never is embarrassed. In short, a genuine Croy would seem to the average American an impossible mass of imperturbable serenity.

The writer once met such a Prince Croy who came up to the family standard, although he was at that period having a hard time, and his cuffs and collar were frayed and his trousers slightly fringed. Yet his manner was the perfectly simple, gentle manner characteristic of the highest breeding the world over.

Phrases That Are Threadbare.

The Croys are my text today. Perhaps it is an inevitable manifestation of our youth that we Americans are so over enthusiastic, so eager, so given to hyperbole. Our simplest, every day speech is full of this tendency to exaggeration. In social parlance this trait finds it supremest expression.

Unless you tell your hostess that her party was the "grandest party of the season," or that you never had such a good time in your life, you sound feebly unappreciative. Unless you exclaim on meeting a friend after a summer's absence that he or she is looking "just splendid," and that you "have been just dying to see" him or her, you seem apathetic and uninterested in the chorus of greetings shed around the reunions now taking place.

The most worn out word, however, is "wonderful." "You are wonderful" is one of the commonest phrases used to cover up a perilous pause in conversation. The lover murmurs it to his fair one. So does the debutante to her co-deb. The casual acquaintance utters it to some chance met mortal. The nine letters are fairly worn out and hate to meet each other any more in the sequence necessary to form the now utterly exhausted three syllabled word.

Only a few living people can really excite our wonder. The Polish boy of 15 who can play twenty games of chess at a time and win them all—he can arouse our wonder. So, in a lesser degree, can the man who flew up to over eight miles above the earth. The surgeon who successfully transplants a monkey's gland into a live human being's body also can rightly be called wonderful. But the term certainly does not apply to the average person, on whom it is so often bestowed. It is a pity so to use up adjectives that when a real opportunity comes to employ them we have to search, generally in vain, to find some adequate terminology.

All He Could Find to Say.

You remember the story of the man who returned to his home in the country to find it burned to the ground together with his wife, six children, father, mother, and all his worldly possessions. Gazing on the scene of desolation, he could only murmur, "How perfectly ridiculous!" The misuse of the English language had deprived him of all the other words with which to express his feelings.

Occasionally one meets a fellow being whose restrained expression of thoughts and opinions stands out in delightful relief against our daily diet of hyperbole in a manner to mark him or her as apart from and superior to the usual orgy of over expression. Don't you generally find that whatever such a one says receives more than customary attention?

Would it be possible, do you think, to start a movement to restrain our language to the exact measure of our thought's intention? Would it make our conversation dull and colorless? I think that what was once amusing in exaggeration has become flat, stale and unprofitable. It would remove from us a slightly simian effect which our exuberance now earns us in the eyes of older peoples.

We are not utterly unlike young puppies who bark and wag their tails frantically at the slightest sign of recognition from superior beings. Is it not time that we learned restraint and a sense of proportion?

* *

The Garrulous and the Curt.

Can we get along without such words as splendid, wonderful, and marvelous or such phrases as "the nicest ever was," "don't you love it?" and "I nearly died laughing"?

Nevertheless, I would not have us so cruelly unresponsive and inexpressive as the English would seem to be, to judge from the following tale told by an American traveling from Liverpool to London: The American had sufficient experience in travel in the British isles to enter a compartment in which he found another passenger sitting without making any acknowledgment of the latter's presence. At an intermediate station a young man got in, saying merely, to the air as it were, "Good morning!" No response was forthcoming from either of the other two passengers. The latest arrival vouchsafed nothing more until he alighted a little further on, when he merely remarked, "Good day!" The Britisher from behind his Times growled, "Chatty beast!"

It is hard on hearing such an incident not to emulate the Pharisee and thank God that we are not like that. But we do not need to go to the other extreme in continuous and hyperbolic speech in order to avoid the curt brevity of the above mentioned Britisher. It would even be better to bark and wag our tails continuously than to growl and snap, but there is a "juste milieu" which is not unattainable.

The Town House Attracts.

Society is assembling somewhat earlier than usual, I think. The Potter Palmers are settling down in the big Palmer mansion. Mrs. Harold McCormick is unpacking her things in the family residence on the corner of the Lake Shore drive and Bellevue place. Opposite her the John Bordens are doing likewise.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker are established in their home north of Lincoln park. Their youngest daughter, Miss Mary Meeker, has joined her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Cramer, in Paris, while young Arthur Meeker, who spent the summer with the Cramers, has returned to enter Princeton university. This leaves the big Georgian house on the Lake Shore drive rather empty for the parents. It would not be surprising if they were to flit to some gentler clime after a short season here.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney are planning to do this after Christmas. They will close their Lake Forest place Nov. 1 and come in town to the Ambassador for the time between that date and their sailing time in January.

Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman has for some time been at home at her Rush street residence. She will take little or no part in social doings this winter on account of the death of her father, Joseph Wilkins, last summer. She is taking a rest cure at home just now and later will devote herself to furthering the interests of the Red, White and Blue club, an enterprise for the benefit of some of our Polish and Russian children which she has long been active in supporting.

Mrs. Brewster in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster are much interested in decorating and furnishing their new apartment at 232 East Walton place. Mrs. Brewster went east last week, ostensibly to attend a garden club meeting of some kind in Philadelphia, but, as New York is part of her itinerary, it seems probable that there are pleasures less bucolic than gardens on her program, though real gardeners think there is nothing more stimulating than a powwow on the topic of how to plant and transplant.

The Brewsters will have as neighbors under the same roof when they are settled in town Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell Jr. (Miss Lolita Armour), Mr. and Mrs. Perry Shepard, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutchinson, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Willing. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kales, who also have an apartment in the same building, are renting it this winter. Mrs. Kales is already in Europe with her two daughters, and Mr. Kales plans to join her there in January.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is returning to Chicago late in October. She is going to take her niece, Miss Sophie Norris of Philadelphia, to Colorado Springs before settling herself down here. Her son, "Jack" Ryerson, and his friend, W. E. D. Stokes Jr. (better known as "Billy" Stokes), are at present keeping house in the charming Ryerson residence in Lake View avenue. The squash court there is a great and popular feature among the younger contingent of Chicago.

The Adler Touch Again.

Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank will soon move in town from their Lake Geneva place. They are to have some new neighbors in the David Adlers who have bought from the Fairbanks the house to the north of the latter's State street home. This Mr. Adler is planning to remodel. He is sure to make it one of the most attractive abodes in Chicago. Whatever Mr. Adler touches becomes transformed into something chic and desirable.

A few years ago he took a plain and weatherworn village cottage on the main highway on the northern edge of Libertyville, and, as if by magic, turned it into a delectable, sophisticated French farmhouse. Its plaster exterior, pointed tower, little formal gardens, its gabled roofs and eke its covered well with its workable pump (somehow one does not expect a workable pump in so delicious a French farm), and the blue of its garage doors all combine to make it a domain to be desired more than the finest palace in the land. Set, as it is, not far from the township's poorhouse and in the rather unkempt fields of that countryside, it looks rather like a Parisian grand dame at a county fair.

The house wise will watch with interest to see what Mr. Adler will make out of his new purchase. The white stone of the outside, Illinois lime, to be exact, is one of the most effective of building materials to be had hereabouts. It has the unusual quality of always keeping its surface white—a soft, creamy, slightly golden white—through our sootiest seasons. This is explained by the sapient as being due to the fact that this same surface is so friable that as the soot sinks in it disintegrates the limestone, which thereupon sloughs off, thus always presenting a fresh outside to winds and rains. Be that how it may, those buildings composed of it, like the waterworks tower, St. James' Episcopal church, the Catholic cathedral, and certain blocks of houses in West Washington boulevard, have stood many a year and look capable of enduring some years longer before wearing through.

The Adlers expect their house to be ready for occupancy by December, which only shows a beautiful optimism on their part, as nothing ever is finished as soon as one expects it to be nowadays.

Interest in the Drama.

With the Casino open, and apparently filling a long felt want, and the Arts club also in running order and daily crowded with gay lunchers (picture collections are coming later), it looks as if society were already tooting its horn to announce that every one must hurry to get on the coach or be left behind.

But all social activities are not the sole possession of townsfolk. Out on the north shore they do not intend to be snowed in with no resources except those of winter sports and candy pulls. There is a project taking shape and form—to wit: an organization to be known as the North Shore Theater guild. Its aim is to "produce good plays and produce them well"; thereby to further and hold the interest in the drama. Its promoters disclaim all desire to be considered as "uplifters of the drama." They are hoping to interest and amuse the members of the guild and stimulate an interest in the little theater movement. If it proves of permanent value, something like the Greenwich Players may grow out of it. It is to be an intercommunity enterprise, that is, it is hoped to get representatives of all the north shore villages to be more or less active in it.

On the board are Mrs. Arthur Aldis and Charles Atkinson of Lake Forest, both what one might call "old stagers" at amateur theatricals. Mrs. Volney

Miss Julia Warner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lansing B. Warner of Evanston, and John Franklin Herdic of Evanston, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Hardt of Williamsport, Pa., were married on Oct. 1 at the residence of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Herdic will be at home after Dec. 1 at 130 Main street, Evanston.

The wedding of Miss Lucy Davis Lord, daughter of Mrs. Susan R. Lord of 190 East Chestnut street, and Edward G. Wyckoff Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Wyckoff of Ithaca, N. Y., took place Sept. 17 at the summer residence of the bride's mother at Spring Lake, Mich. A number of Chicagoans went to Spring Lake for the wedding, and they all reported that it was one of the most beautiful of the many late summer weddings. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Glass, Miss Emily Lord, Miss Portia Bartlett, Miss Elizabeth Prindiville, Miss Marjorie McCord, and Basil Elmer were the Chicagoans in the bridal party. Mr. and Mrs. Wyckoff are living at 115 Copley road, Stonehurst, Philadelphia, Pa.

The second wedding within several months in the families of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hallett Thorne of Lake Forest and Dr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor Andrews of 448 Barry avenue took place Sept. 21, when Miss Elizabeth Thorne became the bride of Robert Harvey Andrews. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews have returned from their wedding journey and are with Mr. and Mrs. Thorne in Lake Forest until their apartment at 2344 Lincoln Park West is ready for occupancy. Miss Susanna Elizabeth Andrews and Hallett Wilber Thorne were married June 27. Two more weddings in the Andrews family are impending, for announcement has been made of the engagements of Miss Elora Perkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Perkins of Chicago, to Frank Taylor Andrews Jr. and of Miss Marion Evans, daughter of Mrs. Myron E. Evans of Scarsdale, N. Y., to Howard Gallup Andrews.

It is a mistaken idea that women of large proportions, sizes 38 to 56, cannot procure stylish apparel ready-made. Lane Bryant ultra-smart styles, the fashions of the hour, specially designed for Stout Women, long or short waisted, are ample proof of the falsity of this idea.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Fortnightly of Englewood Begins Thirtieth Season

By Kate Webber.

ON Tuesday afternoon the Fortnightly of Englewood will enter upon its thirtieth season, with the first meeting and musicale at the residence of Mrs. Walter K. Earle, 6426 Yale avenue.

Founded in 1891 as "The Woman's Auxiliary of the Englewood Home club," the club partook originally of the real essence of an auxiliary, with small independent personality. It received its first impetus during the World's fair and formed a permanent organization, limiting its membership to thirty.

In keeping itself a small club, the members have succeeded in creating among themselves a loyal and affectionate interest which can be maintained only through the close contact of a small number of women with kindred interests. Many of the members are women actives in larger, more bustling clubs, who find a different atmosphere in the home meetings, where hospitality and the talks of brilliant speakers combine to make a delightful change from packed halls and meticulous parliamentarians.

Subjects of art, music, and literature make up the club programs for the most part, and questions pertaining to civic welfare also come up for discussion.

It is the club's aim to be alert without being controversial, to maintain the old ideals and yet be modern; to combine social and cultural affairs in a manner beneficial to its members.

The officers for the current year are: President, Mrs. George A. Stanton; vice president, Mrs. Charles A. Deneen; secretary, Mrs. Fred K. Crosby; treasurer, Mrs. Ralph Lydster.

Born Out of Chicago's Great Fire of 1871!

Chicago celebrates the Semi-Centennial of her Great Fire of 1871 this week. We also have reason to celebrate; within a few months after the disastrous conflagration the institution now known as the Bernstein Furniture Company established its first store (long since given up) at Canal and Meeger (now 15th Street).

Our present three large modern, magnificent stores, sketched above, give expression to the fact that our years of honest endeavors and fair treatment have not been in vain.

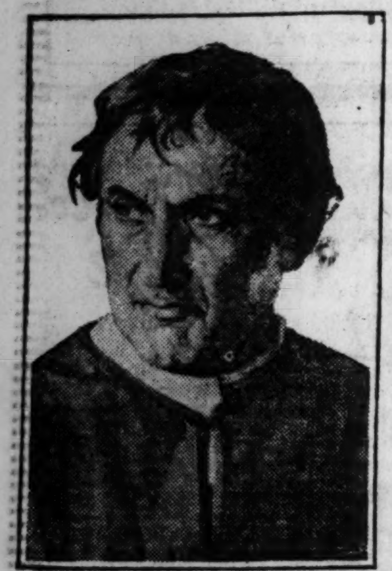
ART and ARCHITECTURE

Two More Prizes Offered Painters Exhibiting Here

By Eleanor Jewett.

WITH the arrival last week of the October bulletin of the Art institute, one may well consider the new art season under way. So many exhibitions and lectures are announced in these few thin sheets that it is self-evident that the coming months are to be among the most brilliant, artistically speaking, that Chicago has seen for some time.

The thirty-fourth annual exhibition of American paintings and sculpture is scheduled to open with the annual autumn reception on Nov. 3. On the jury for this exhibit will be Ralph Clarkson, Howard Giles, John W. Norton, Leopold Seyffert, John Sloan, William Wendt, Charles H. Woodbury, Alfonso Iannelli, Albin Polasek, and Emory P. Seidel. An interesting addition to the list of awards is found in the announcement of two new prizes to be given, the Mrs. Keith Spalding prize of $1,000 for "the best landscape, the picture to have been painted not earlier than January, 1919, and which has not, at the time of the exhibition, taken a prize," and the Mr. and Mrs. Augustus S. Peabody prize of $200 "for either purchase or as a gift, for a painting executed within two years by one of the younger artists."



"A Peasant of Uri," by Ernst Stuckelberg, one of the strongest and most interesting character studies in the group of paintings by Swiss artists now at the Art institute.

The usual prizes and medals will be awarded as in other years. These include the Potter Palmer gold medal, the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal, the Norman Wait Harris medals, and the William R. French memorial gold medal. Fifty paintings have been invited to be hung in the exhibition and these, like the paintings by members of the jury, are all eligible for prizes.

During the weeks that this exhibit continues, the twenty-ninth annual exhibition of the Atlan Ceramic Art club will be held at the institute.

The Tuesday afternoon lecture course, another annual event at the Art institute, will begin with a concert by members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Tuesday. On Oct. 18, Rudolph Schaeffer will lecture on "The Application of Color Principles." Mr. Schaeffer is an instructor at the Otis Art institute of Los Angeles, and during the last summer was associated with Sam Hume in work in pageantry in Detroit.

Last Friday afternoon Lorado Taft began his course of ten Friday afternoon talks on "Classical and Renaissance Sculpture." His topic was "Greek Sculpture: Formative Influences." These talks are given at 4 o'clock in Fullerton hall.

The Sunday afternoon concerts will open next Sunday, two concerts being given, one at 3 o'clock and the second at 4:15. Nine members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra under the direction of George Dasch constitute the "Art Institute Ensemble," by which name the group of musicians who give the concerts is known.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

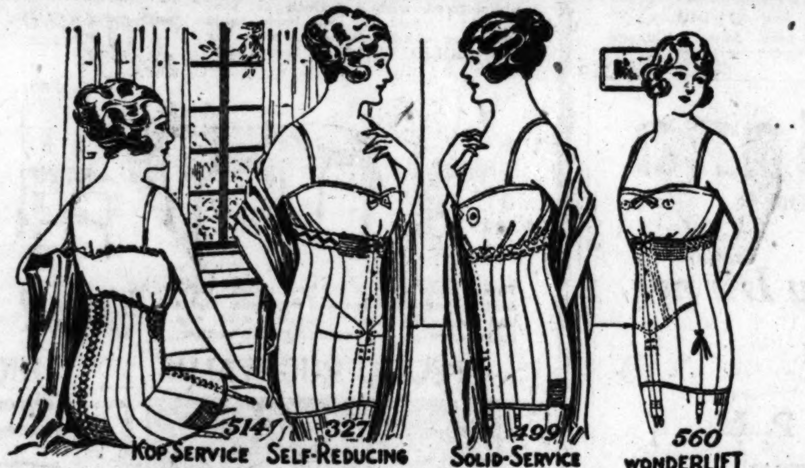
TRIPLE-SERVICE
(ECONOMIC-HYGIENIC-STYLE)
Makes Nemo Corsets Indispensable



The Meaning of Nemo Corset Service
MILLIONS OF WOMEN DEPEND ON IT

Nemo Corsets comprise many hygienic features of great scientific value and are divided into three distinct services:

Hygienic Service---Style Service---Economic Service

Their Hygienic Service has become invaluable and indispensable from a humanitarian and health point of view. The medical profession fully recognizes its preventive and curative qualities.

Their Style Service is necessarily different from that furnished by other corsets. The scientific and hygienic results can be obtained only when Nemo Corsets fit the figure accurately, comfortably and properly.

Their Economic Service, on which the first two depend represents the long-wearing qualities of Nemo Corsets. No amount of ingenuity in conceiving these valuable inventions would avail if the corsets themselves were not extremely durable. Their intrinsic value is based exclusively on the production cost of the corsets themselves. Their Hygienic Features, although worth much more than the corsets are given entirely free.

The CIRCLET

does for the figure above the waist what the corset does below.

The Circlet
has neither hooks nor eyes yet it molds the figure perfectly.

composers to send in their manuscripts, supposing that they have written in the format. He agrees with Miss Garden that no third class material will be accepted, but good music will be promptly considered. Programs are being made up now.

At all events, his plan is a better one than to say that American composers have no chance.

Talk of the Tuneful.

Miss Garden will be sailing for this country about the middle of the month. Before coming to Chicago to take up her managerial duties she is announced for a concert appearance in Boston with the Harvard Glee club Oct. 28.

As a memorial to Enrico Caruso an organization formed for the purpose plans to raise a fund of $1,000,000 to establish annual musical scholarships and prizes. Among those in this part of the country who are identified with the work are Francis S. Peabody and T. M. Fletcher of Chicago, Osbourne McConathy of Evanston, and William Butterworth of Moline. Some of the musicians are Harold Bauer, Leopold Auer, Walter Damrosch, Amelita Galli-Curci, John McCormack, Pierre Monteux, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, and Marcella Sembrich.

The Chicago theater, soon to be opened as another home of the galloping portraits, is also to be a house of music. Concerts are to be given on Sundays by an orchestra of 100 made up from the orchestras of the Tivoli, Riviera, and the Chicago itself. Nathaniel Finston will conduct.

Albert Coates and Vincent D'Indy are numbered among the visiting conductors of the season. Coates will stay in New York for ten weeks with Walter Damrosch's symphony orchestra of that city. There is as yet no word of his coming to Chicago, either for opera or orchestra. D'Indy will do some gadding about; he is to be guest conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra in a program of his own works which will include his new "Les Rivages."

Titta Ruffo, this year among those absent at the Chicago Opera association, is an early arrival in America. Before going to the Metropolitan he will make a concert tour which includes Boston, Washington, Cleveland and Des Moines, and does not at present include Chicago.

Reading about Mrs. Coolidge's chamber music festival at Pittsfield, Mass., one finds this in the Boston Transcript concerning Leo Sowerby of this city: "Truly here is the music of young America, high spirited, independent, breath taking—and how well it accorded with the joyous, open air spirit, the camaraderie, of the festival itself! Technically Mr. Sowerby writes as do the youngsters of Italy and France—he delights in strange timbers, and his harmonies, often acrid and strident, are rather the outcome than the arbiter of his polyphony."

A word as to Elizabeth Schumann, who is coming to Chicago with Richard Strauss to sing his lieder while he plays the piano: She is not, as is generally believed, a stranger to the United States. She was for a time a member of the Metropolitan Opera forces, and took part in some of the performances by that organization of "Der Rosenkavalier."

The Waiting List for Kitchenette Apartments

in

Hotel Somerset

SHERIDAN ROAD AT ARGYLE

It was a foregone conclusion that the interval between the departure of summer guests and the arrival of fall and winter guests, during which kitchenette apartments might be had in Hotel Somerset, would be very brief. Since the kitchenette idea was first evolved there has been no residential hotel which has had stronger claims to confidence and patronage than has the Somerset this season.

In Service and in Many Little Niceties Hotel Somerset Is Supreme in Its Field

We shall be glad to list, in the order of their receipt, applications for kitchenette apartments, to become effective as vacancies occur. In a hotel of this size there are always a few families who, because called to other cities or for other unforeseen reasons, find it necessary to give up their apartments. In such cases those who are listed for early preference may attain occupancy earlier than they expected. Bear in mind that it is not too early to register now your requirements for spring and summer.

Meanwhile, there are to be had a few especially desirable rooms without kitchenette, for occupancy by the day, week, month or on long lease.

The rates for rooms without kitchenette include the most complete hotel service in any residential hotel in Chicago, and, as was the case with kitchenette apartments, many people will no doubt regret postponement of arrangements which they may now contemplate making. Prompt decision gives the advantage of preference as to location, etc., and is the only safeguard against disappointment.

These rooms all include private bath, both tub and shower.

In every detail these rooms are unexcelled in point of desirability, and there is no extra charge for occupancy by two persons.

RATES FOR APARTMENTS AND ROOMS

Kitchenette apartments of 2, 3, 4 and 5 rooms, $125 to $450 a month. Rooms without kitchenette, $25 a week and up. Private bath, including both tub and shower, attached to every apartment or room.

S. W. GERSTNER, Manager

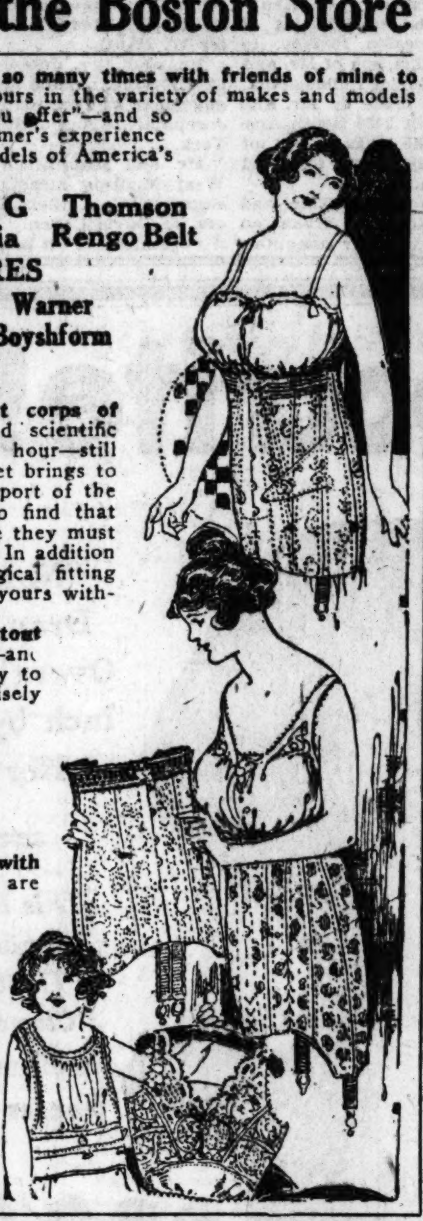
Why I Buy My Corsets at the Boston Store

Third Floor—Dearborn Street



"Because," said a customer of many years standing, "I have gone so many times with friends of mine to other stores and have yet to find the store that can equal yours in the variety of makes and models on display or, more important to me, in the fitting service you offer"—and so today, madam, we ask you to pause and consider what this customer's experience means to you—here to choose from you find all the foremost models of America's leading manufacturers, including:

Nemo C.B.La Spirite Kabo Redfern R & G Thomson
Warner Smart Set Justrite Binner Gracia Rengo Belt

LACE FRONT MODELS	BRASSIERES
Boston Custom Made, Redfern	Nemo Treo Elastic Warner
Roberta R. & G. Warner	Bien Jolie De Bevoise Boyshform
	Nature's Rival

And you find as well the most carefully trained and efficient corps of corsetieres in America—trained in all the latest hygienic and scientific methods to bring to your figure the fashionable lines of the hour—still preserving all the healthful features that the properly fitted corset brings to your figure—for this service—that has won the approval and support of the foremost modistes as well as of the scores of physicians who find that because of the ill effects of the corsetless and low corseted mode they must study the corset question with greatest care—no charge is made. In addition to our fitting service the Medical Health Station and the surgical fitting rooms with the services and advice of graduate trained nurses is yours without extra charge.

The stout woman is ordinarily the hardest to fit, still we fit more stout women to corsets annually than do all Chicago stores combined—and we have for years past—our corsetieres are trained scientifically to understand the importance of the corset and how to choose precisely the model your figure should have.

Here you will find special fitters for many services, including a complete Maternity Corset Section—a section for elastic girdles, a section for juniors, a section for stouts—which includes our famous Nemo section with the advantages of the "N. H. F. I." of New York—a section for elderly women—a section for corset waists.

We specialize in each division of corset service—fitting brassieres with as much care and thoroughness as we do corsets, with results that are most surprising to many women—every new improvement is featured here first—the latest being a brassiere—different from any you have ever seen—no hooks, no eyes, no buttons, no lacing—self-adjusting—it brings the youthful straight line to every figure.

Foster, also of Lake Forest, and a capital actress, is another on the board, as are Stuart Bailey of Winnetka, Mrs. Laird Bell (one of the best amateurs in this part of the world), Mrs. Dudley Cates (also an excellent actress), Mrs. Frederick Dickinson (well known as a reader), Percy Eckhart of Kenilworth (bringing much experience to such work), Ralph Dennis and Mrs. James F. Porter of Winnetka. Others also interested in the venture are Mrs. Henry K. Tenney, Mrs. Preston Boyden, Mrs. Ralph Heilman, Mrs. Bruce McLeish, Mrs. E. V. L. Brown, Samuel Otis, and Perry Dunlap Smith.

Ferber Play Is Billed.

The first performance will be a play of Miss Edna Ferber's, "Twelve Hundred a Year," which is said to be most amusing. It is to be given at the Woman's club in Winnetka on Nov. 10 and 11 and in Kenilworth Nov. 12. Later it will be repeated in Evanston and Lake Forest.

To insure the success of this undertaking the support of the public must be secured. It is with this object that the annual dues have been placed at $5, as the hope is to get a large number of people to join in these various communities. This membership will cover two tickets to each of the three plays which it is proposed to produce for the public and two tickets to the play which it is planned to give at the end of the seasons for members only. Also an invitation to any teas and receptions which may be given during the year, it being the intention to entertain at these teas professional players and playwrights. It is also hoped to stimulate the writing of plays by local dramatists, which will be produced by this company if suitable for such production.

Stuart Bailey will be the technical director of productions; R. Fayerweather Babcock of Evanston will have charge of the scenic and art decorations; J. Williams Macy is in charge of the publicity and Emery Cobb Andrews (both Winnetkans) will be treasurer.

An important part of the enterprise will be an orchestra of thirty-five pieces under the direction of Palmer J. Clark. This is part of an orchestra of sixty-five pieces which, under the direction of Mr. Clark, will play during the winter at the Art institute. The Chicago chapter of the National Drama league is interested in this proposed guild. With much talent in its ranks and rightly supported by the public on the north shore, both financially and by large attendance, the guild may well develop into an interesting and valuable adjunct to life on the north shore.

When the Bolsheviki Erred.

The details of the remarkable trip which Charles R. Crane and his son, John, made from China across Siberia and through Russia to the Baltic sea are curious as they come to us. Mr. Crane took the money needed for the trip—some $3,000 in our money—turned into Russian currency this amounted to something like 1,500,000 rubles. When the cook of the party went on his daily search for food he carried two big valises stuffed full of rubles to pay for what he bought. Arrived in Russia, the Cranes visited the government printing house, where the Russian ruble notes are printed. On the walls they saw a notice to the effect that the workmen might, if they wanted to, stay after hours and print money for themselves.

While the Cranes were not interfered with, they found little enthusiasm from the bolshevik government over their arrival and were glad to depart without real difficulty developing.

As Mr. Crane has always been an ardent admirer of Russia and is one of the few Americans who can speak the Russian language, it would seem as if the bolshevik missed an opportunity to secure a possible advocate. He was a friend of Leo Tolstoi and of many a Russian scholar and artist. A few years ago he brought over at his own expense the famous Russian choir from Moscow. It made a great stir in the musical world.

1921 Dressed as 1871.

It is to be hoped that none of those invited will miss what will be a picturesque party, the reception at the Chicago Historical society tomorrow, when many of the quaint old costumes of 1871 will be worn by some of the ladies of 1921. The invitations to this occasion were copied from the style of invitations at that time. The graceful, flowing script and the wording belong to quite another era than ours today.

There is no doubt about it; the best of the four seasons in this part of land is this particular moment of the year, when the sky is stained blue clear down to the horizon and there is a snap and tingle in the air which makes the blood zip through the veins. Is there a more delicious sound than the crackling of dead leaves underfoot, or a more delicious fragrance than the acrid smoke from the piles of burning of garden debris? And did you see that young and sharp crescent of a moon as it hung on the sunset sky last Tuesday?

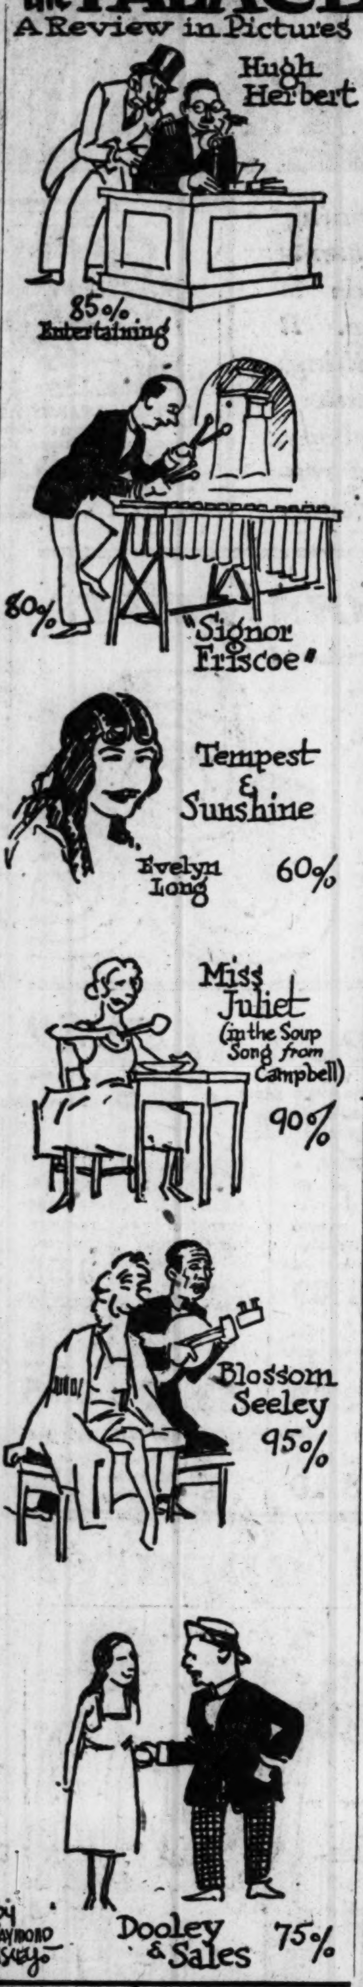
A Review in Pictures



Vaudeville Wit.

G. Moran and Charles Mack:

"You have no more money than a snake has hips."

"You're so bowlegged that if you stood before an X you'd spell ox."

"You know it is said that the early bird catches the worm."

"Yes, but who wants the worm?"

"Remember that story way back in B. C. when Daniel was in the den with real wild lions?"

"Aw—I bet they were circus lions."

"Now, I said B. C. Before Circuses."

"We have lions on our farm."

"You have?"

"Yes, dandy lions."

IMPERIOUS VICTORIA, QUEEN AND WOMAN

By Lytton Strachey

SHORTLY afterwards the queen underwent, for the first time in her life, the actual experience of close personal loss. Early in 1861 the Duchess of Kent (her mother) was taken seriously ill, and in March she died. The event overwhelmed Victoria. With a morbid intensity, she filled her diary for pages with minute descriptions of her mother's last hours, her dissolution, and her corpse, interspersed with vehement apostrophes, and the agitated outpourings of emotional reflection.

QUEEN VICTORIA in mourning.

In the grief of the present the disagreements of the past were totally forgotten. It was the horror and the mystery of death—death, present and actual—that seized upon the imagination of the queen. Her whole being, so instinct with vitality, recoiled in agony from the grim spectacle of the triumph of that awful power.

Before the year was out, a far more terrible blow was to fall upon her. Albert, who had for long been suffering from sleeplessness, went, on a cold and drenching day toward the end of November, to inspect the buildings for the new military academy at Sandhurst. On his return it was clear that the fatigue and exposure to which he had been subjected had seriously affected his health. He was attacked by rheumatism and he complained that he felt thoroughly unwell.

Three days later a painful duty obliged him to visit Cambridge. The Prince of Wales, who had been placed at that university in the previous year, was behaving in such a manner that a parental visit and a parental admonition had become necessary. The disappointed father, suffering in mind and body, carried through his task, but on his return journey to Windsor he caught a fatal chill.

The Prince's Last Memorandum.

During the next week he gradually grew weaker and more miserable. Yet, depressed and enfeebled as he was, he continued to work. It so happened that at that very moment a grave diplomatic crisis had arisen. Civil war had broken out in America and it seemed as if England, owing to a violent quarrel with the northern states, was upon the point of being drawn into the conflict.

A severe dispatch by Lord John Russell was submitted to the queen; and the prince perceived that, if it was sent off unaltered, war would be the almost inevitable consequence. At 7 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 1 he rose from his bed and with a quavering hand wrote a series of suggestions for the alteration of the draft, by which its language might be softened and a way left open for a peaceful solution of the question. These changes were accepted by the government, and war was averted. It was the prince's last memorandum.

He had always declared that he viewed the prospect of death with equanimity. "I do not cling to life," he had once said to Victoria. "You do; but I set no store by it." And then he had added: "I am sure, if I had a severe illness, I should give up at once, I should not struggle for life. I have no tenacity of life."

He had judged correctly. Before he had been ill many days he told a friend that he was convinced he would not recover. He sank and sank.

Nevertheless, if his case had been properly understood and skillfully treated from the first, he might conceivably have been saved; but the doctors failed to diagnose his symptoms; and it is noteworthy that his principal physician was Sir James Clark. [Sir James had been kept in his post by Victoria's authority in spite of attacks on him in the Hastings scandal and in spite of errors in other cases].

Into the Shadows.

When it was suggested that other advice should be taken Sir James pooh-poohed the idea. "There was no cause for alarm," he said. But the strange illness grew worse.

At last, after a letter of fierce remonstrance from Lord Palmerston, Dr. Watson was sent for, and Dr. Watson saw at once that he had come too late. The prince was in the grip of typhoid fever. "I think that everything so far is satisfactory," said Sir James Clark.

"One cannot speak with certainty; but it is horrible to think that such a life may have been sacrificed to Sir J. Clark's selfish jealousy of every member of his profession," said the Earl of Clarendon to the Duchess of Manchester.

Victoria's distress and agitation were great, but she was not seriously frightened. Buoyed up by her own abundant energies, she would not believe that Albert's might prove unequal to the strain. She refused to face such a hideous possibility.

The Princess Alice tried to tell her the truth, but her hopefulness would not be daunted. On the morning of Oct. 14 Albert, just as she had expected, seemed to be better; perhaps the crisis was over. But in the course of the day there was a serious relapse. Then at last she allowed herself to see that she was standing on the edge of an appalling gulf. The whole family was summoned, and, one after another, the children took a silent farewell of their father.

"It was a terrible moment," Victoria wrote in her diary, "but, thank God! I was able to command myself, and to be perfectly calm, and remained sitting by his side."

For a moment toward the evening she went into another room, but was immediately called back; she saw at a glance that a ghastly change had taken place. As she knelt by the bed he breathed deeply, breathed gently, breathed at last no more. His features became perfectly rigid; she shrieked one long wild shriek that rang through the terror stricken castle—and understood that she had lost him forever.

What the Loss Meant to England.

The death of the prince consort was the central turning point in the history of Queen Victoria. She herself felt that her true life had ceased with her husband's, and that the remainder of her days upon earth was of a twilight nature—an epilogue to a drama that was done.

The sudden removal of the prince was not merely a matter of overwhelming personal concern to Victoria; it was an event of national, of European importance. He was only 42, and in the ordinary course of nature he might have been expected to live at least thirty years longer. Had he done so it can hardly be doubted that the whole development of the English polity would have been changed.

Already at the time of his death he filled a unique place in English public life; already among the inner circle of politicians he was accepted as a necessary and useful part of the mechanism of the state. Lord Clarendon, for instance, spoke of his death as "a national calamity of far greater importance than the public dream of," and lamented the loss of his "sagacity and foresight," which, he declared, would have been "more than ever valuable" in the event of an American war.

And, as time went on, the prince's influence must have enormously increased. For, in addition to his intellectual and moral qualities, he enjoyed, by virtue of his position, one supreme advantage which every other holder of high office in the country was without; he was permanent. Politicians came and went, but the prince was perpetually installed at the center of affairs.

Stockmar Joins His Pupil.

It is easy to imagine how, under such a ruler, an attempt might have been made to convert England into a state as exactly organized, as elaborately trained, as efficiently equipped, and as autocratically controlled as Prussia herself. Then perhaps, eventually, under some powerful leader—a Gladstone or a Bright—the democratic forces in the country might have rallied together and a struggle might have followed in which the monarchy would have been shakn to its foundations.

Or, on the other hand, Disraeli's hypothetical prophecy might have come true. "With Prince Albert," he said, "we have buried our sovereign. This German prince has governed England for twenty-one years with a wisdom and energy such as none of our kings have ever shown. . . . If he had outlived some of our 'old stagers' he would have given us the blessings of absolute government."

With appalling suddenness Victoria had exchanged the serene radiance of happiness for the utter darkness of woe. In the first dreadful moments those about her had feared that she might lose her reason, but the iron strain within her held firm, and in the intervals between the intense paroxysms of grief it was observed that the queen was calm.

She remembered, too, that Albert had always disapproved of exaggerated manifestations of feeling, and her one remaining desire was to do nothing but what he would have wished. Yet there were moments when her royal anguish would brook no restraints. One day she sent for the Duchess of Sutherland, and, leading her to the prince's room, fell prostrate before his clothes in a flood of weeping, while she adjured the duchess to tell her whether the beauty of Albert's character had ever been surpassed.

At other times a feeling akin to indignation swept over her. "The poor fatherless baby of eight months," she wrote to the king of the Belgians, "is now the utterly heart-broken and crushed widow of forty-two! My life as a happy one is ended! The world is gone for me! . . .

"Oh! to be cut off in the prime of life—to see our pure, happy, quiet domestic life, which alone enabled me to bear my much disliked position, cut off at forty-two—when I had hoped with such instinctive certainty that God never would part us, and would let us grow old together [though he always talked of the shortness of life]—is too awful, too cruel!"

The tone of outraged majesty seems to be discernible. Did she wonder in her heart of hearts how the Deity could have dared?

The Dance of the Sand and what it proves about cleaning

New facts you need, to choose a cleaner wisely

This is your invitation to see the fascinating "Dance of the Sand." It is part of the famous 3-Point Demonstration that is given either in your home, or at the stores of the better dealers.

Sand is rubbed on a piece of carpet or rug. It represents the sharp, gritty dirt that countless feet track in. It is against this type of dirt that the walking soles and heels grind off the nap, leaving those ugly bare spots that fastidious homekeepers detest. With the brush not running, so that the cleaner is operating with only its tremendous suction, the demonstrator will clean the rug until every particle of visible sand is entirely removed.

The rug will seem clean. But it isn't! He will tap the rug slightly with his pencil and, presto! more sand will come bouncing to the surface from its hiding place in the bottom of the nap. This grit is sharp. It tenaciously clings to the wooly fibres of the rug. Suction alone cannot remove it. So vibration must be used to loosen it.

That is exactly what the motor-driven beating brush of the Hamilton Beach does. And he shows it to you convincingly by running the cleaner toward the sand, which at its very approach commences to dance to the surface, where the tremendous suction instantly whisks it into the bag. Thousands have marveled at this famous test. It proves how vitally necessary a beating brush is to rid carpets and rugs of the gritty dirt which leaves bare spots and shortens their life.

The only cleaner that combines Beating brush and Super-suction

219 cubic feet of air per minute—at a mile a minute speed, makes the attachments wonderfully efficient

Looks better, does more, costs less
Terms as easy as any

Only in the Hamilton Beach is this beating brush combined with really powerful suction. It is, therefore, the only cleaner that offers the combined advantage of both types of cleaners. All dirt surrenders to it: surface dust, clinging threads and lint and fuzz, embedded cutting grit and sand. It has every convenience feature suggested by Magazine Housekeeping experts and practical engineers. And at $55.00, it offers most value. Absolutely guaranteed throughout. Light, sturdy, long lived. You will certainly want to see this latest development in cleaners before making up your mind. You will want to see the famous 3-Point Demonstration which proves conclusively and scientifically why no other type is as thorough.

Your dealer will gladly demonstrate in your home free. If his machines have not yet arrived, please notify us. We'll see that you are shown the "Dance of the Sand," plus the cleaning power of 219 cubic feet of air per minute.

Comment on New Books by Mrs. Peattie; Some She Likes, Some She Shoots Through and Through

BY ELIA W. PEATTIE.

Shortest, and Best, Review We've Read in Weeks.

ANOTHER "mystery story" by Carolyn Wells, "The Come-back." [Doran.] Man lost in Labrador—treacherous friend—spirit medium—fake séance—murder—ouija board—wrong man suspected—lost comes back—murderer exposed. The story is as ingenuous as if written by a schoolgirl. Piffle.

Good Hunting—Good Writing.

ANY reader who wants a succession of real thrills cleverly sandwiched with very catchy humor should possess himself of Rex Beach's "Oh, Shoot" [Harper's], the chronicles of an agitated sportsman. Whether it is shooting Alaskan bears, or roping cougars in Arizona with Fred Stone, duck and geese hunting in Pimlico sound with Max Foster and Grantland Rice, visiting the San Blas Indians and fishing or messing around in Mexico, Mr. Beach is equally entertaining. He gives you descriptions of sport as good as can be found anywhere, and his humor is very amusing. It is not often that humor and real sportsmanship are so happily blended. The book has many good photographs.

Is Cavalry Vindicated?

THE story of Allenby's conquest of Palestine, or at least the most important part of the story, is found in Lieut.-Col. R. M. P. Preston's "The Desert Mounted Corps" [Houghton, Mifflin & Co.], a detailed and thrilling account of one of the most brilliant and successful campaigns of the struggle of the allies against Germany's attempt at world supremacy.

The book has unusual interest for military men, for it proves that cavalry is not the obsolete arm of the service that it was thought to be. In this campaign mounted men proved efficient in the roughest terrain and even in attacks on trenches.

Lieut.-Col. Preston, who was chief of staff to Gen. Chauvel, who commanded the corps, takes up the story after the earlier reverses of the British and when it became necessary to reorganize all the troops in the Egyptian theater of war.

The Desert Mounted corps consisted of Australians, New Zealanders, British yeomanry, territorial horse artillery, and Indian cavalry, with French cavalry added during the last operations.

In the first series of operations the corps made a direct advance of seventy miles into the enemy's country, took 17,000 prisoners and 120 guns. The final operations embraced 450 miles of advance, the complete destruction of three Turkish armies with a loss of 90,000 prisoners and 450 guns, "the overwhelming defeat of what had hitherto been considered one of the first class military powers."

When the character of the terrain is considered—for the most part desert and "bad lands" like our own western ones, barren of vegetation and almost waterless—some idea of the achievement of the force may be had. A whole summer was passed in the Jordan valley, 1,200 feet below sea level, with the thermometer averaging 107 degrees. Added to these natural obstacles the force had to encounter a well entrenched enemy behind a line of forts from Gaza to Beersheba, blocking the advance north and east.

How this line was broken with the capture of those two towns and how the corps stubbornly fought its way to Jerusalem through one machine gun nest after another until the Holy City was reached makes a stirring narrative. But the taking of Jerusalem left the task but half done. It was not until nearly armistice time that the total destruction of the enemy was accomplished and Turkish power and German influence became things of the past in Palestine. Full justice was done to each arm of the service, but it is plain that without the aid of cavalry the campaign would have been much longer and would have resulted in many more casualties. Military historians will be interested in the book for this reason as well as for the wealth of details given by the author concerning the interesting and novel features of the campaign.

The doubtful aid given the British by the Arabs is touched on and the incident is related that when a certain body of Turks surrendered to the British they asked to be allowed to retain their arms because of their fear of butchery at the hands of the Arabs who were there. That this fear was not groundless was shown by the attack made on them by the Hedjaz force, an attack which had to be repelled by the British and Turks fighting the former's allies!

The book is supplied with photographs, page and folding maps, and a full index.

Pleasant Reading for Young People.

L. M. MONTGOMERY, a Canadian writer, tells in "Rilla of Ingleside" a story of her native Prince Edward island during the war. It is in a way a continuation of her well known book "Anne of Green Gables" and Rilla is one of the children of Anne. It is a sympathetic story, better adapted to the youthful than to the adult mind. The tone is wholesome and affectionate and the story of the strain and sacrifice of the war is well told. Animals—pet dogs and cats—play their part in this innocuous tale and are given their personality. [Stokes.]

Glucose and Mysticism.

ALL lovers of "Peter Ibbetson" will recognize in "Dreaming True," Alma Newton's latest story, a reference to the occult experiences of the imprisoned Peter and his beautiful Marchioness of Tower. Miss Newton throws a glamour of death-mystery over her tale of a girl who had three lovers, losing the first by death, the second by preference, and acquiring the third after her divorce. She sells her few jewels and goes to live with her soulmate in a lonely forest, and the reader is expected to rejoice greatly in their happiness. But as the man seems to do nothing but "dream true" and the ecstatic heroine bears a child and does all the work, the practical reader falters in enthusiasm. The story is a foolishly sentimental one, with a peculiar combination of glucose and pietistic mysticism in it. [John Lane company.]

"Inimitable"—in a Way.

THOSE who read "In Pawn" [Houghton, Mifflin Co.], by Ellis Parker Butler, thinking to get as good a laugh from it as they did from "Pigs Is Pigs" will be disappointed. There isn't a laugh in it for them. Indeed, there may be a great many frowns, for it is a burlesque without a particle of humor in which the reader is called on to believe the most preposterous situation imaginable. The publishers call the characters "inimitable." If not being found anywhere in the human race is inimitable, then they are.

Musings on the Eternal Mystery.

WORD comes through "The Message of Sadhu Sundar Singh" [The Macmillan Co.] of an ecstatic Christian whose teaching and life have stirred the belief and faith of many. Canon B. H. Streeter, who edits the book, avers that the written word can convey little idea of this ardent and beautiful personality, which breathes the Christian beatitudes.

The Sadhu is a gentleman of North India, a scholar, and long an investigator of the meaning of life who, having been converted to the Christian religion, lives it with a burning intensity. I was unable to see that there was anything new about his message. He seemed rather to have unquestioningly accepted the whole of the Christian faith and to have acquired the habit of ecstasy.

The Fall of Empire in Motion Picture

ism and characterization in the book. And there was the young emperor-king. A pathetic figure. A chivalrous, hard working, honest, not naturally suspicious, good man. The war and the troubles of the dynasty turned his hair gray. He was ever wishing to be honest. He wanted to acknowledge the Prince of Bourbon's letter, but was dissuaded. He wanted to act decisively in the matter of the extension of the franchise, but was dissuaded. He never had the best information until it was too late, or, as they would tell him, too early to act upon it.

Too Late, and Ever Too Late.

He would cry out impetuously to Windischgraetz: "Draw up this program for me! Draw it up! That is just what I need. I want reforms everywhere!" Then the optimists, the reactionaries, the shoulder shruggers, and the hand rubbers would get between him and action—and nothing happened.

So the time came, says the prince, when "we had no money, we had no food supplies, we had no statesmen, we had no appreciation of coöperation; we had only a patient, gentle, self-sacrificing marvelous people."

Finally the people ceased to be that, and the dance of the magnates and the bureaucrats and the sleek, charming generals was over, and, says the prince, in one of his magnificent ironies, "We went our way, it may even be said in peace, our way to catastrophe." Always the monarch "shirked telling unpleasant truths." Well, his friend tells them for him now. The result is a salubrious book for distracted and drifting states the world over. Every vice of the official class that destroys nations this official encountered during his military and political service in the great war. He understood better than any man save Andrassy the curse of a dilatory and complacent bureaucracy, a curse which—as the matter of last week's soldier vocational revelations shows—the complexities of readjustment are beginning to fasten on this country. "Officials and bureaucrats," the prince says, "remain bureaucrats, and the gray mare's trot is the only pace they know."

They Would Rather Dance.

In short, he knew from every angle what was the matter with Austria-Hungary's people. He knew their fiber had been made soggy by their everlasting policy of postpone and palaver. They could not, would not voluntarily meet an issue. They would rather dance.

Hindenburg knew all this. I have heard that only twice in the war did he, as the saying is, blow up. Both times it was about the Austrians. Once it was after the mad business of Falkenhayn at Verdun when the old lion brought his massive paws crashing down on the table and roared: "This adventurous amateur!" In the German tongue 'tis even more terrific.

Again, when the Austrians, coming up from the southwest to meet him coming from the northwest, failed to make contact with him and girdle Ivangorod—failed by a period of three days, as I remember it—he shouted: "God in heaven! They have a special genius for delay!"

That operation had to be undertaken all over again at heavy cost.

And so it went. They delayed the extention of the franchise. They delayed the extention of powers to states which, because there was racial sympathy, they could, by prompt and sincere action, have held to them in their hour of need. They delayed their peace overtures until those overtures were meaningless.

Some called all this a kind of fatalism in them. It was not. It was nothing so momentous. It was carelessness and inertia in the body politic. The great people of the empire—I mean the high-placed—had grown arrogant; the poor people, the humble, had grown supine. It is also a tragedy of the disintegration of the spirit. It is also a very present warning to all peoples on pleasure bent to all statesmen who shrug and say: "Everything has been arranged. All will come out for the best."

That is what the Emperor Charles replied to the warning of Ludwig von Windischgraetz after a day of festival: "Why so gloomy? It will all come right!"

impossible to forgive him the ruthless nonchalance with which he seizes on Marie Doro, most delicate of stage ladies, and literally sinks her person and her personality in waves of the laces, odors, and cackles of others of her gender. It is a case of a lady lost among the ladies.

We learn, if we believe Mr. Hurlbut, that what goes on in one morganatic apartment is very much like what goes on in another, that the ladies of clubmen's leisures are equally given to listlessness, lip sticks, and light dialogue.

In the morganatic Maisie's apartment of the first act we had a surfeit of this light and wordy dialogue. Aphorisms on the pecuniary relations of the unmarital tumbled over each other and had none of that gross and satisfying solidity of vulgarity which so freshened "The Gold Diggers."

The particularly odious comparison of the "Lilies" with "The Gold Diggers" is inevitable, and the inevitable conclusion is that, for purposes of drama, the toiling sinners in Hopwood's play are more amusing than the endlessly recumbent prostitutes of Mr. Hurlbut's.

To Miss Doro falls the ungrateful task of being earnest and troubled among the band of untroubled unfortunates. She it is who must bear the burden of morality while others trip lightly among their vices.

She must perpetrate the familiar gesture of tearing off the rich man's diamonds and the further familiar writhe of the sinning mother recognizing her lost and sinless babe. In short, she is weighted with the plot, and her rare and human grace droops under the burden.

In a gallery of smudged characterizations Alison Skipworth, as a dowager "Lily," is the one clear portrait. She is richly real and comic in her few moments. If the play deserves to live, it is because of one scene in which the opulent Florette Ellwood, which she plays, reminisces about her former Philadelphia lovers, and gets their names, qualities, and addresses hopelessly mixed. She is gorgeously satisfied and unrepentant.

And in the first night's audience there was more joy over this one unrepentant sinner than for all the formal repentance with which Mr. Hurlbut lashed his play to a final curtain.

The only new thing about Al Jolson this year in his theater, which is a dazzling new edifice in 7th avenue, where it is (or was) respectable and near to Central park south. It is named after him, is vast, comfortable, and hideous, and our most distinguished baritone, in a few words spoken to Thursday night's christening audience, professed himself delighted with all its arrangements, including one, he confided, about royalties and percentages.

The new home of hectic Gotham glee thrusts impertinent Broadway into a hitherto quiet quarter. The lobby's nearest neighbor is a stable of those elderly quiet saddle horses, on which the older and disappearing order still makes its daily constitutional in Central park. The horses are doomed to some restless nights. They will lose their precious quality of sedateness, become undependable mounts. A not improbable effect of the latest real estate raid of the Shuberts will be some broken legs in the Tory families.

But Jolson must be served. The new show is a demonstration of that. It is another cosmos of superburlesque, quite identical, except for a ton of new ostrich feathers, with its predecessors in the Jolson cycle. It takes all this to make Jolson sing two songs. He is one of those soloists who have to be coaxed. And when he sings you forgive him his show. One song in the first act is probably entitled "Virginia Gin," and something catches inside your throat when he sings it, you know not why. It may be the gin, but I surmise that it is the voice.

There is still a quality in it which is a more potent elixir than strong drink. Every year it drags you back to and through a Jolson show. We fear we are all of us hopeless Jolson addicts.

How Alaska "Cubed Cork" Insulation Bars Heat

IF you could look through the seven insulating walls of Alaska Refrigerators, you would see in the very center of them Alaska "cubed cork," the insulating substance which has made Alaska remarkable for its ice-saving and food-preservation.

Heat rays strike the Alaska. They meet the Alaska "cubed cork" insulation; are stopped by it. No matter how powerful the sun's rays are, the "cubed cork" barrier deflects the heat. The refrigerator interior remains cool.

No wonder the Alaska principle saves so much ice. No wonder that foods are preserved so perfectly.

Tests have shown that "cubed cork" is the most perfect refrigerator insulation material known. It is but one of Alaska's outstanding features.

Look for these features when you select an Alaska:
Alaska "cubed cork" insulation, with its myriads of confined air cells which act as a barrier to the passage of heat and cold. "Cubed cork" insulation, specified by the Government for its refrigerators, has long been a distinctive feature of Alaska Refrigerators, the main insulating material of its seven insulating walls.
Alaska patented circulation system by which the warm air rises from food compartment to ice chamber, where it is chilled and the moisture condensed. The dry, cold air drops back into food compartment to circulate about the foods and thoroughly chill it.
Linings of seamless porcelain with rounded corners; or of white enamel—easily cleaned.
Shelves of heavily tinned, non-rusting woven wire, easily removable for cleaning.
Ice rack of galvanized steel, heavily coated, removable.
Special drain pipe with patent trap to keep warm air from entering refrigerator; easily cleaned.
Tight-fitting doors. Handsome finish of several coats of finest white enamel or varnish.
Insist on seeing the name Alaska on the front of the refrigerator before you buy. Don't accept a substitute.

NOTHING DOWN!

Here is a way to Save on a Piano!

YOU can get a good piano now at a great saving. Our Annual Sale of Pianos Returned from Summer Homes includes a piano for every taste and purse. A number of unusually fine instruments are included. We have been receiving from summer homes in Lake Forest; Oconomowoc; Lake Geneva; Petoskey; and other summer resorts, pianos which have been rented from us for the summer. Used by discriminating musicians and only for a month or two, they are exceptional values.

Make your choice early

The purchasing power of the dollar has been restored here. Actually we offer today far greater values than buyers have been able to get in five years. These choice instruments have been carefully overhauled by us. We have kept four shops busy for the last few weeks. All instruments have been carefully inspected and renewed. Stringing, revarnishing, and any adjustment of action which may have been necessary have been made.

Judge the values yourself

Come in and see this wonderful display. Grands, Uprights, and Players in latest styles and finishes are included. We advise an early choice. Such bargains will not remain long unpurchased. A visit will convince you.

High-class bargains

Not only are the prices extraordinarily low but the instruments are of such thoroughly pleasing character that we do not expect them to remain long on sale. The terms are so easy that no one who cares seriously about music will delay in making a selection.

New pianos included

In addition to pianos returned from summer homes, there are many fine, new, exchanged and discontinued style instruments shown. Good, new Upright pianos may now be had as low as $295. Good new Players as low as $495. Just think what this means!

The winter needs music

Consider the long winter evenings filled with music and pleasure which may be yours at so small a cost. A player piano greatly enhances your musical enjoyment because everyone can play it. Grand pianos of delightful tone and case design are also being placed in this sale. Each piano bears a price tag plainly marked for your examination.

Nothing down!

Pay no money down on your selection. A nominal cartage fee is the only charge we make. Let us send a piano to your home for thirty days free trial. Then, if you are fully satisfied, payments as low as $10.00 a month would begin. This is truly a novel way of obtaining a good piano. Only the very expensive makes are excepted. Thousands who have been waiting for lower prices can now come into the market. Do not delay! Where else can you equal such terms? Be sure to come early while the display is most complete.

Some choice groups

These pianos range from $125 upwards. It contains such well known instruments as Schultz, Emerson, Schubert, Lester, Shoninger, etc. It is indeed a select array.

Group B

Very choice uprights comprise this group. It includes a number of pianos which are for practical purposes as good as new. Group C

A huge selection of Player Pianos including many genuine pianola pianos are in this group. Prices range from $450 upwards. These instruments are all fully guaranteed to be in perfect playing order. THE POTTERS

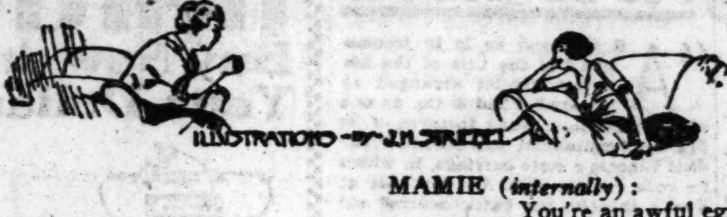
by J. P. McEvoy

In Which Mamie Meets Elmer.



PROLOGUE.

Ma does not entirely approve of the young men who infest the Potter habitation and step out with Mamie to various places of high voltage and low neckage . . . their glibness disturbs Ma and she is baffled by their joyous contempt for the learned counsel and sage advice of their elders . . . Ma has decided that now is the time to bring Elmer on the scene . . . Elmer is the son of an old girlhood friend, and he is an upright lad, as they used to say in McGuffey's Third Reader before the term was preëmpted by the piano men—his square, honest countenance beams with candor . . . Ma thinks Mamie will just love him, he has such a kind face, and he means so well, and he is so good to his folks . . . That's Elmer . . . You can see instantly that Mamie is going to be crazy about him.

Scene I.

Ma has invited Elmer, the son of her old girlhood friend, Henrietta Bowles, to visit a spell this evening. Wouldn't it be wonderful if Elmer and Mamie took up with each other, thinks Ma. (It would be more than wonderful . . . it would be miraculous.)

MA (with a flutter):
Now, Mr. Bowles is coming tonight,
And I want you to see that he's treated right.

MAMIE (decisively):
I'll treat him right, Ma . . . don't you fret.

BILL: You haven't seen this cuckoo yet.

MA (alarmed):
Cuckoo? Cuckoo? What do you mean?
He's as nice a boy as I've ever seen,
So kind and thoughtful . . . so polite,
And so refined and . . . so bright.

PA: It's just about time she'd see some lad
That doesn't resemble a collar ad.

BILL: They look to me like a bunch of nuts;
I never seen such dizzy mutts.

MAMIE: Of all the dumbbell dames I've seen,
You pick the dumbest, what I mean.

"Now, Mr. Bowles is coming tonight."

BILL (stung):
O, is that so!

MAMIE (triumphantly):
Yes, that's so.

BILL: O, I don't know, now, I don't know;
Speaking of dumbbells, don't forget
I haven't gone out with your friends as yet.

MAMIE (scornfully):
My friends! Ha! Ha! Likewise Ho! Ho!
Why don't you ask them, see if they'd go?

BILL: It's so darn seldom they're taken about
They might drop dead if I asked them out.

MAMIE (stung):
O, is that so!

BILL (triumphantly):
Yes, that's so.

MAMIE: They're popular girls,
I'd have you know.

MA: The doorbell, Mamie
. . . you'd better go.

BILL: If it's that there
Bowles, I'm gonna blow.

MA (to Pa):
Suppose we go to the movie show.

"Would you like to hear about the new course I'm taking?"

(Ma is certainly taking a deep interest in Elmer. She never goes out and leaves Mamie with any of the others . . . and it's "You got in pretty late last night, young lady . . . haven't I told you to always say good night on the front steps? Don't let me have to tell you again" . . . and of course she never has to tell her again—much.)

Scene II.

The Potter parlor—it's the living room on other occasions . . . Bill has escaped . . . the Baby is dreaming of ice cream islands surrounded by seas of chocolate sauce . . . Ma has dragged Pa to the movie—they're launching another ship and burning another oil tank in the weekly . . . Mamie has Elmer and the parlor all to herself . . . if Elmer were a female he would be some pretty girl's friend . . . that's the kind of map Elmer has . . . besides, he is one of those earnest young men who are Bound to Succeed . . . but not with Mamie, we fear.

ELMER (continuing his favorite subject, Elmer):
And that very night I clipped the coupon and sent it to this school, and inside of a week I had started the course.

MAMIE (internally):
Who cares?
(to Elmer):
Isn't that perfectly wonderful! And then what did you do?
(internally):
I hope you got a headache.

ELMER: Well, sir, I studied mighty hard, I can tell you. Instead of going out nights dancing and wasting my time like some fellows do, I plugged on that course, burning the midnight oil, as you might say, and just this week I got my diploma. Guess what I am now.

MAMIE (internally):
You're an awful egg, I'll say.
(to Elmer, with lips parted in eager surprise):
O, do tell me; I'm so interested!
(internally):
Yes, I am.

ELMER: I'm a Business Executive, $6,000 to $15,000 a year. It says so in the ads.

MAMIE (with the slightest edge of sarcasm):
When do you start exegging?

ELMER (with superb nonchalance):
O, that will all come in good time.

MAMIE (internally):
It'll be a good long time, I'll say.
(to Elmer):
Isn't that just wonderful! I do so admire a young man who has ambition and is willing to forge ahead in spite of all odds.
(internally):
Whatever that means.

ELMER (inflating chest to ninety pounds):
I guess it isn't every young fellow who is willing to give up all his pleasures in order to study and fit himself for life. Why, I've already started in on another course.

MAMIE (internally):
Another one? Migod, do I have to listen to another one?
(to Elmer):
You know, I'm so thoughtless. Here I am wasting your time when undoubtedly you feel you should be working on this new course of yours. Wouldn't you like to go home and work on it tonight?
(internally):
A bit crude, but what can the poor girl do?

ELMER (entirely missing the point):
I really should be working on it tonight, but then I deserve some relaxation, don't you think so?

MAMIE (internally):
If you knew what I think, you wouldn't ask me.
(to Elmer):
Well, I should so so (brightly). Have you read Erik Dorn yet? All us girls think it's so thrilling.

ELMER (heavily, as if in rebuke):
I have no time to devote to anything except things that will help me in my business.

"But where is Elmer—did he go?"

"I'm a Business Executive, $6,000 to $15,000 a year."

Wouldn't you like to hear about the new course I'm taking in the Psychology of Selling?

MAMIE (internally):
O, Ma! Look what he's doing now.
(to Elmer):
I'm afraid it's getting a little bit late. Suppose you tell me all about it next time.
(internally):
But there ain't going to be no next time.

Scene III.

Ma and Pa return from the movie . . . Ma gets the shock of her life: Mamie's caller has gone home already.

MA (to Mamie):
But where is Elmer . . . did he go?

MAMIE (wearily):
I hope so . . . I sure hope so.

MA (surprised):
Why, wasn't he nice? My gracious, child!

MAMIE (with spirit):
Too darned nice . . . I like 'em wild.

PA: Holy Caesar!

MA: Goodness me!

MAMIE (fiercely):
I like 'em lively . . . jumping gee . . .
He talked about himself all night—
He's fond of him, all right, all right,
And he can have him, ab-so-tive—
Why do they let such goobers live?

MA (helplessly):
As nice a boy as I ever saw.

MAMIE (decisively):
You let me do my picking, Ma.

PA (to himself, baffled):
Such is life, such is life.

(As Tarde would say, life for the Potters is the pursuit of the impossible through the useless.)

West Reaps Big Crops, but Faces Cattle Shortage; East Attracts Producers with High Prices for Eggs

By Frank Ridgway.

WESTERN range cattle men are now confronted with the most serious problem they have had to deal with in years. They have an abundance of feed, comparatively few cattle, and little money, and they are preparing for hard times during the next few years. Some have given up everything they had to pay their debts, and have shouldered their rifles and gone with their families into the foothills and mountains to hunt and trap.

Ranchers who have recently been on the Chicago market roughly estimated that there is a 40 to 50 per cent shortage of cattle on the ranges of the northwest today, and the supply is gradually decreasing as the live stock is being moved on to the market. This means that middle west farmers who have been filling their feed lots every year with range cattle cannot depend on the western ranchers for a liberal supply of feeders for many years.

Most of the cattle left on the western range, particularly those in the northwestern states, are said to be in the hands of the bankers. Bankers own 80 to 90 per cent of the cattle that are now on the ranges of the northwest, according to a prominent ranchman from Wyoming. He is familiar with a wide stretch of the cattle country in the west, and says that half of the men he knows have even sold their yearlings to meet their obligations. Ordinarily they keep their cattle until they are three or four years old.

Thinks Credit Comes Too Late.

Ranchmen, he explained, have not only sold most of their cattle but they haven't enough money left to restock their ranches. In discussing the War Finance corporation's plans to make money available for the live stock men of the country, he said he doubted if this credit relief had come in time to save many ranchers in the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, and Nevada. Credit would do them little good, he believes, because few of them have the necessary security.

There is an abundance of feed in the west that was grown during the last season, and in many cases corrals are surrounded with alfalfa and wild hay left over from last year. Much of these two crops is expected to go to waste because ranchers do not have the money to buy cattle, and hay is selling for $5 and $6 a ton. Not only is there an abundance of cured hay going to waste but there are thousands of acres of idle grazing land in the northwest, especially in South Dakota, and there is no live stock to eat the grass.

Cattle men of the west are struggling to keep their breeding animals. Bankers have called in their loans this year, forcing many of the ranchers to sell everything they had except a few cows and calves. "Bankers in the west made a great mistake a year or more ago when they loaned cattle men twice as much money as they needed," remarked a Colorado shipper at the stockyards a few days ago. "Some of these men had never been in the cattle business before, and those who were experienced bought cattle at a high price and, in many cases, lost money. It is now working a hardship throughout the west. Banks are tight and we can't get money.

"A few days before I left home with my cattle I heard at least thirty men say they were unable to borrow money from the banks, and these same men could ordinarily borrow $10,000. The banks, however, have promised they will have plenty of money by the first of the year, but many of the men will be ruined before relief comes."

Production Costs Going Down.

Cattle men are not even able to borrow money to pay their necessary running expenses in feeding and caring for their live stock. Throughout the cattle raising districts of the west, ranchmen and their families are doing their own work. Fortunately, however, their production costs are going down.

In making comparisons on production costs during the last few years, J. J. Flemming of Forest Grove, Mont., showed how the cost of keeping cattle had decreased. Figures from his ledger show that it cost him $15.32 a head for his cows, steers, and heifers in 1918, jumping to $37.24 in 1919—following the drought—and falling back to $12.50 last winter.

High freight rates also worked a hardship on cattle men of the west as well as other sections of the country. Old time methods of getting cattle to market have been resorted to during the high freight rate period. The cattle are driven long distances in many cases in order to avoid paying transportation to the railroads. This practice is still being followed by many since the 20 per cent freight rate reduction was made on western roads.

"The 104 head of cattle that I have here today were driven more than forty miles," said Mr. Flemming. "My loading station is at Forest Grove, Mont., but by driving my cattle across the country forty miles and loading at Lavina I was able to avoid a railroad haul of 150 miles. This saved me about $1.30 a head, or about $135 on this shipment."

"The west is not only faced with a shortage of cattle and a shortage of money but the things we have to buy to run our ranches have not come down in proportion to the reduction in the prices of the products we have to sell," Mr. Fleming added. "We are in an unorganized business, and can

MARKETING looms up as the important problem before the poultry producers of the corn belt. It is just as essential for the poultry owners to seek an adequate market for their poultry and eggs as it is for the live stock men and grain growers to improve their marketing system.

Analyzing the facts that have been uncovered by E. F. Murphy in his survey of the poultry industry that is now being made for the state farm bureau in Illinois, there is evidently room for much improvement in the poultry business. There are apparently good reasons for producers to coöperate.

Since almost one-third, 32 per cent, of all the eggs produced in the United States comes from the five principal corn belt states—Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio—it becomes a marketing problem for the producers in these states and a buying problem for the consumers in eastern cities surrounded by territory where the production of eggs is extremely low. Better prices for eggs in the east is a natural outgrowth of conditions.

Prices of eggs in the heavy producing district here in the middle west have been much less than the prices paid for eggs in the east for many years. Eggs have been sold at a higher price for several years in New York and other eastern cities, and this condition will probably continue for many more years unless there are some changes made in the poultry industry.

Number of Direct Shippers Growing.

Investigation discloses the fact that most of the eggs from the central west states are sold for consumption in the eastern cities. Local prices in this heavy producing territory have been such that flock owners have found it a wise plan to do their own marketing, making direct shipments to eastern cities, and they have cleared from 3 to 16 cents net profit on each dozen.

For fifteen years producers have been quietly sending their eggs direct to the eastern markets and the survey shows that the number of direct shippers has been steadily growing during the last few years. They ship by express, many of them in case lots, and sell in eastern cities through commission men. The usual commission charge is 5 per cent, or a minimum of 40 cents a case in shipments less than car lots.

There are a few of these shippers, according to Mr. Murphy, who have shipped to eastern cities and have received "bait prices" for the first and sometimes the second shipment, but have, in a few cases, been "stung" on subsequent shipments. This, however, he says, is not the general rule.

As practical examples and not exceptional cases, the following are cited by the investigator to show why many producers in the egg section are shipping direct to eastern markets. When Illinois eggs at local points were selling at 18 to 20 cents a dozen, a certain farmer shipped a case of eggs to New York and received 34 cents a dozen after express charges were deducted. On Sept. 6, this year, when the local price for eggs at a certain town in Illinois was 26 cents a dozen, a case was shipped to New York and sold for 54 cents a dozen. The shipper was a farmer.

Another farmer in central Illinois refused 24 cents a dozen for his eggs last summer. He shipped his eggs east and received 48 cents a dozen—double what he was offered by his local dealer.

Co-operative Egg Circles Increasing.

While many individuals are shipping direct, no attempt has been made in this state to ship coöperatively. Several other states have marketed eggs through a coöperative plan. Poultry keepers of the Petaluma district of California have the largest and most successful coöperative egg marketing association in the United States. They ship most of their eggs east. Central California poultrymen in the Petaluma district marketed more than $4,500,000 worth of eggs in 1919, and did the receiving, packing, and shipping at a cost of 2.9 per cent of the sale price, or in other words, at a cost of 1 cent a dozen. The eggs were hauled across the continent.

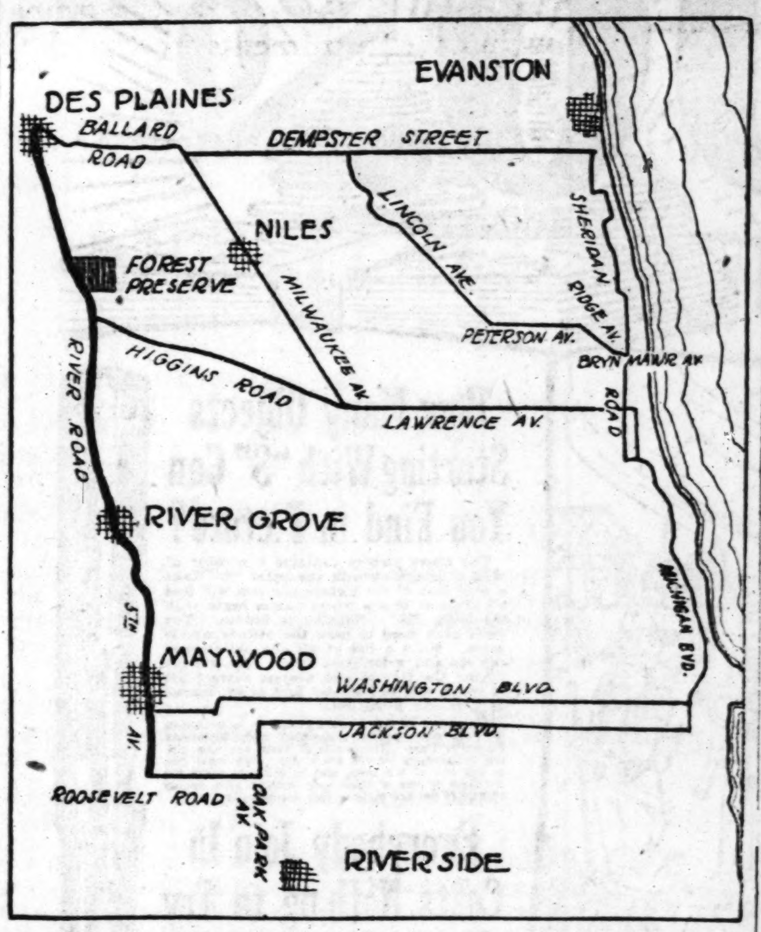
Washington State Coöperative Egg & Poultry association has approximately 16,000 members, and handles between eight and nine carloads of eggs a week. This association did a gross business of $1,500,000 during the last twelve months. Seventy-five per cent of its out of state car lot shipments of eggs go to the eastern markets. Several cars of eggs are put in cold storage every spring by this organization.

According to the Nebraska State Farm Bureau federation, one of the local county produce shipping associations handled 246 cases of eggs a week during last April. The eggs were shipped to Grand Island, Neb., and, due to coöperation, the shippers received 5 to 8 cents a dozen net more than local market price.

Oregon farmers are also marketing eggs successfully on the coöperative basis. Ohio is beginning to market eggs through coöperative egg circles; Missouri poultry keepers are forming producers' exchanges, and are marketing eggs, and New Jersey is organizing an association.

Many Iowa farmers are marketing their eggs through the coöperative channel.

MOTORDOM GREETS NEW ROAD



CLANS of the open road will gather today along the newly paved River road to celebrate the completion and final linking up of Cook county's 235 miles of continuous concrete highways. Thousands of cars, representing the social, industrial, and business interests of every city and town in the county, are expected to attend the formal opening of the "outer belt line" road, to be held at 3 p. m. in an open meadow of the Desplaines river forest preserve, near historic Talcott ford. It was at this point, a century ago, that pioneers found the single means of communication between the lake shore and the practically unsettled territory directly west of Chicago.

Now paved lines of communication, servicible every day in the year, carry all of life's necessities directly from the producers of northern Illinois into Chicago in less time than it took the pioneers to travel from the ford to the trading posts; and in addition form outlets for profit and pleasure for more than 3,000,000 people. With this year's construction work complete, they link each community in the county with every other community and with Chicago, combining all the advantages of rural activities with city life.

A half dozen paved routes lead to the scene of the highway and forest celebration arranged by the Cook county board of commissioners. All of them are good, and it is recommended that motorists use the routes most convenient to their particular sections of the city in order to avoid congestion on any road.

Edgewater motorists may use Bryn Mawr and Ridge avenues to Peterson, thence to Lincoln avenue and north in Lincoln to Dempster street in Morton Grove. Turn left in Dempster street to Milwaukee avenue, right in Milwaukee to the Ballard road, left to Des Plaines, and south in the River road to the preserve. Milwaukee avenue may be used north through Niles to make the same connection.

South side drivers may take the boulevard system and Roosevelt road to 5th avenue in Maywood and the new River road to the highway field.

An interesting program and numerous transportation features have been arranged for the formal road opening and Motordom is urged to initiate the river highway, which forms a belt line connection for the entire west county pavement system.

Among the day's features is a pageant portraying the final linking up of each city and town in Cook county with Chicago through the medium of the River road belt line. Each of the 102 towns has chosen its prettiest girl as a respresentative to meet Helen Breidert, good roads pilot of the Illinois Automobile club, who will represent Chicago. The program will also include a demonstration of airplane control of highway traffic and an airplane parachute drop.

Illinois Highway Army on Guard Against Building Delays in 1922

By J. L. Jenkins.

STRENGTH of the highway transportation movement in Illinois was demonstrated last week when the official conference in Springfield for the consideration of contractors' bids brought both industrial and political interests to bear on the long delayed building of state roads.

The conference served to stir up good roads enthusiasts in every community whose demands for paving have been consistently refused this year by Gov. Small, and to crystalize the state sentiment against political interference with the highway program. Contractors, delegations official and unofficial, and representatives of scores of business interests made the trip to Springfield, determined to force the construction issue and to guard against future delays.

See Trouble Ahead.

It was generally conceded by the highway experts that the Small highway policy is laying up a store of construction difficulties and new problems for the 1922 season that can be eliminated only through systematic planning and preparation this winter. They point out that practically all of the cheap stretches of state roads in Illinois, whose location and character makes paving under the $30,000 dead line possible, have now been selected and placed under contract, leaving the worst and most expensive mileage still uncontracted. This development is entirely contrary to the successful highway engineering principles of other states where the bad hills, heavy grades, and difficult building jobs have been tackled first. In Pennsylvania the highway department in the last two years has given closer attention to the roads that cost $60,000 and even more per mile to build than to those where the improvement can be made for $20,000 to $30,000.

It is charged that in order to cut the price as low as possible some contractors this year have been awarded jobs on their personal bonds rather than insuring their work by the more expensive bonding company method. This, engineers say, may result in financial failures and additional building delays if the contracts prove to be more expensive than the bidders' estimates.

Favor Lowden Plan.

All of the interests concerned in the Springfield meeting agreed that people of the state will not allow another year's delay in their road building and that every effort should be made during the winter months to prepare for a swift completion of the essential mileage next spring the moment weather conditions allow work to start. They recommend the plans worked out under the Lowden administration, which include a general summing up of the materials needed for the coming season, contracting with railroads to move materials in the months when many of their cars are idle, and the use of winter months to prepare the entire stage for the spring building boom.

Rumors of a possible change in the state highway specifications to help the administration "make good" on its economy propaganda meet with general denials in Springfield. Department engineers declare that the Illinois specifications have been worked out only after years of engineering study and cannot be tampered with politically. The state's attitude on this point was recently summed up by C. A. Steele, secretary of the Freeport chamber of commerce.

Sounds State Warning.

"In my opinion," he said, "highway specifications must be left to the state highway department, because only skillful and experienced engineers can give proper attention to design, supervision, draining, grading, leveling, crowning, subsoils, materials, and the weight of traffic. I mention this because I would throw in a warning to politicians that they must not give us an inferior type of road, for they will not be returned to office if they do. We do not want hard roads that will soon wear out. Ultimately we want roads of lasting quality, at least roads that will last the life of the bonds that finance their construction. We believe that only road engineers of skillful training and long experience can decide proper road specifications, and then only after careful and scientific experimenting."

The farmer division of the good roads army which has interested itself again in the highway fight cites some new economic figures to back up their demand for the building of a maximum mileage of hard roads. They consider paved highways the biggest factor in the distribution of Uncle Sam's food supply and want the advantages in every part of the state now enjoyed by farmers near the Peoria and St. Louis markets. This year a total of $13,760 has been saved in hauling hogs to the St. Louis market by motor truck over hard roads. About 7,000 head of hogs, valued at $200,000, were recently hauled

England Solves Soldier Relief by Highway Work

British Authority Urges Wider Pavements in U. S.

THAT American state and city highway departments could do nothing more practical or patriotic than to follow the example of London and give work to the unemployed former service men in the construction of public improvements is the opinion of Alfred Dryland, chief engineer for Middlesex county, England, who recently arrived in this country for a six weeks' inspection of American highways.

"We are building a fifty-six mile arterial system of new hard surfaced highways in the environs of London," said Mr. Dryland, "of which thirty-five miles are now under way. This work is to cost $6,000,000 and is undertaken at this time to afford work to thousands of unemployed former service men, and to provide means for diverting more of our heavy traffic from the heart of London.

"All told, 5,000 passenger busses are operated on London streets. In addition there are 2,000 sight-seeing busses. It is planned to add 2,000 more to those now in use. This will greatly increase the congestion of traffic. Congestion is a much greater problem in London streets than it is here.

"I came here primarily to study your Portland cement concrete roads. I have been somewhat surprised to find how well the cement roads resist the wear of rubber-tired traffic, but in the British Isles concrete roads might be at a disadvantage because we have such large numbers of iron-shod, steam-driven trucks, traction engines, and tractors. Development in England probably will be along the line of the Portland cement concrete base with the asphalt surface.

"Road building is making great progress in America, but the great weakness in your system is your partial development of width. Little attention, also, seems to be paid to the edge of the road. There is a large mileage of roads that are not up to date. You have an enormous area to develop. I have traveled more dangerous roads in the vicinity of New York than in my entire forty years of experience in England. Your roads are dangerous because the paved widths are too narrow for the amount of traffic they bear. There should be a minimum width of thirty feet of pavement, affording room for at least three vehicles to pass. The United States, however, is developing excellent pavements. It is only a question of time and money until you will lead the world both in the quantity and quality of your roads.

Question.

Do you think automobile prices have reached a reasonable level?

Where Asked.

Michigan boulevard and Washington street.

The Answers.

W. F. Austin, 5823 Magnolia avenue, real estate—I do not think that automobile prices are low enough. They could still come down about 25 per cent, and then they would be about right. Some of the smaller makes of cars are about as low as they can go.

H. Poppic, 2649 Warren avenue, deputy sheriff — The way the automobile dealers are doing business is all wrong. They are kidding the public the way they are reducing the prices. They should cut them about a third of what the prices are today and then they will have it right.

Anthony Patrice, 713 South Sholto street, salesman—I do not think that the prices of cars are at a reasonable level. I am of the opinion that they could be sold a little cheaper. The way that they have been cutting prices is all wrong. They ought to make a big cut and then quit.

Michael Wise, 1126 South Halsted street, manager — No, sir, they are not low enough to suit me. I think they should be considerable lower. During the war they raised the prices sky high, and they forgot to bring them down again. I have been waiting for them to get low enough, then I am going to buy one.

Charles C. Wilson, 734 South Claremont avenue, guard—I think the new cars ought to be a little cheaper. The second-hand cars are about the right price. It would seem there is more money in the used car business than in the new cars. If the new car prices would come down, they would sell more new cars by truck into the Indianapolis market in one day, and the Omaha market receives 187,000 hogs from motor trucks each year.

A report from the bureau of crop estimates of the United States department of agriculture shows that a motor drawn vehicle using passable highways the year around travels 25 per cent farther, makes 183 per cent more round trips, and carries 48 per cent more corn, 50 per cent more wheat, and 83 per cent more cotton than the old horse drawn vehicle. This work is done over the highways now at one-half the cost of former years.

Another hard road champion has appeared recently in the steam and street railway companies interested in the development of motor feeders. The Milwaukee street railway company decided some time ago to utilize motor buses in the extension of its service into new districts, and some of the bigger manufacturing concerns are busy developing electrically driven, trackless buses which will use trolleys but will not require steel rails. In Illinois the bus service, both in cities and between cities, is still in its infancy, awaiting the completion of the state highway program.

Piston Slaps.

You have heard your car knock when you were trying to make a hill on high. I mean that knock which sounds like some one hitting the motor—quick sharp blows with a hammer. That is a piston "slap," commonly called spark knock, or cannon knock, which is synonymous.

This knock is the piston hitting the sides of the cylinder wall, caused by increased compression, due to carbon in the firing chambers; or undersize pistons, lack of water in the radiator, or any condition which would cause the motor to overheat. No serious trouble will develop from driving with the pistons slapping, unless it is caused by overheating.

Following are some conditions which cause a motor to overheat: Lean mixture in carburetor; lack of oil in motor; lack of water in radiator; motor timed late; brakes dragging; water in radiator not circulating; running car with retarded spark; running in first or second gears for long distance; oil circulation poor; new motors, or motors newly overhauled will overheat for the first two or three hundred miles, but should not after that distance.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

"AS was and as is in locomotion" is the title of the historical exhibit arranged by Marshall Field & Co. as one of the most interesting features of its fire semi-centennial exposition. President Lincoln's state carriage, in which he rode on the night he was shot at Ford's theater, the battle scarred old prairie schooner used by the pioneer Jacob McMillan when he moved his family from Watertown, Pa., into the "far west" of Ohio in 1838, and a modern sedan link the past and present in highway transport. The exhibit has attracted much attention and comment from Chicago motorists.

Clarence A. Earl, president of the newly formed Earl Motors, Inc., an outgrowth of the old Briscoe organization, has announced the addition of $5,000,000 of new capital into the automotive undertaking he launched last March. John Fletcher, vice president of the Fort Dearborn National bank, is among the Chicago men named on the board of directors.

Considerable interest is attached to the introduction last week of the new model Gardner car for 1922. Numerous new features and refinements are noted on the jobs received by O. T. Mitchell, general manager of the Chicago Lexington company, who also handles the Gardner car.

F. B. Hutchinson, chief of the Iron City Motors company, 2337 Michigan avenue, has been appointed Chicago distributor for the new Coats steamer car.

Eddie Rickenbacker, America's ace of flyers, announced last week that the new Rickenbacker car to be produced in Detroit will have as its emblem the famous "hat in the ring" device which emblazoned the wings of Yankee airmen in France.

A. K. Hebner, president of the Bearings Service company, has announced the appointment of Frank J. Lemper as manager of the Chicago branch.

The Stewart Motor Truck company has opened a factory branch at 3028 South Wabash avenue for the distribution of Stewart trucks and parts in the Chicago district. H. S. Townsley has arrived from the Buffalo factory to assume charge of the branch personnel, which consists of factory trained men.

CORRECTING BODY SAG.

When the doors on one side of the body do not fit properly, either bind so that they are hard to close or fit too loosely, with so much clearance that the catch will not snap, the trouble may be cured by placing wooden wedges under the body at the rear. Metal plates may also be used. In either case the wedge should be bolted through the frame so that it will remain firm in place.

Cleaning the Car Becomes Fine Art In Home Garage

Modern Methods Will Keep Body New Every Day in Year

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE last two or three years have brought a very remarkable development in American body building. The mechanism of the modern motor car has reached an approximate degree of perfection, leaving the manufacturers free to devote more time to increasing the attractiveness of the vehicle. The present day American car as it leaves the factory is really a thing of beauty with its highly polished surfaces and shiny metal. Naturally this has induced the owner to take more pride in keeping up the appearance of the gasoline steed. The result is that cleaning methods and equipment have greatly advanced over those of a few years back.

The present day owner using modern methods may keep his car looking new all the time, nor will he have to spend more than a few moments a day to accomplish this end. For instance, there are now on the market a number of liquid and wax polishes which will give admirable results if they are used as directed.

In the use of wax polishes the first step is to clean the body of the car thoroughly. The polish is applied to the surface with a piece of cheese cloth and then another clean cloth is used to distribute the wax evenly all over the surface. Car owners commonly make the mistake of thinking that the more wax applied the better. As a matter of fact a very thin film is all that is needed.

The most recent type of body polish is that which is sprayed on the surface with a large sprayer. In using this polish the body must first be thoroughly cleaned with water. If the body surfaces are merely dusty the polish may be sprayed on and then be wiped off with a clean cloth. After spraying the polish over the surface a piece of cheese cloth is used to wipe off the excess. There is no necessity for vigorous rubbing.

Washing the car is not the casual job some owners seem to imagine. To begin with, the car should be washed immediately after it has been dirty. If mud is allowed to remain on the varnished surface more than a day it is difficult to eradicate it. For the washing plain water should be used, neither too hot nor too cold, about 50 degrees Fahrenheit being the proper temperature. A large sponge soaked in clear water and then sopped against the surface so that the water trickles down is best. Never turn a stream of water at high pressure on the body. This will grind thick particles of sand and other grit into the varnish to the detriment of the finish. The idea is to float the mud or dirt off the surface.

Soap should never be used on the body except for removing grease or oil spots. A small piece of soft cloth, well covered with castile soap suds, serves very well to remove grease from the panels.

In drying the body a clean chamois skin should be used, rubbing being done in straight lines. If spots of tar or road oil are found on the body it is best to treat them with salt butter or kerosene. The butter softens the deposit so that it may be wiped off easily. Kerosene should be applied locally and wiped off within a minute.

To keep pace with the improved appearance of the body it is necessary to give some attention to the top and the upholstery. A weekly brushing of the top, inside and out, will aid materially in its life. Fabric tops should never be cleaned with gasoline, kerosene, or other oils, as they tend to destroy the rubber in the top. Castile soap and water applied with a stiff brush is the best cleansing medium for the top. The upholstery ought really to be cleaned once a week. This means not only wiping the surface of the cushions, but cleaning out the dirt that inevitably accumulates under the piping and in the corners. After the dust has been removed leather upholstery may be cleaned with a cloth soaked in a weak solution of ammonia and water. Castile soap and water are also used on leather, but gasoline should not be employed, because it tends to cause cracking. The leather should be treated occasionally by giving it a light coating of linseed oil, thinned with vinegar. This solution should be applied with a cloth and be allowed to remain for a few hours, after which the upholstery should be wiped. For imitation leather, soap and water may be used for removing spots and linseed or sweet oil in small quantities for brightening the finish.

After examining the running gear of the ordinary car one might be tempted to forego telling the owner how to clean this part of the vehicle. However, a stick for removing incrustations of mud, soap and water and a good stiff brush will make this job not so bad after all. Mud deposits on such parts as torque tubes, universal housings, rear axle brake drums, etc., ought to be removed, as they have a destructive effect in time. In flushing parts of the undergear with water care should be taken not to let the fluid get into the bearing surfaces. This refers to such parts as the braking system and steering mechanism.

A final plea. Be sure that all paraphernalia, cloths, sponges chamois skins, etc., used in cleaning the polished surfaces are clean themselves before you employ them. Sponges are peculiarly liable to have sand in them even new ones. They should be washed out in warm water before use.

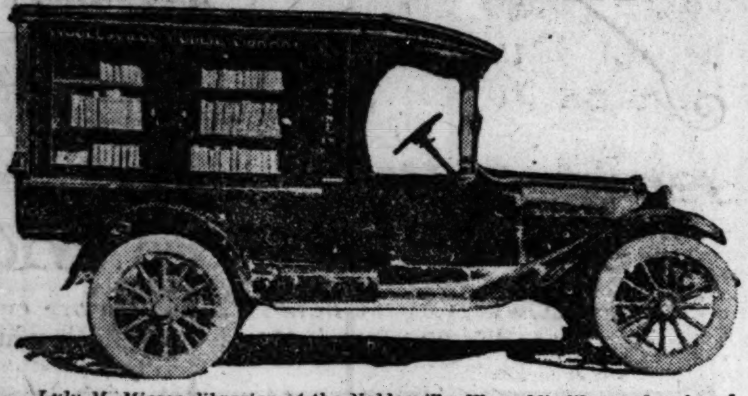
CULTURE TAKES A RIDE



Lulu M. Miesse, librarian of the Noblesville, Ill., public library, has found a new field for the motor car in the distribution of good books through rural districts. This traveling library covers thirty miles of country roads daily, moving on a regular schedule through the library district, distributes and collects its books and makes good reading possible for hundreds of out of the way homes. It is equipped with a large bell, which announces its approach to the farmhouses.

Motor Captains Report Growing Demand for Cars

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—More than one hundred leading automobile manufacturers of the country and their representatives last Friday attended the regular fall meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, 366 Madison avenue, where many views regarding the future status of the industry were presented. Sentiment was unanimous that with a more satisfactory adjustment of wages and material costs the motor industry would speedily return to a better sales and production standard. Reports to the meeting from many parts of the country indicated an increasing demand for automobiles and a spirit of optimism toward the business outlook for 1922.

Magnus W. Alexander, managing director of the national industrial conference board, who recently returned from an investigation of business conditions in Europe, addressed the afternoon session on industrial problems of the present time. He showed that the cost of living has fallen more rapidly within the last year than wages and said that a satisfactory adjustment of the unemployment problem could not be reported until labor recognized the necessity of accepting a lower wage, in keeping with the lowered cost of living.

Drawings were held for space at the national automobile show Jan. 7 to 14 in the Grand Central palace. All the available space was taken supplying room for ninety-four different makes of cars, and several applications could not be filled.

No-Accident Week Develops Twenty Rules for Safety

HERE are twenty rules to be observed this week in the "no accident" campaign:

Get a book of traffic rules, learn them, and live up to them.

Never drive faster than the speed limit. Speeding is responsible for a large majority of automobile accidents.

Never cut in and out of traffic.

Never cut to the left of a street car. You never know what is coming toward you on the opposite track or whether some one is crossing the street in front of the car and may walk right into your path.

Never pass a standing street car taking on or discharging passengers.

Never drive in wet street car tracks. They cause more skidding accidents than all other things combined.

Never try to pass another vehicle while trying to cross the street. You cannot see what is on the other side of the vehicle you are trying to pass. They may successfully dodge it and run into your path.

Don't follow another car too close, especially a Ford; it may stop suddenly without giving you a signal; you cannot stop or get out of the way. A rear end collision.

Never fail to stop at boulevard crossing; it may look safe to do so, but you cannot take it all in at a glance. People on the boulevards expect you to stop because it is a law.

Never fail to have your car under perfect control when crossing streets where there are blind corners.

Never try to pass a street car coming to a stop or starting up. People often jump off street cars when coming to a stop. Generally they are thinking of something else when they look up and see they are at their corner, and then run to the back and jump off after the car has started. The back doors of a street car are never closed.

Never make a right hand turn from the middle of the street. Always get as near the curb as possible.

Never try to make a left hand turn from the right hand side of the street; get to the center of the street.

Never cut corners when making a turn; go to the middle of the cross street and then make the turn.

Never try to blow children off the streets with your horn; it can't be done

Have your car under such control that you can stop in an emergency. You never know what is in those little minds; you never know what they will do next.

Never drive your car unless your brakes are in good working order.

Never drive your car at night with glaring headlights.

Never figure that pedestrians are always going to get out of your way. They are in a hurry the same as you are, and in their hurry take many chances in crossing the streets.

Never pass to the right of another car when driving on the boulevards; always pass to the left.

Never fail to signal the fellow behind you with your hand when slowing down, when turning a corner, when coming to a stop.

"Lean" Defined

On a bright snappy morning you step on the starter and the motor starts, runs for a second, and stops. You try it again, and it does better but when you feed a little more gas "pop, pop," and the motor dies.

That is caused by too lean a mixture. But you ask yourself why—why does it "pop."

First you must form a mental picture of the four cycles or strokes of a piston, namely, the intake, compression power, and exhaust; strokes also picture the valves, on the intake stroke, as the piston goes down. The intake valve opens, allowing the suction of the piston to draw gas from the carburetor into the cylinder; then the intake valve closes, the exhaust valve also remains closed, and the piston starts up on compression stroke. When it reaches the top dead center or 10 degrees past, the spark occurs, and the compressed gas explodes and drives the piston down on the power stroke. The exhaust valve then opens as the piston comes up, and forces the burned gases out through the exhaust valve, manifold, and out the muffler.

When the mixture is too lean there still remains in the cylinder certain quantities of burning gases which can not be forced out by the piston on exhaust stroke. Under this condition, as the intake opens and the piston starts down on the next intake stroke, the burning gases, which still remain in the cylinder, ignite the new intake charge and the flash is followed out the intake valve to the intake, manifold then to the carburetor, hence the "pop."

Grant Park Area Is Prepared for Open Air Storage

FREE parking for automobiles under the Boulevard Link bridge is discontinued for the winter months after Oct. 8, according to announcement made by the Chicago Motor club. The club has maintained this service to motorists throughout the summer months and has cared for an average of more than 250 cars per day without charge of any sort.

The board of south park commissioners is preparing an inclosure in Grant park, in which more than 1,600 motor cars may be parked daily. They will be watched by police and other attendants to prevent thefts of cars or accessories.

A tract of the park at the foot of Monroe street has been designated by the south park commission as a parking space and a high wire fence about his tract will be erected. Cars may be parked in this inclosure at the nominal charge of 25 cents per day and all these cars will be carefully guarded by park employés.

Adequate lighting will be installed by the commissioners and the space will be open from 7:30 or 8 a. m. until midnight, affording parking space not only for business people, but for theater crowds in the evening as well. The charge of 25 cents was determined upon as the smallest possible amount which would care for the salaries of the two shifts of attendants it will be necessary to employ at the inclosure.

Metal Punch.

The car owner who does his own work will often find a use for a sheet metal punch, and he can easily make one for himself, employing an ordinary vise as the basic tool. The two special jaws must be made or bought, one of the members being male and the other female. With these jaws attached to the vise and the sheet metal between, screwing up the vise punches the hole.

First Aid.

In cases of emergency it is possible to attach a cable to the battery by stripping back the insulation for two or three inches, prying apart the strands and then placing a washer on each side of the cable, after which the nut is screwed down, holding the cable firmly in place.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

by Alfred Stephen Bryan

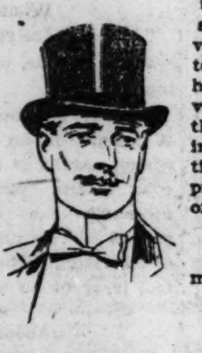
Why Is the High Hat in Such Low Esteem?

NEW YORK.—It is true enough that men's clothes lack the far flung range, the rainbow play of color, and the picturesque inspiration of bygone periods from which women's fashions draw their ever changing spice and charm. Yet much has been done of late to relieve the darksomeness and monotony of masculine dress.

Time was, and not so long ago, when a man's cravat and shirt vouchsafed the only opportunity to express his taste in color. Today it may be expressed in his handkerchief, hosiery, and hat; in his muffler, cap, waistcoat, and even in his collar, which, sometimes matching the pattern of the shirt, lends an added touch of "cheerio."

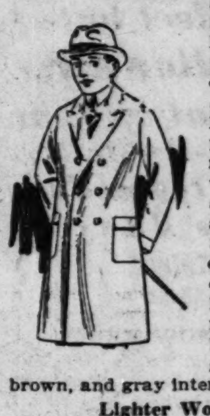
Then, too, sporting outfits have become more colorful both in patterns like plaids and shepherds' checks for knickers, as well as in brightly banded stocking tops and in ornately trimmed white and black and white and tan shoes, not to mention brilliant knitted jackets in pale tan, green, and the like. So you see men's dress of today is not so bereft of color as the uninformed might fancy.

The Handsomest of Hats.



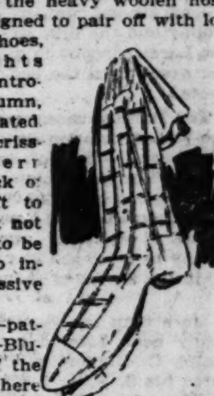
It might as well be admitted that the silk hat is much less worn than it used to be, and certainly much less than it should be. It is the handsomest of hats, besides giving a tilt to the head and a lift to the shoulder which are instinctive. The block of the silk hat changed back some time ago from the French form to the English, which is more becoming to most men. The hat to accompany evening dress, portrayed, is a prepossessing shape for autumn, with its bellied crown and fairly broad brim, slightly curled. It is worn rather low upon the forehead. The collar is the poke and the bow knot tie is narrow and elongated.

Heathers and Herringbones.



The double breasted top coat is a well established type, little subject to seasonal shifts of fashion. It is more informal than the single breasted overgarment and less figure tracing. Pictured is one of these autumn coats having three buttons, peaked lapels, and patch pockets. It is cut rather straight, with but the slightest in curve at the waist line. Such a coat is procurable in tweeds, coverts, heathers, homespuns, herringbones, and like stuffs of tan, green, blue, brown, and gray intermixtures.

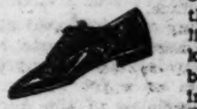
Lighter Wool Hose.



In place of the heavy woolen hose, originally designed to pair off with low brogued shoes, lighter weights have been introduced for autumn, as illustrated. This is a criss-cross pattern cashmere sock of sufficient heft to be warm, yet not so heavy as to be clumsy or to induce excessive perspiration.

Varnished—patent leather—Blucher shoes of the type shown here are still much in vogue for the dance. They have plain toe caps, flexible soles, and square heels. The right way to "break in" varnished shoes is to lift yourself on the ball of the foot with toes pointed inward. Raise and lower three or four times, and the shoes should assume proper and permanent grooves instead of cracking at random.

Last Minute Modes of the Week.



A different sort of belt, expressly meant for evening dress, is made of thinnest pigskin on the outside, the inside being lined with white kidskin. There being no stitching, there can be no stretching. This belt is also perspiration proof.

The so-called creole gaiter boot for evening use has neither buttons nor laces, but elastic side gores, with pull straps fore and aft. Such a boot, worn for dancing, cannot flip at the heel, as the pump is prone to do.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

A New HUDSON $1895

A Greater Super-Six for Less Money

See It Here Today

It is a handsomer car
It is easier to operate
It is improved in many mechanical features

It is more economical
It has the exclusive Super-Six features for increasing car life

These improvements are added to the car that men for six years have given the largest buying preference of all fine cars. They are advantages of commanding importance; fundamental in the results secured.

Every phase of car operation is affected. Greater economy results. A smoother, finer mechanism in all ways, from starting and handling throughout the entire range of its performance, is manifestly evident in the first ride.

And these are permanent values you will take satisfaction and delight in, for all the years you drive the car.

Hudson has never announced a "new car," upon the strength of mere minor improvements and refinements. These, of course, have been constantly in progress since the first Super-Six was brought out. Nor has the mere addition or re-dressing of a car with accessories ever seemed to us justifiable grounds upon which to exploit the interest of motorists in a new car.

Why This Great Public Acclaim?

Hence we felt sure that the public would know there were genuine and basic changes and improvements in Hudson when we announced a New Super-Six. And the almost universal interest manifested at the first showings of these cars confirms our confidence fully.

All the notable qualities for which Hudson is known are retained in the new Hudson. There is even greater performance ability than enabled the old Hudson to set its famous records. Although the Hudson factory has participated in no contests for nearly five years, reminders of its performance supremacy are constantly present in the independently operated Super-Sixes that methodically win prize money in all important motor contests.

Performance Leadership Is Strengthened

Just recently a non-professional driver converted an old Super-Six at little cost and entered it in the Pike's Peak hill climb against teams of high priced cars, specially built, factory managed and professionally driven. The Super-Six Special won its race and the Penrose trophy in 19 min. 16.2 sec., the fastest time in which this course was ever covered, except by another Super-Six, which in 1916 set the unequalled course record of 18 min. 24 sec.

No car, at any price, can share all the advantages of the new Hudson Super-Six. And only a few of the costliest share even a portion of them.

See the new Hudson and ride in it. Then decide whether any car lacking equivalent qualities can possibly compare with it?

AVIATION

POWERED WITH TWO OX5'S

Omaha Meet to Be Stellar Air Event of Year

Pulitzer Trophy Race Draws Many Entries

BY MORROW KRUM.

REPORTS from Omaha, Neb., indicate that the international aero congress to be held there Nov. 3, 4, and 5 in conjunction with the second annual contest for the Pulitzer trophy and the first annual contest for the Larsen trophy is going to be a bigger event than the backers at first expected.

The Pulitzer race, now recognized as the stellar aviation event of the year, is drawing entries from all over the United States. A low speed limit of 140 miles an hour has been placed, and it is expected that Lieut. C. C. Mosley's record of last year—169 miles an hour—may be broken. The purse that will go to the winner of this race is $3,000.

More than twelve airplanes have already been entered in the contest. Ralph C. Diggins of Chicago has entered his S. V. A. scout. S. E. J. Cox of Texas has entered the "Texas Wildcat" and the "Cactus Kitten." The "Wildcat" was a contestant in the Gordon Bennett race in Paris two years ago. Emery Rogers of Venice, Cal., has entered his Mercury Special, and from Mexico City comes the entrance check of the "El Cocaroche," a 160 mile an hour plane with an eight foot span. Al Johnson of Dayton, O., has entered an L. V. G., a German ship with an unusual speed, and the mail service has designed and built a special monoplane with D. H. wings and a 300 horse power Hispano motor. A Kansas City firm has entered a V. G. 3.

To date the army and the naval air services have refused to compete in the classic, announcing that no appropriation has been made for such an expenditure, but officials of the Aero Club of Omaha, directors of the race, and the congress of airmen are attempting to get both arms of the government air forces into the contest.

More than $18,000 in prizes have been set up for different contests to be held during the congress. There are races for all types of planes. The event that ranks next to the Pulitzer race is the Larsen trophy race. The first prize in this race has been set at $3,000, and the prize money totals $6,000 for this one event. Points will be given on efficiency of the contesting airplanes, according to the formula (w—g—t)s, in which "w" equals the total weight of the airplane leaving the ground; "g" equals amount of gas actually consumed; "t" equals the weight of plane leaving the ground minus gas, oil, and water, and "s" equals miles per hour actually made over the course.

Besides the aerial contests, there will be a general reunion of all airmen, of all service aviators, of all men who became aces in the war, and of all commercial pilots. An effort will be made during the congress to form a national organization of airmen.

Maj. Reed Landis, the Chicago ace, is already making efforts to form an organization of Illinois aviators. The major and his father, Judge K. M. Landis, will attend the convention. Eddie Rickenbacker, "ace of American aces," will attend the congress.

There will be held in conjunction with the races and the congress an indoor and an outdoor exposition of aircraft, in which every manufacturer of aircraft in America will have exhibits.

Flying Along

Operating a daily passenger, freight, and mail aerial transport service, Aeromarine Airways in six months made more than 160 flights to and from Key West, Fla., and Havana, Cuba, at an average speed of ninety-six minutes per flight over the 110 miles separating the two terminals.

More than 1,100 passengers were carried in that period. Approximately 26,042 pounds of United States and Cuban mail were carried between the two cities. Aeromarine navy flying cruisers accommodating eleven passengers were employed in this service.

Aeromarine Airways also operates out of New York city along Atlantic and New England coast and inland waterways.

Is It True?

An airplane capable of landing without the need of a large aviation field, able to rise without a long run beforehand, able to travel more than 300 miles an hour, and, if necessary, to meander along at but a few miles an hour, is announced as the invention of an Italian engineer, Epaminanda Bertucci of Rome. The inventor claims that he already tried out the machine on a small scale and regards his first experiments as indicative of the success of the invention. The new machine is primarily intended for aerial war chasing and is to be armed with a machine gun. It is a monoplane.

Food by Air.

The British air ministry was prepared to transport and distribute food throughout the United Kingdom had the recent threatened railway strike materialized.

What Are—?

"What do the following words mean—zoom, biplane, archy, contact, strafing, joystick? J. J. H."

A zoom is a sudden upward climb. A biplane is an airplane with two wings. Archy is anti-aircraft fire. A pilot shouts "contact" to tell the mechanic the ignition switch is turned on. Strafing means worrying or harassing. The joystick is the control lever of an airplane.

Germans Making Great Advances in Air Gliders

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Forbidden by the armistice terms to install engines in any airplanes it may construct, Germany is now experimenting with engineless airplanes, and has developed gliders capable of a five mile sustained flight, according to Handley Page, the English aircraft expert, who has just returned from a visit to Germany.

The most successful type of glider which Germany has built is called the Munich. It has but few of the features of the engine driven airplane, being without an engine, propellers, undercarriage, wheels, ailerons, or elevators. It has simply a fusilage and moveable wings, which are operated by the pilot. So far thirty successful flights have been made in this machine.

Another type, the Aachen, lands on skids, instead of wheels. Shock absorbers are fitted to these skids, but the landing speed of the machine can be reduced to little more than a fast walk, and wheels thus become unnecessary.

The gliders are launched upon their flights by a catapault device. The machines are placed at the crest of a little hill and anchored. Rubber hawsers are attached to the chassis and put under tension. When the machine is released it shoots into the air and is enabled to rise and fly by the operation of the moveable wings.

The gliders include both monoplanes and biplanes, and some of the smaller machines have been built by engineering students at a cost of $125 apiece.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

TO MY LITTLE HEATHEN.

When mother bids you kneel and pray
Beside your crib at close of day,
A heathen you delight to be
Although a Christian child of three—
You show a most unseemly speed
As if for prayer you felt no need,
And will not kneel in proper mood
With reverential attitude.

SON (kneeling with great effort):
Now I lay down to heep
DOOD NIGHT! (Gets up.)
MOTHER:
Not "good night." Kneel down and finish your prayer.
SON (sits down on floor):
Pray Lord tol to teep
DOOD NIGHT! (Rolls over on his back.)
MOTHER:
Don't be always saying "Good night." Kneel up and start all over again.

That every evening you should pray
In this abandoned, godless way,
Has filled your mother's heart with woe—
A situation you should know—
For once aware of how she feels
I'm positive our soft appeals
Will touch you to your little core
And you will pray like this no more.

SON (sitting on heels):
'Fi hood die 'fore I hake
DOOD NIGHT. (Starts to climb into bed.)
MOTHER:
Please! PLEASE! Sit up and say your prayers right.
SON (chinning himself on bed):
Hope Lord tol to take
DOOD NIGHT. DOOD NIGHT.
(Catches sight of cat and chases it out into the kitchen.)
MOTHER (chasing son who is chasing cat):
Come back here! COME BACK HERE! O, there never was such a child!

Wheaton Plants 500 Trees Along Roosevelt Road

By Leola Allard.

Those wishing to purchase bronze markers for memory trees on the highways may do so by writing to State Adjutant William Q. Setliffe of the American Legion, 111 West Washington street, Chicago. Any state or city wishing them may buy them here. The Legion has secured the lowest possible price on the markers, which will be sunk into cement or stone and contain 240 names to the marker, or less if desired. Adjutant Setliffe will take charge of all orders for markers and will see that they are delivered when they are wanted. The price is [illegible] per name and the regulation size [illegible] names.

WHEATON, Ill., proudly announces its effort and achievement in securing for that suburb four miles of memory trees for the Wheaton soldiers of the late war. For two miles leading into the city and two miles leading out of it, on Roosevelt road, there will be planted 500 beautiful trees.

Already the committee has the trees and the money to mark them in bronze along the highway. Not only that, but Wheaton, in its heart, is hoping that other suburbs will join in making the remainder of Roosevelt road a memory avenue and plant their trees between the cities of Elmhurst, Lombard, Glen Ellyn, Wheaton, West Chicago, Geneva, and to the Lincoln highway. It is dropping hints that it would be a wonderful thing to do, and it would be an ill wind that wouldn't carry the suggestion.

Mrs. Will H. Lyford of Wheaton, who was chairman of the memory tree committee, tells the story of Wheaton's accomplishment. She is earnest in her praise of Capt. Gail Reed, commander of the La Verne T. Parrottet post of the American Legion. He did much to make the campaign a success, she declares. This is Mrs. Lyford's story. It should be an inspiration to other suburbs that are thinking of making their memory roads soon.

No Drives for Money.

"I was made chairman and Capt. Reed and Mrs. Stough were first and second vice chairmen. The organizations represented nearly every phase of community life. Plans were presented by the representatives of each church to the families of men whose names appeared on service flags or honor rolls of the churches, and they were given an opportunity to contribute one or more trees to their soldiers, sailors, and marines. In the case of men without parents, the churches have provided for trees, and individuals who had no members of their families in the war volunteered to contribute one or more trees.

"There has been no compulsion, no solicitation, no drives to secure funds. The plan met with generous approval and assistance; in a few cases by good sized checks, and in one by the gift of 100 trees.

"The tree selected is the white elm and the road the Roosevelt road, which is in itself a memory road. The contract for the trees, their planting, and maintenance for three years, is to be given to one nurseryman, who will be selected by E. L. Gates, the commissioner of highways. The funds are in the custody of L. L. Hiatt, the treasurer, and their disbursement is subject to the approval of the committee."

Dedication on Memorial Day.

The trees are to be planted this fall—500 of them—and are to be marked and dedicated on or immediately before Memorial day, 1922. The matter of markers and verification of names is in the hands of Commander Reed.

The program for the dedicatory exercises has been turned over to a committee from the Women's Department club of Wheaton.

MEMORY TREES

Saginaw, Mich., is growing these 2,000 walnut trees for roadside planting. They were walnuts from Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington. Left to right: Senator Harvey A. Penny, father of the legislative measure, providing for planting of roadside trees on highways; C. A. Reed of the United States department of agriculture, and William S. Linton of the Northern Nut Growers' association. These trees are to be a joint memorial to the world war soldiers and the father of his country.

ASTRONOMY

A LEGEND OF THE BEAR.

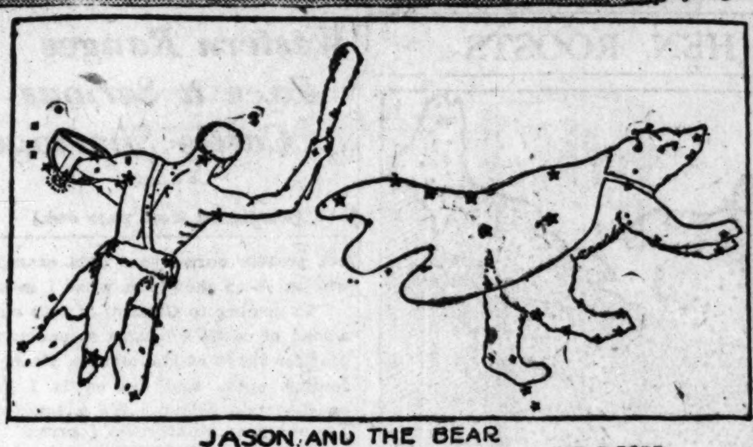
THE Dipper is the best known constellation of all. It never sets. Somewhere, every night, it can be seen as it wheels round the pole. It comes swinging down and following close behind it Arcturus, the Bear Driver star.

The Dipper is not a true constellation in itself, but is only a part of the much larger group called Ursa Major, or the Great Bear. There is a legend that you must hear about how Arcturus and the Bear came to be.

When Jason and the Argonauts returned to Ialcus by the sea, bearing the Golden Fleece with them, Pelion the king, was wild with fear and hatred. The prophecy surely now would be fulfilled, and Jason would succeed him to his father's throne.

You remember that Pelion was Jason's uncle, a wicked man, concerning whom many tales were told. When Jason was a little boy Pelion had driven him and his father out and seized the rich town of Ialcus for himself. But it was foretold that some day a man would come before him wearing but one sandal, who was to be king in his stead. Pelion, ever wary of this man, had an officer whose sole duty it was to look after the feet of all the people who came into the presence of the king, but in spite of all his precautions half the prophecy came true. Jason, grown to manhood, but not knowing who he was, returned. As he journeyed toward the town he met an old woman, poorer than himself, and gave her one of his sandals. Trudging into town one shoe off and one shoe on, he came squarely face to face with his uncle as the latter was about to make the sacrifice. And now he had come back again from what seemed certain death and Pelion's peril was as great as ever.

The king did not dare to kill him for his nephew was too popular. Neither could he have him slain, because the body would be sure to be discovered, and every one knew of the enmity he bore the hero. Pelion thought of many ways that he might be rid of him and at length he laid a plot. There was a stream up in the mountains near Ialcus whose water bore a charm.



JASON AND THE BEAR

BY S. R. MAXWELL

Should any one set foot in it while a wish was being uttered he would forthwith be turned to what was wished. This was a scheme indeed! He would lure Jason there and turn him into a bear, with never a trace of suspicion upon himself.

He sent for Jason and suggested that they go out to seek the rainbow's end, playing in the hills beyond the town. There, he said, were riches far transcending even the wondrous golden fleece. The two walked out together and came at last to the charmed rivulet.

"Let us not cross on the stones," said Pelion. "We will wash our feet by wading through these cool waves."

But Jason had already sprung out on a stone, and, looking back, he saw his uncle watching him from the bank and himself not deigning to come near the water. His face was venomous with hate and Jason knew that there was peril near.

"Why do you hang back?" he cried. "Come, we will wade across together or I will keep on these dry stones."

Pelion dared not refuse outright, and he, too, began to step from stone to stone, cursing Jason beneath his breath and saying, "Become a bear, become a bear," hoping that the young man would slip and wet his foot before he was across.

But Jason leaped along the stones, and never once did his foot touch water. As Pelion saw him slipping from the trap, great rage welled in his heart; he cursed him aloud, and as he cursed he quite forgot himself and slipped. His foot went in, and Jason heard a growl. Looking back, he saw a shaggy bear come shambling through the water with a great splashing, with Pelion's crown upon its head and dressed in the kingly robes.

He realized the fate he had so narrowly missed.

"Foul beast," he cried, "'tis fitting that you should yourself receive the fate you meant for me!" He snatched the crown away, and with a club he drove the bear back to the town.

The people saw him coming, his club upraised, the crown about his arm, the ambling bear in front still trailing Pelion's soiled and muddy garments. The prophecy was fulfilled. Jupiter laughed aloud when he beheld the sight, and to make the lesson always visible he set the stars of Jason and the bear up in the sky.

Arcturus, the bear driver, as Jason is now known, prods the beastly king across the sky each night, and so that none can forget the bear never sets but is forced to wear his besmirched robes always before the gaze of men.

Illustrating how gasoline condenses on the side walls and at bottom of the manifold and is drawn into the cylinders in liquid form when the Re-Atomizer is not used.

Stops Liquid Gasoline from diluting the Crankcase Oil

Do you know tests have proven that the crank case oil in the average car is diluted by liquid gasoline getting into the crank case at the rate of 1% each hour the motor is running?

After only a few hours' running the oil is too thin to lubricate the motor efficiently. Excessive wear occurs, and within a few months' time your car sounds and acts like an old car instead of running perfectly, as it should.

How It Works and What It Does

The PENBERTHY RE-ATOMIZER keeps liquid gasoline out of the cylinders and crank case.

It traps the gasoline as it collects on the side walls of the manifold, feeds it into a powerful air stream which re-atomizes it completely and passes it on evenly into all cylinders.

The Re-Atomizer not only prevents dilution of the crank case oil, but will make an astonishing improvement in the operation of your motor. Liquid gasoline is the chief cause of carbon deposits in the cylinders. Carbon chokes the motor and makes it hard to start and slow to warm up—makes it lazy on the "get-away."

The Re-Atomizer prevents all of this. It will make a marked improvement in the operation of your car—make it get away faster, develop more power, start more easily, warm up quicker and actually save you from 15 to 25% of your gasoline cost.

FARM AND GARDEN

Reduced Yield Sends Cotton Prices Soaring

COTTON growers of the south refute the current reports that they are facing starvation. Quite to the contrary, they are in good condition, making rapid recovery in their buying power, instead of losing $300,000,000 as a result of a decrease of 5,000,000 bales of cotton from a normal crop of 12,000,000 bales.

In writing to THE TRIBUNE, Frank A. Briggs, editor of Farm and Ranch, Dallas, Tex., says that when the government reported a probable yield of 7,031,000 bales, uninformed jugglers of figures told the price of cotton and multiplied it by 2,500,000,000, and the story of the tremendous loss to the south was created.

Farmers took part in the reduction of the cotton yield themselves. According to Mr. Briggs, cotton farmers, encouraged by bankers, merchants, and other business men, deliberately reduced the production of cotton by cutting the acreage 30 per cent. Boll wevil and other pests completed the job of holding production to the point within the limits of probable consumption with most satisfying results to the farmers, merchants, and bankers alike.

Whole Cotton Belt Benefits.

He explains that a 12,000,000 bale cotton crop, added to more than a normal holdover, would have resulted in reducing price levels to 8 cents a pound and below. At 8 cents a pound, middling basis, a 12,000,000 bale crop would have sold for not more than $480,000,000. Farmers are now selling at 20 cents and above, and he believes that 20 cents is the minimum for this crop.

At 20 cents a pound the 7,000,000 bale crop will sell for $700,000,000, or $320,000,000 more than a 12,000,000 bale crop would have brought. The whole cotton belt has profited by this increase in price.

In Texas alone the advance increased the value of the cotton crop more than $100,000,000. This has had much to do with strengthening the economic position of the southern states. The condition brought about by the reduced acreage and the advance in the price of cotton has been greatly aided by the resumption of activities in the mills and the money made available by the war finance corporation to finance the sale of cotton abroad.

Surplus Acreage for Food.

Changes in marketing are also having some effect. Twelve per cent of this year's crop is said to be contracted by the growers to be handled through the pooling system. With a holdover of 9,194,000 bales—practically all of it in the hands of the producer—added to the 7,000,000 bales produced this year, it means that there is a good supply of cotton in spite of the decrease in acreage. The ten year average is 13,008,000 bales.

"There are other phases which enter into and strengthen the economic position of the south, particularly in Texas and other states of the southwest," writes Mr. Briggs. "Farmers have planted their surplus acreage to food and foodstuffs, and the harvest has been bountiful. More farmers have lived at home, boarded at home, and put in full time in their fields than ever before. They have economized and they produced this year's cotton to sell for 10 cents a pound and less. Therefore, the advance in price has enabled them to pay off old debts and once again become factors of importance as consumers of manufactured products."

Want a Uniform Crop.

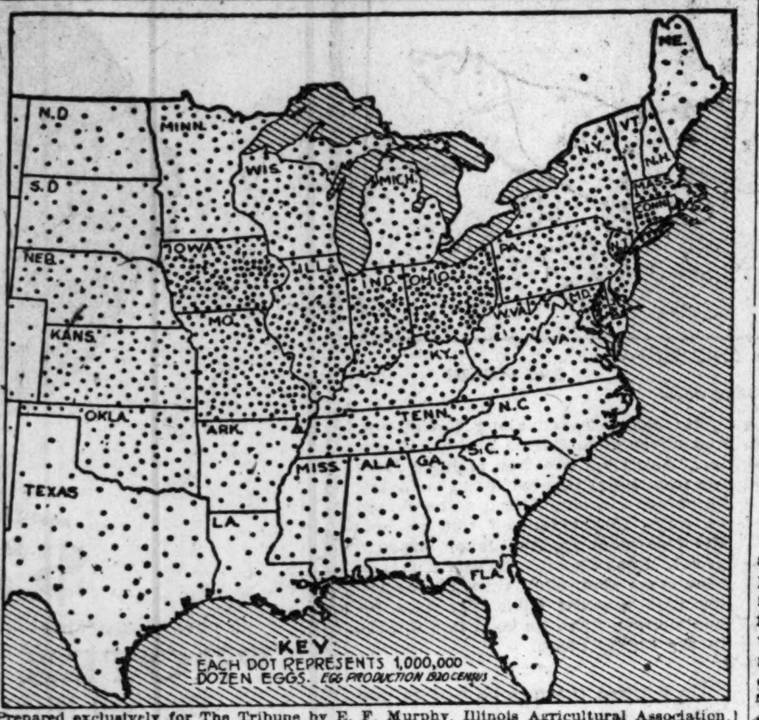
He adds that the general tendency of the southern farmer is to produce more and better cotton of a uniform staple per acre, but to reduce acreage so that the probable yield will fit the probable consumption, thereby insuring a cost plus price and making it a real money crop.

Diversification in connection with live stock is becoming general in the south. The south produced more food and foodstuffs in 1921 than any other year in its history, according to Mr. Briggs, and there is an abundance of food and an ample supply of it to spare.

Conditions in the south changed almost over night. Thousands of farmers, who were apparently in difficult circumstances a few weeks ago, are now ready to go through the winter comfortably. But all of the southern cotton growers' good fortune has not come through the change in the price of cotton. Cotton was not the only big crop grown in the south.

Texas, for example, with 3,000,000 acres more cultivatable land than Iowa, has produced live stock valued at $589,321,000; dairy products valued at $87,800,000; poultry products valued at $43,400,000, and crude oil valued at $120,000,000. Cotton and cotton seed are, of course, of greater value than any other single crop grown in Texas, but the combined value of other crops grown in that state this year is more than twice the value of cotton.

WHERE THE HEN ROOSTS



[Prepared exclusively for The Tribune by E. F. Murphy, Illinois Agricultural Association.]

BIGGEST NEST OF EGGS IN U. S.—Each dot represents 1,000,000 dozens of eggs. Approximately one-third of all the eggs produced in this country each year comes from the hens' nests of the corn belt. Of the 1,656,267,200 dozens of eggs produced in the United States in 1919, 529,137,201 dozens were produced in Iowa, Missouri Illinois, Ohio, and Indiana. The dots are less dense on the western coast, where intensified methods of poultry raising are practiced. Total production of eggs in the three Pacific coast states is less than that of any one of the five corn belt states, except Indiana.

Western Ranges Face a Serious Cattle Shortage

not protect ourselves. This example will serve to show you what I mean.

"In coming to Chicago in 1918 with a load of cattle I bought a mackinaw coat for $16.50 at Montevideo, Minn., a feeding point, and the cattle I had on that trip sold for $15 a hundred. Yesterday at Montevideo I priced the same grade of mackinaw, and the clerk wanted $15 for it, only $1.50 reduction since 1918, and today I sold my steers—the same grade of steers I sold in 1918—for $5.50 a hundred or $9.50 less than I got three years ago."

Rancher's Pockets Empty.

In spite of the fact that the movement of western range cattle this season is several thousand short compared with the number of range cattle marketed last year and the year before, the steers are leaving the northwestern plaines at a comparatively rapid rate if the estimated shortage of herds in the west is at all correct The marketing of many thousands of range cattle every week will probably continue as long as the weather is fair.

Meeting with a low market, because of the poor outlet for beef, the rancher has little left in his pocket with which to continue his business after he has paid his debts. His debts were incurred while the dollar was inflated, and he is now having to pay with a deflated dollar.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Presbyterian Seminary Opens Doors to Layman

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

PEOPLE of every religious denomination will watch with interest the experiment of a school for Christian laymen now being instituted at the Presbyterian Theological seminary, Auburn, N. Y. Classes for the opening are forming this week. The lay school at Auburn is to bear the official name "School of Religious Education of Auburn Theological Seminary." Prof. Edward P. St. John, a teacher and author of wide repute in the field of religious education, is to be head of the school and professor of religious education, according to an announcement by Dr. George B. Stewart, president of Auburn Theological seminary and acting stated clerk of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America.

There will be courses in Bible, Christian belief, church history, church and Sunday school organization, educational psychology, religious pedagogy, story telling, child study, play and games, physical education, sociology, missions, young people's work, and church and Sunday school music.

"The equipment for the school," said Dr. Stewart, "is beautiful and adequate. The seminary is placing at the disposal of the lay students the two old private residences which it owns, formerly the homes of Dr. William H. Hubbard and Henry Lattimer. These are within the seminary quadrangle."

DR. ROWENA MORSE MANN
MATZENE PHOTO.

Dr. Rowena Morse Mann is the pastor of the Third Unitarian church at Kedzie avenue and West Monroe street and has the distinction of being not only the first woman to earn a doctorate in philosophy at the University of Jena, Germany, but also the first woman pastor in Chicago and the middle west.

A recent honor conferred upon Dr. Mann was the invitation to preach from the pulpit of the Harvard Divinity school, the first time that a woman has been thus honored since John Harvard in 1636 established the school.

Dr. Mann has been the pastor of the Third Unitarian church for the last ten years, coming to Chicago from the Simmons church, Kenosha, Wis. She is well known in Chicago woman's club, literary, and art circles. Last spring she was invited to speak in Boston, Worcester, and Springfield, Mass., and in New York City upon "The League of Nations" under the auspices of the Pro-League Independents.

The Rev. W. B. Norton, D. D., will speak this morning at 11 o'clock in the Drexel Park Presbyterian church at 64th street and Marshfield avenue and this evening at 7 o'clock in the Morgan Park Methodist Episcopal church, at Longwood and Arlington avenues, on "Some Experiences in a Two Years' Trip Around the World." The Rev. Dr. Norton returned from his foreign tour on Aug. 18 after having visited the principal countries of the orient and Europe.

"Mystery and Reason in Religion" will be the subject of the Rev. Dr. W. R. Wedderspoon this morning at 11 o'clock at St. James Methodist Episcopal church, 46th street and Ellis avenue.

The proceeds of the various activities of household 251, Order of Martha, in St. Francis Xavier's Roman Catholic church, Wilmette, will be used for the furtherance of the missionary labors of the Rev. Father Lannon, formerly assistant pastor of the church and now associated with the Rt. Rev. Emmanuel B. Ledvina, D. D., bishop of Corpus Christi, Tex.

The thirty-sixth national convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew will be held this week from Wednesday to Sunday in Norfolk, Va. Many senior and junior delegates from the Chicago local assembly will leave this evening for the meeting.

"The Chicago of the Future" will be the theme tonight of the meeting at the Sunday Evening club, the date of the fiftieth anniversary of the Chicago fire.

The Disciples of Christ of the metropolitan area of Chicago will hold a convention in the Memorial Church of Christ, Oakwood boulevard near Cottage Grove avenue, tomorrow afternoon and evening and all day Tuesday. The convention program has been arranged jointly by the Chicago Christian Missionary society and the Chicago Women's Missionary union.

Kansas on the Job

[Skeleton of diplodocus dug up in Kansas.—News item.]

By Guy Lee.

In Kansas, famous Kansas land, where strange things often come to pass;
Where Carrie Nation's hatchet waved and John J. Ingalls sang of grass;
Where folks have run the gamut of most every kind of fad and fuss
They've sloshed around until at last they've dug up the diplodocus.

In Kansas, bleeding Kansas land, where long haired Pops were known of old;
Where Mary Yellin Lease uprose and shrilly piped her doctrines bold;
Where Sockless Jerry Simpson spoofed conventions (he should give a cuss),
They've capped the climax, so to speak, and dug up the diplodocus.

O, Kansas, dear old Kansas land, I left you very long ago,
But I can't get you off my mind—you will not ever have it so;
You're always putting over stunts remarkable and strange to us—
So I was not surprised to hear you dug up the diplodocus.

For Kansas, fertile Kansas land, though you are going good, I'll bet
If you dig deeper you will make discoveries much greater yet;
You don't admit of any doubt, that you are Eden, if not plus;
So press the search for Adam's bones 'neath those of the diplodocus!

HYDRO-TORON

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles Against Stone-bruise, Rim-cut, Blow-out

Proved By Service

Thousands of tire buyers know that the Internal Hydraulic Expansion process and the Toron (no-rot) chemical process of treating fabric are putting into Hydro-Toron a definite, dependable value that shows in greater mileage.

The extraordinary guarantee of 10,000 miles against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out has brought phenomenal sales.

But, better than this, the service rendered by Hydro-Toron tires has made friends of this vast army of purchasers and users.

Such a fearless guarantee is unusual in the tire business. And the performance of these tires is as wonderful as the guarantee.

The Internal Hydraulic Expansion process prevents those hidden defects that show later in ordinary tires in stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out.

The Toron process gives the fabric greater tensile strength, greater holding power, increased affinity for rubber, positive resistance against water and weather damage.

Hydro-Toron tires are oversize—as big as cord tires.

Yet all these extra values carry no penalty in the form of extra cost, because you pay just about the same for Hydro-Toron tires that you would for the average standard fabric tire.

Ask for Hydro-Toron when you buy your next tires. The following reliable dealers sell them.

AN OFFICER OF THE UNITED STATES army a little over a year ago bought a Kranich & Bach grand piano player. He paid at that time $2,300 for it. Likewise bought between $250 and $300 worth of records. This officer has now been transferred to the coast and has asked me to try to dispose of the outfit for him. It has had excellent care and seems to me as good as a new piano. I have the officer's authority to sell it for the best price obtainable, either for cash or monthly payments to responsible party. Piano is downtown in one of the piano houses. If interested you can arrange with me to see it at any time. S. D. BRILL, care Gallant Mercantile Co., 508 S. Wabash-av.

CREMIN & O'CONNOR,

FOR SALE—MR. NEWLYWED: FOR YEARS I tried to visualize a cottage just large enough for my wife and self, with green blinds, screened porch and windows, a lot 60x125, a shed in rear, and a shed for chickens, and plenty of room for vegetables; in 1917 this conception became a reality, and certainly I have enjoyed it immensely. When I open my gate after a day's work I feel like a "monarch" of all I survey, because the place is all fenced in. To my mind it is the nicest little place around Chicago. I keenly regret that I must sell it. I am going to sell for much less than you can buy anything on the North Side. $4,250; $2,000 cash, balance same as rent, for QUICK sale. Would you consider buying such a place? and save commission, too. Call only after 2 p. m. Owner, 3006 Chase-av., near Sacramento.

California.

FOR SALE—THE OWNERS OF THE JAMES ranch in San Joaquin valley, California, are offering to the successful farmer the opportunity to inspect the famous San Joaquin valley, in Fresno county, conceded to be the most fertile and wealth producing region in the world, where prosperity is assured, where every acre of land will yield a big return on the initial investment, and where health and wealth are gained year by year.

The owners of the James ranch spent millions of dollars for improvement in irrigation, drainage, sewerage, electric lights, schools, playgrounds, roads, telephone system, and also have a gas well ready for installation for the production of natural gas.

The ranch is divided for settlement from 40 acres to a section, and it is the most restricted colony in San Joaquin.

If you are looking for the best agricultural proposition ever offered, we invite you to come at our expense from Chicago to San Joaquin and return, to convince yourself as to the merits of our proposition. This trip includes railroad fare, berth, meals, and sight seeing pleasure trips for those who are interested in purchasing this land. The purchase money, with 6% added, will be returned to those who cannot make good on our land.

We are offering this land for $250 an acre, just one-fourth what the adjoining improved land sells for.

If you wish to make this trip, send in your reservation at once and we will mail you full particulars of the crops, irrigation, soil, and climate; also the date of the next trip.

Eastern Representative, JAMES RANCH, Suite 1103 Rector Bldg., 79 W. Monroe-st., Chicago, Ill.

Florida.

Come to Florida
with Me!

I am a successful Chicago manufacturer and have been interested with a number of friends in the growing of Florida fancy fruits for many years and can prove that very large profits are being made by growers in the Scenic Highlands of Polk County.

Here we have hills 300 feet above the sea, beautiful clear lakes filled with sporty bass. No freezes have ever damaged our fruit. Hesperides, the name of our community, is directly on the railroad and the Florida automobile highway. Schools and churches close by. Two hours to Tampa.

If you are interested in a sound business proposition whereby you can have a grove developed by experienced men at small cost [all sums for development to be deposited in State Bank], I will invite you to be my guest at Hesperides clubhouse and will agree that your expenses, including railway tickets, meals, automobile trip, etc., will be limited to $75. Special inducements to those joining my party leaving before Nov. 15.

You will be interested in reading the facts outlining this square business proposition. It will come within the financial limitations of the self-made man of moderate means. Bank and character references exchanged. Write or telephone for full information.

Responsible real estate men with high grade clients will be interested also.

THE RESALE SHOP

3429 S. MICHIGAN-AV.
Will Save for Its Customers More than $5,000 During This Week on New Guaranteed
FUR COATS

Every customer of The Resale Shop during the week of October 10th to 16th will obtain a saving of from $25 to $200 per garment, depending on the amount of the purchase. If we sell the number of coats we expect to sell the total saving to our customers will amount to more than five thousand dollars.

This is a special purchase of an exceptionally fine lot of new coats. We bought the lot at an unusually low figure, and instead of making a larger profit for ourselves we are passing the saving on to you.

Look at the prices below and remember that these are all new, guaranteed garments:

SEAL COATS $95.00

¾ LENGTH, TRIMMED WITH MARTEN COLLARS AND CUFFS.

Jap Mink Coat	$100.00
Beautiful Seal Dolman, 45 inch length.	85.00
Hudson Sealine Coats, squirrel trimmed	75.00
Hudson Sealine Coats, self trimmed	50.00
Coney Coats	20.00
Genuine Hudson Seal Dolman, beaver trimmed	225.00
Genuine American Mink Coat	275.00
Genuine American Mink Capes	55.00
Beautiful American Mink Dolman, selected skins	750.00
Squirrel Coatees	35.00

Remember, our furs are all new. Made from best quality skins and GUARANTEED. We resell fur samples which are ALWAYS of the finest quality and workmanship.

There are just two things to consider when you buy a fur coat—one is what you get, the other is what you pay. The reason behind the Resale Shop's record breaking volume of business is the fact that its customers get the MOST and pay the LEAST.

We could easily make more money per coat and do a good business. We prefer to make less profit per coat and do a bigger business. We founded our store on this idea and our experience has proved that it pays. It pays us in giving us a record breaking business. It pays YOU by giving you the best values in Chicago.

THE STORE IS FULL OF WONDERFUL VALUES, BUT A LOT OF THEM WILL GO THE FIRST DAY. THE MORAL IS: GET HERE AS SOON AS YOU CAN.

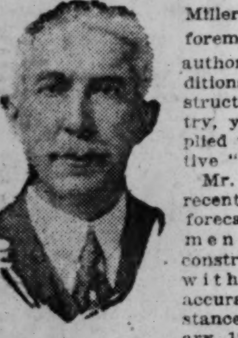
REAL ESTATE NEWS

NOW IS THE TIME, SAYS EXPERT TO HOME BUILDERS

Franklin T. Miller Warns of Price Advance.

If the buyer can secure his materials at a rate not more than 60 per cent above the pre-war level, I'm inclined to believe that he faces no unusual hazard in building now, assuming that labor restrictions in his locality are not unreasonable.—Franklin T. Miller.

BY AL CHASE.



FRANKLIN T. MILLER.
[Edmonston Photo.]

In reply to the question, "May the average home builder safely build now?" Franklin T. Miller, one of the foremost national authorities on conditions in the construction industry, yesterday replied with a positive "yes."'

Mr. Miller in recent years has forecast developments in the construction field with surprising accuracy. For instance, in January, 1919, as chief of the bureau of public works and construction developments in the United States department of labor, he urged builders to act quickly and get their buildings started, predicting a spectacular advance in construction costs which would reach such heights that building would be unprofitable. A year later these conditions materialized.

When the decline from the high price peak had begun, Mr. Miller, speaking before the National Housing conference of the chamber of commerce, declared the small home builder could afford to wait, for prices were going much lower. He was then an assistant to the Calder senate committee which was conducting a nation-wide investigation.

Three Factors to Consider.

"There are three important factors to consider in answering the query as to whether it is safe to build now or not," said Mr. Miller. "First, present and future rents; second, the present and future purchasing power of the dollar; third, the future trend of prices.

"Rents are high and will continue above the pre-war level for several years. The purchasing power of money is below the pre-war standard and will improve only as we reëstablish the pre-war ratio between money and credits on one hand and goods on the other. The general trend of prices for many years will be down and the rapidity of the decline will depend on how completely we approximate capacity and continuous production.

"For a long time it has been expected that there would be a halt in the downward reaction in prices and this now has occurred. It seems, therefore, that the time is approaching, if it is not already at hand, when people would be warranted in going ahead with building operations because building material prices have reached approximately the same level as general commodities and because a reaction upward is likely to develop. That this reaction is likely is suggested by the advances in southern pine and Douglas fir lumber quotations within the last ten days and the tendency of the steel market to strengthen a little.

Faces No Hazard.

"My reason for believing that if the buyer can secure his materials at a rate not more than 60 per cent above the pre-war level, he faces no unusual hazard in building now, are that this still is a buyer's market and the buyer can now select his labor from the present ample supply; he can get the materials in the quality and quantity he desires and can obtain adequate transportation service.

"General business condition are improving slowly. If unforeseen deterrent influences don't develop, the improvement will be advanced far enough by spring to be reflected in slightly higher material prices. An active demand for goods produced on current costs very likely will bring a rebound to a temporary and higher price level, until more continuous production in larger quantities enables the producer to reduce his production costs on new stocks."

$85,000 Paid for Rogers Park Two Flat Building

What is claimed is the highest grade two apartment house in Chicago, the building at 1050 Pratt boulevard, has been sold by Fred A. Poor, president of the M.-P. company, to N. L. Piotrowski, president of the Great Lakes Insurance company, for a reported $85,000, subject to $30,000. E. H. Young of W. K. Young & Bro. was the broker. Harry T. Hirsch of Hirsch, Wickwire & Co., built the structure. The lot fronts 167 feet on Pratt and 190 feet on the lake.

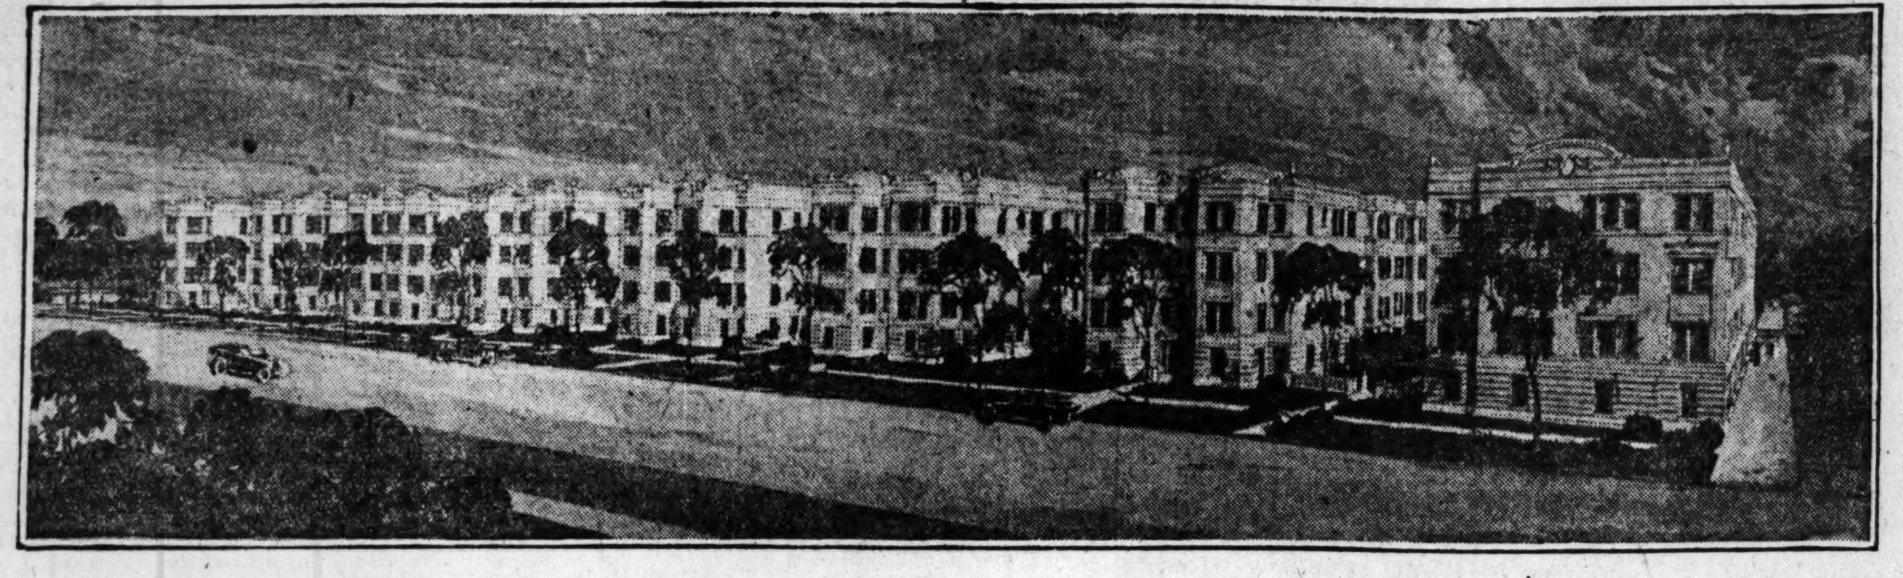
LANDING ANOTHER WALLOP ON OLD MAN HI RENT



Above is one of the largest local flat projects announced in a long time. Frank A. McNally and J. Edwin Quinn, architects and engineers, have designed the 250 apartments shown above, which will cost, it is reported, around $2,000,000. The site fronts 583 feet on Estes avenue, extending from Glenwood avenue nearly to Sheridan road. The buildings will be fireproof, something unusual for a three story flat structure. The architects will ask for bids tomorrow, and O. E. Gallup of William L. Wallen & Sons, owner of the site, is negotiating a $1,500,000 loan. Actual work is expected to start Oct. 15, with the hope of completion by April 15. Further details were given in this department on Oct. 1.

WHEN IN DOUBT, TELL THE TRUTH, SAYS MARK LEVY

Warns Embryo Realtors Not to Exaggerate.

Below is the second lecture, in part, delivered at the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce course in real estate by Mark Levy of Mark Levy & Bro., former president of the Cook County Real Estate Board, under whose auspices the realty lectures are given. Mr. Levy's subject was "Business Property and Business Property Leasing."

John A. Carroll of John A. Carroll & Bro. will lecture next Tuesday on "Promotion and Salesmanship." Excerpts from his talk will be given in this department next Sunday.

THE man who makes a success of an important venture never waits for the crowd. He strikes out for himself. Any one can fail. The public admires the man who has enough confidence in himself to take a chance. The man who tries to succeed must expect to be criticized. Nothing important was ever done but the greater number consulted previously doubted the possibility. Success is the accomplishment of that which most people think can't be done.—Mark Levy.

BY MARK LEVY.

MARK LEVY.
[Walinger Photo.]

From my observation and experience, not only in Chicago, but in other metropolitan cities and also cities of 25,000 or over, there are always a large number of anxious investors waiting for an opportunity to purchase choice business property on a reasonable basis. The larger business properties are closely held. In Chicago, for instance, our largest estates, such as Field's, Leiter's, McCormick's, Otis', Peck's, Palmer's, Mandel's, and many others invested their surplus funds from time to time in choice business property, which has increased in value by leaps and bounds.

The broker who handles this class of property can afford to specialize as the public has become educated, and quite properly, to the fact that the man who should know his business best is the one who concentrates on a particular branch of the profession, either in the class of property or in a limited territory, because he necessarily must be familiar with the property he is trying to sell and should know his business.

Gets Pleasure Out of the Business.

The broker who has established himself as being familiar with and active in the selling, leasing, and development of business properties, should have no difficulty in keeping busy at all times, whether the general business conditions are good or not, because there is always some one wanting to sell and some one who is in a position to buy. One who handles this class of property to any extent, receives a great deal of pleasure out of his business, and it is particularly interesting for the reason that he is dealing in most cases with business men on a business basis.

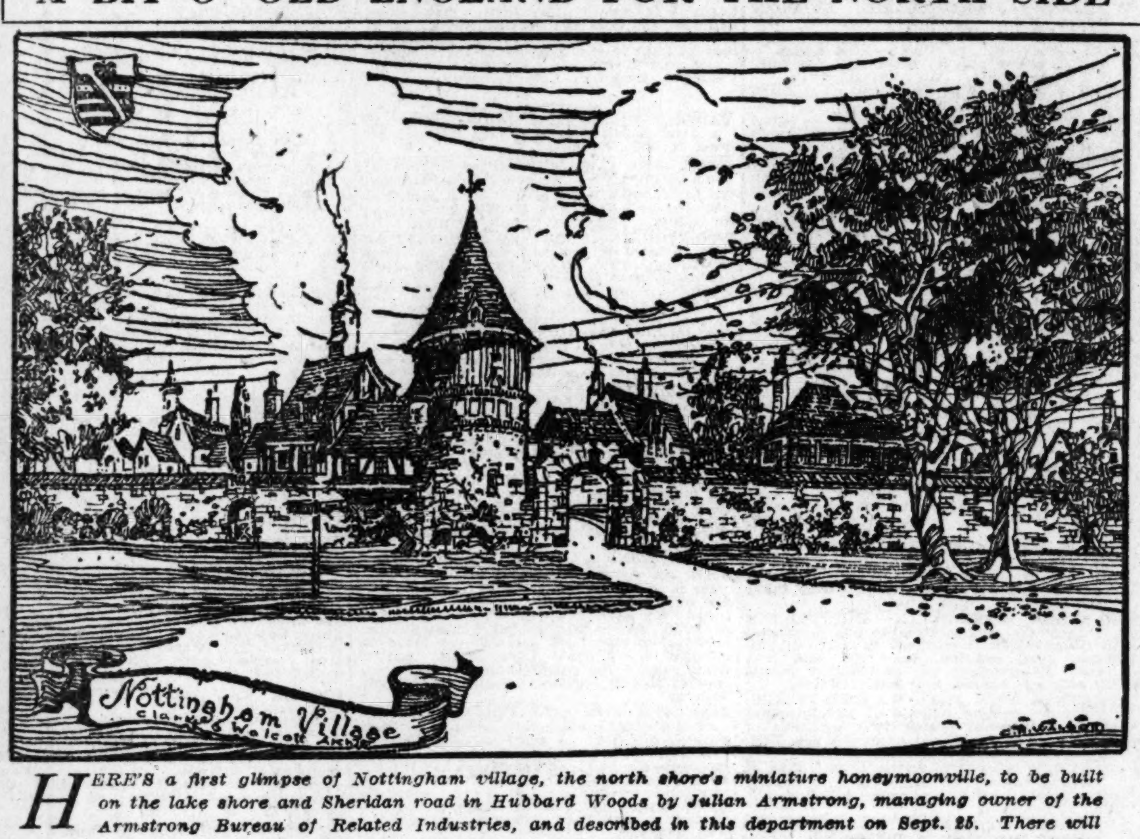
May I give some advice to any one contemplating going into the real estate business? These are a few of the principal points that help to spell success: When you get an opportunity to get a piece of business property for sale make every effort to get all the facts obtainable regarding it. Then personally go and inspect the property as well as the surrounding neighborhood. Investigate, omitting no detail, and check up the statements made to you either by the owner or the representative.

"Don't Exaggerate."

Investigate the rentals of similar properties and make comparisons. Know all about the property that is possible for you to know before offering it to any one. This makes it possible for you to create confidence in your prospective customer in what you are offering.

You must be cautious in not making one misstatement or misrepresentation knowingly or exaggerate your proposition, because your buyer, should he find it otherwise, will lose his confidence in you and naturally you'll lose your deal. It's advisable to underestimate your proposition rather than to overestimate it. First establish in your own mind that the property is a good investment, otherwise it's a good plan not to try to sell it. On the way you present your proposition oftentimes depends whether you make a sale or not, and I'm reminded of Mark Twain's advice, "when in doubt, tell the truth."

A BIT O' OLD ENGLAND FOR THE NORTH SIDE



HERE'S a first glimpse of Nottingham village, the north shore's miniature honeymoonville, to be built on the lake shore and Sheridan road in Hubbard Woods by Julian Armstrong, managing owner of the Armstrong Bureau of Related Industries, and described in this department on Sept. 25. There will be English type cottages of brick or stone, timbered and with thatched roofs, for fifteen newly wed couples. It will be a community affair so far as government goes and will be run like a first class club, with a board of governors and a president. Clark & Walcott are drawing plans for the tiny village.

BUYS EVANSTON BLOCK AS SITE FOR 40 FLATS

A block of two flat buildings, containing a total of forty apartments, is contemplated as a result of the purchase of the 666 feet of north frontage on Central street, Evanston, between Asbury and Jackson avenues, by H. R. Gentsch, engraver, 130 North State street, from A. B. Casey. This is the last large piece of unimproved property of the Col. Kidder holdings, which originally embraced all of the land between the L road and the Northwestern railroad, from Central street south to the canal. The brokers in the deal were McGuire & Orr. The selling price is understood to have been about $40 a foot. The property is 135 feet deep. Attorney Joseph J. Shaw represented the buyer.

Transfers for September Show Decrease in Values

Real estate transfers for September gained in number 837 over the same month last year, but decreased $2,721,883 in consideration, according to the monthly report of Joseph F. Haas, county recorder. Trust deeds and mortgages showed an increase both in number and consideration.

ASHLAND AVENUE LEASE.

A reported $48,000 rent will be paid by Samuel Fry to Meyer Lewis for the two story 25x100 building at 4746 South Ashland avenue, for a ten year term beginning May 1, 1922. The lessee will operate a women's ready to wear shop. Joseph O. Kaplan was broker.

News of the Architects

Clarence A. Burley, president of the Chicago Historical society, will talk on "Building Conditions Just Before and After the Big Fire" before the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, at its October meeting in the Art institute next Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. The lecture will be illustrated with slides.

Northward again swings the architectural pendulum. This time John Reed Fugard and George A. Knapp of Fugard & Knapp, who have been in the Steinway building, 64 East Van Buren street, announce their removal to 212 East Superior street. Their new phone number is Superior 1526.

Architect Walter E. Perry also has moved from the Steinway building to 212 East Superior street. His new phone also is Superior 1526.

Fannie May Shop to Move Out of Way of Cafeteria

When Fannie May makes way for the entrance to the new Wilson avenue Ontra cafeteria the candy shop now at 1004 Wilson avenue will be moved to a shop of the same size, 15x65, in the same building, at 1010 Wilson avenue. The lease runs for seven years at $6,000 annually, and the candy concern paid Norma Berger $6,500 cash for it.

BUILDING CONTRACTS BREAK RECORDS.

Building contracts awarded during September in the twenty-seven northeastern states, according to the F. W. Dodge company, amounted to $246,186,000. This is not only the largest monthly total that has been reached this year but it is also the largest September figure on record.

$600,000 FLAT BUILDING FOR ROGERS PARK

Rogers Park, scene of most of the good sized flat building operations of the year, is going to have another big apartment house project to cost an estimated $600,000 and to front an entire block.

A syndicate headed by I. B. Perlman, attorney, has bought the entire north frontage on Pratt boulevard between Clark street and Ashland avenue, aggregating 606 feet, from three owners at an average price of $175 a front foot. Architect David Saul Klafter has drawn plans for two large buildings to contain seventy-two apartments, fifty-five of which will have four rooms and the balance three. The exterior will be in the Italian style. Each court will be made into an attractive garden.

Michael Flicht & Co. represented all parties and will manage the apartments from their new office at 1401 Morse avenue, now under construction.

GREAT GRANDSON OF GALESBURG FOUNDER TO ADDRESS REALTORS

GEORGE C. GALE.
[Harrison Photo.]

The Chicago real estate board special will pull out of the La Salle station for Peoria next Thursday at 2 p. m., and according to Louis B. Beardslee, chairman of the state organization committee, it will have a record crowd of realtors for the state realty convention. In order to pick up other realtors the Rock Island train will stop at Englewood at 2:15, Joliet at 3:10, Ottawa at 4:13, and La Salle at 4:31. It will arrive in Peoria at 6:20, just in time for the realtors to get ready for the big get-together meeting at the Jefferson hotel headquarters at 7 o'clock.

One of the principal speakers on the convention program will be George C. Gale of Galesburg, who is scheduled to talk on "Illinois State Taxation" at 1:30 p. m. on Friday. He is a great grandson of the founder of Galesburg and of Knox college. He has been practicing law since 1897 and for several years was associated with O. W. Johnson with offices in the Rookery building. He is now a member of the firm of William, Lawrence, Green & Gale of Galesburg, said to be the oldest law firm in the state. He is a delegate to the constitutional convention, in which body he is chairman of the committee on revenue, taxation and finance.

An unusually large number of realtors' wives are expected to attend the big realty meet, according to present reservations there will be more than twice as many as went to the Rockford convention.

Realty Board Notes

Frederick Phillips has been appointed chairman of the banquet committee of the Chicago Real Estate board. The other members are John R. Magill and Arthur C. Lueder.

President L. M. Smith of the Chicago Real Estate board, has named a committee of five to formulate and carry out a plan of coöperation between the board and the Committee of Fifteen. Resolutions were adopted at the last monthly meeting calling on owners and agents to coöperate with the Committee of Fifteen in its efforts to dislodge undesirable tenants.
